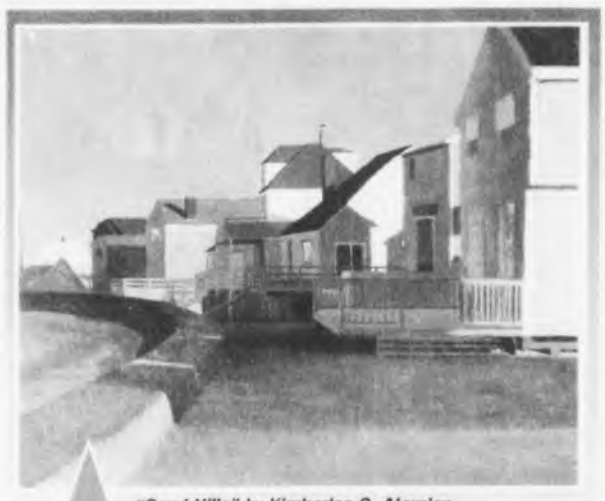
LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

GETTING AN EARFUL



If you are one of the millions of Americans who listens to music on a personal digital audio device, you could be getting more than you bargained for. These ubiquitous sound players, which send sound directly down the ear canal, pose the problem of being too good for your own good. According to a recent informal study by the House Ear Institute, researchers found that the new generation of digital audio players have such exceptional clarity that they allow listeners to hike the volume without the signal distortion that occurs with traditional analog audio. Without distortion, which acts as a sort of volume governor, listeners may expose themselves to unsafe levels of sound without realizing it.

Our primary mission at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER is to help as many people as possible improve their hearing. We hope to help the hearing impaired better enjoy the world around them through education, advanced technology, and friendly, compassionate service. With our knowledgeable, understanding of how the body's hearing mechanism works, and our deep commitment to knowing what is available today to help each individual's hearing loss, we welcome your visit to 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144

P.S. Personal digital audio players can deliver music to the eardrum at over 115 decibels, which, if listened to for more than 28 seconds per day, can cause permanent hearing damage.

Security upgrade eyed

Threats, vandalism push plan forward

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A bomb scare at Cohasset Middle High School Monday, coupled with incidents of vandalism and a threatening note left on school grounds in June, have prompted the school building committee to step up its efforts in purchasing more surveillance equipment.

Although the school is outfitted with four surveillance cameras in various locations outside the building, the images captured are not high quality, which makes identification more difficult. With additional cameras and a new digital recording package in place, security would be greatly improved.

"We have been looking at it for a while," said chairman of the school building committee Scott Collins regarding updating the school's surveillance equipment. "It's been in the pipeline for months."

However, the recent incidents have pushed the matter to the forefront.

"We're still in the process of working with security companies."
— Scott Collins, building committee

At roughly 1:30 a.m. Monday, Cohasset police responded to an alarm at the middle-high school to find a torn screen on the first floor in the middle school section of the building. Upon further investigation, police found a written message inside the school that indicated there might be a bomb in the building. A second note found outside the building had the same message.

Police chief James Hussey said Cohasset police, with the help of the Boston Police Bomb Squad, checked the school premises and found nothing suspicious which would suggest there was a bomb in the school. Parents were noti-

Getting the creative juices flowing

Women launch new endeavor

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There will be no shortage of after-school activities from now on. Along with programs offered by the schools and the town's Recreation Department, a new business called One Creative Place will provide hours of entertainment for children of all ages.

Cohasset resident Jennifer Piepenbrink, along with her business partner Allison Crowell of Scituate, have recently brought their dream of offering programming for children that combines fun with learning to life. The two will host an open house at One Creative Place, located in Jonathan Livingston Square at 130 King St., this Saturday, Oct. 1 from 9-11 a.m. and from 1-3 p.m.

From music to after school sports, to drama, art, science and nature, One Creative Place covers it all. Classes meet for six-week sessions and cost $100 each. There is ongoing enrollment for classes and the cost of the class will be pro-rated.

Piepenbrink and Crowell say starting One Creative Place is the perfect opportunity for them to use their backgrounds in education and be able to work with children, which they love. Piepenbrink has three children of her own, Daniel, 15, Callie, 11, and Cody, 10, and Crowell has a daughter Erin, 6.

Both Crowell and Piepenbrink have worked full time, with families at home, and understand what it means to have someplace for children to go when not in school. The two said they wanted to be able to provide a fun alternative to day care,

Some CTA claims disputed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Until last Thursday, the school committee had not taken a public position regarding contract negotiations with the Cohasset Teachers' Association. However, a leaflet passed out by CTA members during Back to School night Sept. 21 has prompted a response.

The leaflet, printed up by the Cohasset Teacher's Association, outlines the "good" and "bad" news Cohasset educators would like to share regarding ongoing contract negotiations with the school committee. Currently teachers are working without a contract.

The good news as reported by the CTA, is that the town has excellent schools, dedicated educators, and strong parental involvement as well as very high MCAS scores — in the top 15 percent state wide. However, the bad news reiterates the four points the CTA has been saying must be met in order to achieve a fair contract: competitive salaries, maintained professional development reimbursement, more preparation time, as well as equitable contracts for nurses who provide a very important function in the schools. The leaflet urged parents to contact members of the school committee and ask them to "settle a contract that allows our district to attract and retain highly qualified educators and nurses."

At the Sept. 22 school committee meeting, chairman Jamie Williams read a prepared statement on behalf of the committee outlining its position, which was included in a press release distributed the following day.

"As a school committee, we are proud of the excellence in our schools and our many highly qualified and dedicated teachers who have had a direct impact on the many successes of our children," Williams said. However, Williams stated the school department is currently in the throes of a fiscal crisis which only allows it to do so much

Last year's Pumpkin Patch featured a jack-o-lantern with a huge grin; the year before a giant spider's web was created. What will this year's Pumpkin Patch reveal? That's a closely guarded secret. But the pumpkins, some 10,000 of them, arrive next Friday (Oct. 7) and it's all for a good cause. For more see page 12.

Cultural council seeks input

The Cohasset Cultural Council, a program of the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, will hold a meeting on Monday, Oct. 3 at 7 p.m. at the Town Hall.

The Council seeks input from residents as its enters the 2006 grant cycle during which the Council will disburse at least $2,500 for cultural programming of benefit to residents.

The public input session is from 7-8 p.m. Diane Kennedy, a non-profit arts professional and former council member, will also offer tips for successful grant writing. Applications for 2006 funding from the Cohasset Cultural Council must be postmarked by Oct. 15. Applications, guidelines and information can be found online at www.mass-culture.org. For more, Council Chair Selene Eymer at 781-383-2761.

Schools eye high-tech surveillance equipment

fied of the incident early Monday morning via a Connect-ED telephone message, and after discussion with the school department, school was opened without delay.

"We thought school was very safe and we did not feel anyone was in any kind of danger on that day or any other day since then," said Hussey. Even feeling the building was safe, there was a police presence at the school until roughly 1:30 p.m. Monday.

"We collected a variety of evidence from the scene on Monday," said Hussey, adding the police department will review everything possible, including any surveillance video taken, that could help identify those responsible,

The school currently has cameras located at four of its entrances, which were running during this incident as well as a string of incidents which took place throughout the months of May and June.

On May 11, students were evacuated after a bullet and threatening note were found outside the school just before 6 a.m. Police were immediately called to the school and were still present as students began arriving to begin the day. A "lockdown" situation was instated for students.

On June 14, graffiti was discovered on walkways and on the athletic department golf cart. The messages left indicated the likely culprits were members of the class of 2005.

On June 28, the last day of school, vandals struck again, although this time, the damage was more significant. Windows were smashed and several exterior walls were painted with profanity and obscene illustrations. Shrubs were pulled up from the ground and strewn about by the entrance to the main office. The golf cart was targeted again, but this time it was turned upside down in front of the school's garage doors.

Video images from the second vandalism incident were sent off for enhancement, but Hussey said they did not provide enough clarity to be able to distinctly identify any individuals.

However, with the new surveillance system being looked into by the school building committee, clarity would no longer be an issue.

"We're still in the process of working with security companies," said Collins, the building committee chairman. He added a representative from one company has already made a visit to the school and said a high-quality digital recording system can be installed by expanding on what is now in place. The schools have four security cameras which are mounted near entrances. Collins said the plans are to install more cameras inside and outside the building, and upgrade the technology being used to record images.

"It would be a different kind of recording equipment, much more sophisticated," he said, adding it would be web-based, meaning the images captured would be instantly displayed on the Internet. Certain personnel from the school, police and fire departments would have access to the Web site and would be able to watch the video from wherever they might be at any time, day or night.

Cohasset Police Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Det. Garrett Hunt lift fingerprints Monday from the middle-high school entrance by the main office.

Computer system

Collins said the current system records video at the entrances, but the tapes must be rewound when they are through recording. The new system would record video onto a hard drive with much more technologically advanced capabilities. He said the computer would be able to detect when there is no motion and the footage during that time would be automatically deleted. However, when it does sense motion, the computer will automatically go back two minutes to ensure the footage prior to the motion is captured.

Collins said building committee member Tom Daley is the head of maintenance at Boston University which has a similar surveillance system to what Cohasset is looking into. The university has roughly 600 cameras in operation all over campus. Collins said Daley brought his laptop to a meeting and was able to access the video being recorded at the university and show committee members. If a similar system was installed in Cohasset, it would make it much easier to constantly monitor the grounds.

"It's really neat," Collins said, of the technology implemented in the system.

Collins said during the renovation of the middle-high school, a security system was put in place that did the job, but ensured the project would remain on budget. Now that the buildings are complete, he said there is some money left over that will allow the system to be updated by adding to it at no additional cost to the town.

Hussey said he has been in touch with the school department and is planning to set a meeting date to talk about the incident and what can be done moving forward. He said while he had not yet spoken to any members of the school building committee he would "whole-heartedly endorse anything we could do" to improve security and surveillance at the schools.

"I do know there is a lot of quality equipment available now" that allows highly visible images to be captured, Hussey said. He said much of the older equipment doesn't provide the kind of picture necessary, even with enhancement. "The ability to have up to date equipment would be awesome," he said.

Hussey said the investigation into the bomb threat at the middle-high school will be ongoing and said the police will need the help of the community to identify who is responsible for not only this, but the previous incidents which have taken place at the school.

"We believe there are people who've either seen behavior to indicate it or know who is responsible," said Hussey. He said the police department will be setting up an anonymous tip line for anyone to call with information, whether it be a parent, teacher, or student. "This is a community problem and it has a negative impact on all of us. That's why we need to work together to help identify all those responsible."

The Cohasset Police Department is providing an anonymous tip line as an alternative means by which individuals can relay valuable information in an anonymous manner. The department's goal in providing this service is to obtain information on criminal activity that is unattainable through conventional methods, and to assist the department in investigating criminal activity that might otherwise go unreported or unsolved.

Callers may reach the tip line by dialing (781) 383-1055 and entering extension number 1050 during the auto attendant message. The tip line is a voice mailbox that is answered only by the voice mail system and does not contain any additional features that would identify the caller such as caller ID.

The Cohasset police urge anyone with information regarding the bomb scare, vandalism, or threatening note incident to call the tip line.

School incidents are still under investigation

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Police Department is continuing to investigate both the threatening note left with a bullet outside the middle-high school and the two vandalism incidents which took place at the beginning of the summer.

Thursday, Sept. 22, prior to the latest bomb scare incident which took place at the school this Monday, Supt. Denise Walsh gave the school committee an update on the progress being made on the two previous cases, based on a report sent to the schools by Police Chief James Hussey.

"You reach a point where you say this is the end of the investigation and that's probably the point we're at now," said Walsh.

However, in an interview after the meeting, Hussey said the investigations into all three prior cases are open and will remain open. While many avenues have been explored, Hussey says there are still some tips to look into before any cases will be closed.

"We're actively working on them," Hussey said. "We have evidence that we're waiting for from the lab and there are some people we still want to talk to. We're still pursuing leads."

"We have evidence that we're waiting for from the lab and there are some people we still want to talk to. We're still pursuing leads."
Police Chief James Hussey

According to the report provided by Hussey, relating to the threatening note and bullet incident, a firearms search was conducted in Cohasset and the surrounding towns. The search was conducted because a bullet similar to the bullet found outside the school was discovered in a Cohasset neighborhood. Physical evidence from the note was sent to the lab for processing and several anonymous tips were pursued

The police department conducted witness and suspect interviews, and issued administrative subpoenas, which require those who receive them to disclose all information they have. There are also some pending handwriting analyses.

Concerning the vandalism incidents, fingerprints were recovered from the scene and processed. Witness interviews were also conducted. The surveillance video was processed by a digital enhancement company, although the clarity of the tapes has impeded a definitive identification. Administrative subpoenas were also requested.

An anonymous tip line has been instated at the police department. Callers may reach the tip line by dialing (781) 383-1055 and entering extension 1050 during the auto attendant message. The tip line is a voice mailbox that is answered only by the voice mail system and does not contain any additional features that would identify the caller such as caller ID.

School committee October meetings slated

The school committee has set its October meeting schedule. It will meet Thursday, Oct. 6, Tuesday, Oct. 11, and Thursday, Oct. 20.

The meeting on the 6th will cover transportation, including where to store the buses, and MCAS. The meeting will be conducted in the committee's new, informal discussion-based format.

The meeting on the 11th will be informal as well, and will cover cleaning and custodial services as well as technology. The meeting on the 20th will be a regular business meeting with a full agenda.

and the school department is experiencing tough financial times. Williams said in light of the situation, the school department is doing the best it can.

The CTA has four specific criteria it would like to see met in any new contract, which were outlined in its leaflet, including:

•Competitive salaries: Cohasset salaries do not compete with those in Hingham, Norwell, Scituate, Hanover and Duxbury. The school committee insists on a zero percent raise for this year.

•Professional development: Tuition reimbursement is critical for a teacher's professional development. The school committee proposes a cap on tuition reimbursement.

•Time: Teachers spend countless hours outside of school preparing lessons, grading, and writing recommendations. The CTA has proposed increasing instructional planning and collaboration time to maximize classroom learning. The school committee seeks to extend the school day for some teachers without increasing compensation.

• Nurses: The top salary for school nurses in Cohasset is less than $30,000 a year, the lowest of any town in the area. Nurses play a vital role in our schools and should be paid a fair, competitive salary. The school committee has not made nurses a reasonable offer.

However, Williams disputed the information the CTA has put forth.

"The override was voted down; we are unable to provide a COL (cost of living) increase for this year. We have however, proposed a restructuring of the teachers' salary schedule that provides even more than the 2.67 percent average increase that teachers would have received under the old salary schedule. This is in step increases alone. The Association claims that we have insisted on a zero percent raise for this year, yet under our restructured salary proposal, some teachers would receive more than a 7 percent increase and no one would take a cut in pay," she said.

Williams said in regards to providing fair raises and competitive salaries for Cohasset teachers, the Department of Education has reported the average teacher salaries for the towns of Hingham, Norwell, Scituate, Hanover and Duxbury are comparable to salaries in Cohasset.

"We ask you to check the DOE Web site to compare average salaries for fiscal 2004, which is the latest data released by the DOE. The average teacher's salary for these communities is $55,727 compared to $55,074 for Cohasset. Norwell's figure of $62,557 skews these results. Without Norwell, the average for the remaining 4 districts is $54,020 compared to Cohasset's average of $55,074," she said.

Williams said the restructured salary proposal not only provides substantial increases for newly hired teachers, but also those at the maximum step.

"We have attracted many excellent new teachers with our existing salary structure and our proposal to restructure the salary schedule will make it even more attractive for new hires," she said.

In addition, Williams said Cohasset pays a higher percentage of the premium for health insurance for its teachers than most of the other so-called comparative districts. "This makes the total compensation package even more favorable for Cohasset teachers," she said.

Health insurance

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said the town pays roughly 70 percent of the premium for family health insurance plans for teachers, and roughly 90 percent for individual plans. Buckley is also the town accountant for the town of Pembroke and said that town pays 75 percent for both family and individual plans for teachers. He said the town of Norwell pays 79 percent for both individual and family plans.

Treasurer/Collector for the town of Scituate Paul Donlan said if one of Scituate's teachers decides to opt for a family HMO service (Blue Cross/ Harvard Pilgrim) the split is 53 percent town, 47 percent employee. For an individual plan, the split is 73 percent town and 27 percent employee. All other insurance products are a 50-50 split between the town and the employee. Treasurer/Collector for the town of Duxbury Beth Conway said her town pays 75 percent of the premium for both family and individual plans for teachers.

Professional development

In terms of professional development, Williams said the committee has proposed what it feels is a reasonable cap on tuition reimbursement. "With the limited funds available, we need to know that our costs are within our budget. The way things work now, each teacher conceivably could take two three-credit courses every year, and the Committee would be required to pay not only for the courses but for related fees," she said.

Williams pointed out with the limited funds available, almost every school district in the state has some cap on tuition reimbursement. "Our proposal uses last year's actual total amount paid and provides for reasonable annual increases. This is in addition to a substantial amount we dedicate to professional development every year," she said.

Planning time

The CTA said it would like more planning time for elementary school teachers who are being required more and more to process paperwork and team up with other teachers. However, Williams said the only way to allow for additional time is to hire more employees, which would increase the costs of the school department. With the additional planning time, Williams said the instructional time for students would be decreased as well.

"The Committee has proposed increasing the school day for Deer Hill teachers by 20 minutes – 10 minutes before and 10 minutes after the students' school day. Deer Hill teachers would then have the same workday as Osgood teachers, which is fair and reasonable. This would enable students to enter the school and begin instruction at the start of the school day, which is 8:10 am. Currently, the Deer Hill students are waiting in their buses, in the vestibules, and in cars, not allowed to enter the building until 8:10. Instruction is then delayed until close to 8:30," she said.

Nurses

Williams said the school committee has already accepted the proposal made by the CTA to increase the salaries of the two certified nurses in the schools by almost 10 percent per year for the next three years, followed by placing them on the first step of the teachers' salary schedule depending on degree status.

"The CTA has misrepresented the facts when it says the committee has not made nurses a reasonable offer," Williams said.

Williams said since last November, the school committee has been going through an ongoing negotiation process with the CTA. She said when it became more than apparent no progress was being made "on these and other issues," the committee suggested a mediator be asked to intervene. The mediator met with members of the CTA Friday, Sept. 23 and the school committee Wednesday, Sept. 28.

Williams said despite the difference of opinion, the school committee will push forward with negotiations.

"We remain committed to negotiate a reasonable contract within our budgetary constraints. We are optimistic that, with the help of the mediator, we will be able to reach an agreement that is fair to our teachers and our constituents."

Average teacher salaries as reported by the state Department of Education

	Fiscal 2003	Fiscal 2004
Cohasset	$50,448	$55,074
Duxbury	$56,158	$57,121
Hanover	$53,158	$50,359
Hingham	$56,748	$56,610
Hull	$42,965	$45,663
Marshfield	$51,523	$53,299
Norwell	$55,341	$62,557
Pembroke	$58,637	$63,941
Scituate	$51,889	$51,990
Weymouth	$51,236	$52,536

* Average teacher salaries are derived from annual End of Year Pupil and Financial Report data submitted by school districts. Teachers are reported in full-time equivalents and include all professional teachers whose salaries are supported by the general operating budget. Averages may vary considerably from year to year, depending upon the length of teacher service, terms of contracts, and levels of staffing.

Fiscal 2003 was the last year that the Department published average teacher salaries using only general fund appropriations and staffing data. Beginning with fiscal 2004, average salaries were calculated using professional teachers and salaries from all funding sources, including general fund appropriations, federal and state grants, and revolving and special funds.

Cook discussion is slated for Oct. 4

The board of selectmen meets Tuesday, Oct. 4 and the Cook Estate is included on the agenda. A 30-day extension has been secured with the heirs of the estate, which means the town has another 30 days in which to work toward securing all pertinent permits before it must pass papers.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the Oct. 4 meeting is the last before the first extension runs out on Oct. 15. If the town would like to ask for another extension, bringing the closing date up to Nov. 15, the board of selectmen will have to take that vote during the Oct. 4 meeting.

Griffin said the town is able to extend the date of the purchase and sale agreement four times. If the town opts to take advantage of all four, it would need to close on the property Jan. 15, 2006. Each extension costs $20,000, which goes toward the purchase price of the land. If in the end the town cannot close on the property, all money put forward for extensions will be lost.

Budget wiggle room

Fiscal 05 funds to cover fiscal 06 SPED tuitions

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Things are looking up for the school department's fiscal situation, as it will be able to pay some of its fiscal 2006 bills in advance.

Supt. Denise Walsh said during the Sept. 22 school committee meeting, she will be able to pre-pay $190,652 in out-of-district special education tuitions for fiscal 2006 with money left over from fiscal 2005. The money to pay the tuition is in addition to $136,000 the school department did not use from a reserve fund transfer.

"It's something I've always done" in previous districts, said Walsh, adding new business manager David DeGennaro has pre-paid tuition charges in other districts as well. "It is something done routinely and this should bring us level," Walsh said.

The history of the school department budget over the last two years has been a rocky one. At the April 2004 Annual Town Meeting, the town passed a $400,000 operating budget override solely to benefit the school department's fiscal 2005 budget.

In addition, at the December 2004 Special Town Meeting, reserve fund transfers were approved which totaled $160,500 — $93,500 to cover school utility costs and $67,000 to cover school unemployment for fiscal 2005.

At the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, another $100,000 was transferred into the reserve fund to cover school department expenses, such as additional utilities costs, and an additional $100,000 was added directly to the school budget to cover any other fiscal 2005 costs which might present themselves as the future of the budget seemed bleak.

However, now that fiscal 2005 has come to a close, the school department was able to release the $100,000 transferred into the reserve fund as well as $36,000 of the reserve funds earmarked for unemployment costs. The $190,000 — which was not spent and is being used for out of district tuitions — is over and above the money from the reserve fund. Walsh said the $190,000 is the balance from all of fiscal 2005, including salaries from cutbacks and positions not filled during the year.

While typically, bills from one fiscal year cannot be paid with funds from another fiscal year, in an interview after the meeting Walsh said due to the nature of circuit breaker funding, the Department of Revenue does allow money from one year to be used in another. Circuit breaker funding is money the state provides to towns to help pay special education out-of-district tuition.

The amount a district receives in circuit breaker money is based on what it paid the previous fiscal year. In other words, Cohasset received $130,000 in circuit breaker funding for fiscal 2005, based on what its charges were for fiscal 2004.

To enable towns to use that money for previous years' bills, the DOR allows funding — whether it be circuit breaker funds or not — from one year to be applied to tuitions from another, which is why Walsh says the school is able to use its leftover funds to pre-pay this year's bills. However, Walsh said the school department is restricted to paying only the first quarter tuition payment. Walsh said the first quarter begins in September.

Walsh said because the tuition budget is very fluid — as throughout the year, the school department may receive more students who require out-of-district placement, or may lose students — by paying up-front, it helps give the department a head-start. "This is one budget for which we never have a bottom line," she said.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams commended Walsh for her foresight. "This shows a huge step in fiscal responsibility. Kudos to you for following a procedure that hasn't been done in the past," she said.

Walsh said the pre-payment means the school department is beginning the year off on the right foot. "We're in better shape than we have been," she said.

both during and after-school hours. In addition, there will be Saturday classes which adults can attend, to enable working parents to take part in activities with their children on the weekends.

Before joining up with Piepenbrink to begin One Creative Place, Crowell was teaching elementary school. However, when the opportunity surfaced at the end of the school year last year, Crowell decided to take a chance, and instead of returning to her classroom to teach this fall, she joined up with Piepenbrink for a new adventure.

"I can still teach because there will be a strong educational component," she said, but added her new surroundings will enable her to have much more flexibility. Teachers are often restricted in their lessons with the guidelines they must follow, so Crowell sees her role as being able to enhance what the children learn during the school day.

A big component of the classes will be movement and expression of the entire body. Crowell said in a traditional classroom, with a class of 25 students, it's not possible to get up and move around the room during lessons, but that is no problem at One Creative Place.

"We can offer so many ways to explore the ways kids learn," added Piepenbrink, explaining all the programs will support and enrich what children learn in school.

At One Creative Place there are two floors of fun with different areas for different activities. When children enter, they will have their own private cubby to put their shoes in.

From music to after school sports, to drama, art, science and nature, One Creative Place covers it all.

"This is a barefoot, slipper kind of place," said Crowell.

There is a messy area for any arts and crafts projects or science projects which might need some cleanup. There is also a puppet theater where children can role-play and act stories out. There will be a reading nook with a big, comfy chair where children can be read aloud to and a huge selection of books on the shelves.

"Upstairs is all handicapped accessible," said Crowell, but added even though the lower level is not, every class is open to everyone as they can be moved and modified to take place upstairs at ground level. In addition, Crowell said class sizes are going to be small enough that they will be able to handle children with special needs, and every activity offered is suitable for both boys and girls.

Downstairs, there is a theater play area which has curtains and wings for students to really feel like they're taking the stage. The space is large enough that students could put on a small show for friends and family, whether it be a play, or just a proud expression that they are able to say their ABC's in front of a crowd, Crowell said.

There will also be a music area where children can explore various instruments, including drums and rhythm sticks. There will be no formal instructional classes to allow children to be creative in their own musical way. There will also be large floor pillows downstairs to allow older children to have some time to relax and curl up with a good book.

When classes are not in session, One Creative Place can be rented out for a variety of activities including birthday parties, wedding or baby showers, book clubs, poker games, or even fund-raising activities. Piepenbrink said they are even happy to host ladies' nights out.

One Creative Place is partnering with the Cohasset Recreation Department to provide some of its classes, such as after-school sports, which means it also has access to recreation department space, such as the teen garage. Piepenbrink and Crowell said they would be more than willing to help coordinate activities catered to teens at the garage, such as dances or birthday parties.

One Creative Place is also partnering with the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell to provide science and nature programs, as well as music classes with Marshfield resident Denise Creedon.

Although there are many classes already in the works, Piepenbrink and Crowell say they are always happy to add more, depending on what parents and children would like to see. In addition, if members of the community have skills they would like to teach, that would help spark more offerings as well.

"We're many, many things in one. We're one creative place," said Piepenbrink.

For more information on One Creative Place, please visit its Web site at www.onecreativeplace.net or call (781) 383-2211. A list of programs and enrollment forms are available on the site

Helping with Katrina fundraiser

One Creative Place will be aiding a fund-raiser hosted by Ann Marie Goff of South Main Street and Maureen Harrold of Locust Road, Saturday, Oct. 1 from 7-11 p.m. at the American Legion Hall. The two women are planning a benefit to aid the victims of Hurricane Katrina from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Legion Hall, located off Summer Street. There will be plenty of food, drinks, and dancing, and tickets are a $25 donation, for which proceeds will go to the Red Cross.

One Creative Place will be selling both tickets to the event and raffle tickets for items to be given out at the Legion during their open house from 9-11 a.m. and 1-3 p.m. at 130 King St., in Jonathan Livingston Square. For those who are unable to attend, but would still like to make a donation, an account has been set up at the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank.

Contributions to the fund may also be sent to the Katrina Relief Fund, General Delivery, Cohasset, MA 02025. For tickets, information, or to donate raffle items, please call Goff at 383-2684, Harrold at 383-0782, or Jennifer Piepenbrink at One Creative Place at 383-2211.

Help create Pockets of Hope

An emotional appeal for help from Prof. Stuart Baron, Director of the School of Art at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, inspired artists, students and members of the South Shore Art Center to create a collaborative community art project dedicated to raising funds that will deliver art supplies to the evacuees who are being housed and educated in the city of Baton Rouge.

The pockets will then become part of the quilt, and participants are invited to fill the pockets with contributions and personal messages.

On Wednesday, Oct. 12 from, 3:30-5:30, everyone in the community is invited to join quilters at the Art Center and work on personalizing a pocket to be added to the community quilt. Participants can make their mark in a number of ways. Contributors can bring a 12"X12" swatch of favorite fabric or clip a pocket from a piece of clothing or choose from the pockets that will be on hand at the Art Center. A varied array of pockets will be available as well as materials for decoration. The pockets will then become part of the quilt, and participants are invited to fill the pockets with contributions and personal messages.

For more information about the exhibition and the Pockets of Hope project call 781-383-2787 or email mckenney@ssac.org

South Shore ARC wine tasting fundraiser

The ARC of the South Shore will host an Art from the Heart art show and wine tasting Saturday, Oct. 15 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, to benefit its program services for children and adults with disabilities. Tickets are $50 per person. Corporate sponsorships are also available. All donations are tax-deductible. Prepare for high fuel costs

The Farmer's Almanac, highly respected for its weather predictions, tells us to dig out our shovels and prepare for a long, cold snowy winter. If you doubt the accuracy of the Almanac, a staple in America for 189 years, you do so at your peril. Over all those years, the Almanac claims an accuracy rate of 80 to 85 percent, although skeptics would have to ask whether an independent analysis of Almanac predictions would find that high a mark.

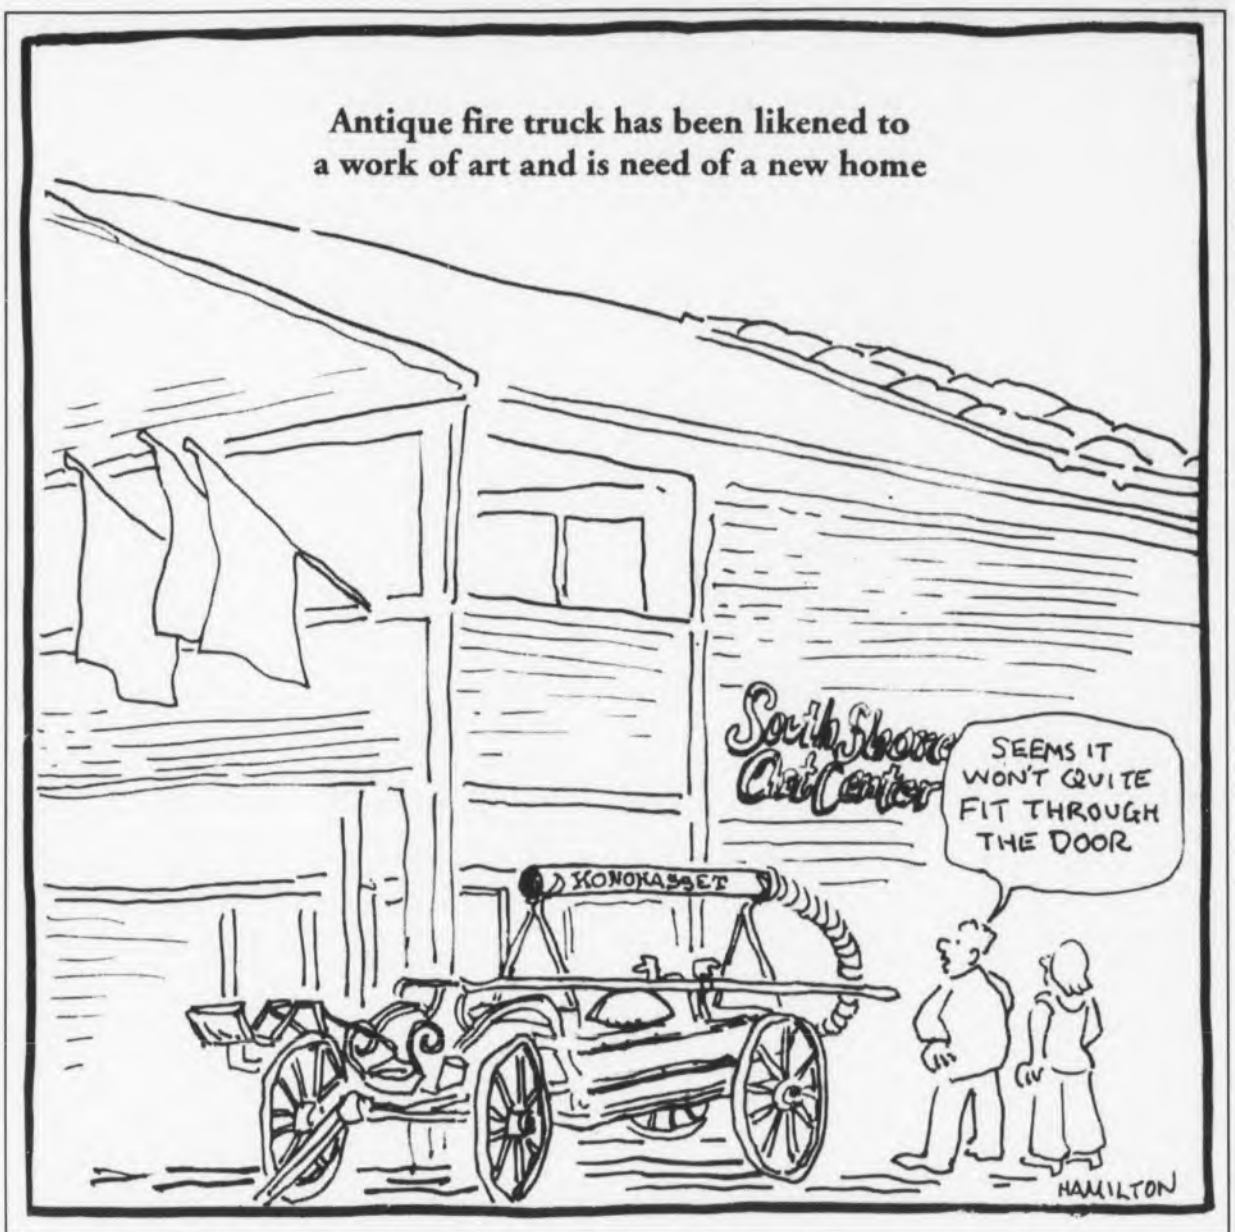
If the soothsayers are even close this year, those of us who live in New England are in for a bumpy ride — not because of the snow or the cold. Most of us are used to brutal wintry blows. The bumps will come in our budgets. Heating oil and natural gas companies say there will be historic increases in the cost to heat our homes. In the last six months we've seen the cost of filling our gas tanks double. Heating oil and natural gas come from the same source — oil wells and refineries scattered across the world, a portion of them in war-torn Iraq and our own hurricane-battered Gulf Coast.

Experts say the rising cost is due to supply and demand — we're demanding more than can be easily supplied. Others say the increasing costs aren't due to shortages, but fear on the part of investors that there will be a shortage. And others say our heavy reliance on oil is quickly depleting the world's supply and that the shortage is imminent.

U.S. Rep. Ed Markey says the Department of Energy estimates the per-household expenditure for fuel this winter will increase dramatically — 71 percent for natural gas, 17 percent for electricity, 31 percent for heating oil, and 40 percent for propane.

The reasons behind the increases won't matter to any of us as we look at our heating bills and wonder how in the world we're going to pay them. The average heating bill for those using oil will be $1,541 for the season, and significantly higher for those using gas which sold for $5.44 per British thermal unit (BTU) a year ago and is expected to reach $12 per unit this winter

Warnings over fuel supplies have gone unheeded by consumers in this country for years. Officials expect this winter will be the turning point. It's one thing to pay $50 to fill a gas tank, quite another to pay $500 for a month of heat.



There are steps each of us can take, however, to minimize the effect higher heating costs will have on our bottom line. The Massachusetts Division of Energy Resources offers these suggestions:

- If you can, lock in to a fixed-price contract.
- Arrange to pay heating bills over the full year rather than just the heating season.
- Insulate doors, windows and attic access points with weather-stripping or caulking. Keep fireplaces closed with tight-sealing dampers.
- Get the oil burner cleaned and the furnace tuned up.
- Make sure bathroom and kitchen damper vents close properly.
- Set thermostats low overnight and when no one is home. Programmable thermostats can automatically adjust temperatures to the homeowners schedule.
- Arrange for an energy audit, offered free of charge by some utilities.

If you think you qualify for fuel assistance through the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, call 1-800-632-8175 or visit www.winterheating.com. Lawmakers have asked that the 2006 Human Services and Education Appropriations Bill increase funding for the energy assistance program by $4 billion.

Predictions are dire on all fronts. Human nature is to hope for the best, but planning ahead prepares us for the worst.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not what we paid for

TO THE EDITOR:

For the $52 million-plus investment the residents of Cohasset were promised "state of the art" schools that would be clean and efficient.

In place of energy efficient green renovations, dual fuel heating systems, heat recovery, or motion switches all of which would conserve energy and save money for classroom use — we have monumental buildings with such complicated systems that we had to hire a special facilities manager who is spending his time changing filters instead of turning off lights.

We have discovered that the new security system was not a state-of-the-art digital, hard-drive system (digital has been available since the early 1990s) and now needs to be upgraded at further expense. Additionally our security cameras with their VHS tapes have not proved helpful in preventing or solving the current rash of break-ins and vandalism. This has been a constant problem at the school for the 25-plus years that I have lived in town.

At the beginning of the year the schools did not receive kudos for cleanliness but rather dust was found along with wet ceiling tiles and mold. The two latter conditions are a building deficiency rather than a cleaning problem and all the contract cleaners and custodial staffs in the world will not eliminate them without proper oversight and supervision.

We can't say that the professionals were not paid during the design phase — they received several millions from these three projects.

The taxpayers exhibited their concern for quality education by financing, at the instigation of the educators, elected officials and school parents, what was promised to be quality facilities.

In my opinion we have been shown again that just throwing large quantities of money at a problem does not bring a satisfactory solution.

Petition drive launched against LNG terminal

TO THE EDITOR:

The Brewster Archipelago, the jewel in the Harbor Islands crown, is not an industrial site. The concept that pristine Outer Brewster Island serve as an LNG offloading terminal is deeply offensive. This wilderness is not an empty wasteland, but a well-protected refuge teeming with flora and wildlife. National Parks and Recreation Areas serve all and defend timeless, precious places from private, short-term interests.

The notion that Outer Brewster Island be sacrificed to protect metropolitan Boston from a terrorist threat is ill-conceived and misleading. While not offering the security the proposal implies (rather, trading one endangered population for another), it also promises to thoroughly degrade a precious natural environment.

Would the Park Service or the Governor give serious consideration to a plan for the Statue of Liberty be used as an oil terminal or Yosemite to store nuclear waste? Would AES Inc., of Arlington Virginia, suggest that Monticello's lawn be used as a runway for quick response fighter jets to protect the nation's capitol?

The Hull Lifesaving Museum is mounting a petition campaign to express citizens' opposition to this proposed abuse of a local treasure. Those wishing to sign or distribute petitions can stop by the museum or email us at lifesavingmuseum@comcast.net.

Please raise your voice to protect the Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation area by signing on as citizens opposed to this insulting and inappropriate scheme.

Support for one-way along the coast

TO THE EDITOR:

I'd like to voice my support for Clark Brewer's proposal to make the Jerusalem Road-Atlantic Avenue stretch of Cohasset coastline one-way for 12 summer Sundays.

I feel this coastline is so beautiful and so precious that Cohasset needs to find ways of sharing it, ways to welcome others to experience it, and ever so gradually modify the notion that such a sacred part of Earth ought to be the private property of a handful of wealthy individuals. This principle has been recognized, among other places, at the Cape Cod National Seashore, much of which was private property in the past.

The way many people experience Cohasset's coast now is by driving cars along this route. One cannot really connect with what this seacoast has to offer while driving a car (spewing toxic greenhouse gases all the while). Walking and biking do allow people to connect with the Nature of the seacoast.

I've heard many people, including clergy, say they have their deepest spiritual experiences while in Nature. I envision an evolving practice of people coming to the Cohasset seacoast for such a spiritual experience.

'Birds of the Gulf' to be featured in Oct. 19 talk

In an illustrated presentation on Wednesday, Oct. 19, David Clapp, noted ornithologist and director of the Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Sanctuary in Marshfield, will inform his audience about the many varieties of birds that frequent the Gulf River — their seasonality and where they go when they're not with us.

Clapp's talk will be featured at the Gulf Association's Annual Meeting, which will be held at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Cohasset's Governmant Island, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The meeting is open to all interested persons, association members and non-members. Refreshments will be served.

Eric Oddleifson, Gulf Association president, will round out the program with a summary description of the Association's recent accomplishments and future plans. Also, members will vote on the association's board of directors for the coming year.

Pond/Spring street crossing next on list

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

If CBB, which is building the infrastructure for the train, doesn't remedy the culvert situation, there will be no skating on Ellms Meadow this winter.

The job of interfacing with the Greenbush project for the Town of Cohasset takes many twists and turns. The Greenbush project is very dynamic project. Since it is a design / build project the design is sometimes being done along with the construction. The net result is that things change very rapidly day to day. Sometimes they even change hour to hour. In spite of all of this, we'll continue to do our best to bring accurate information to you.

The Beechwood crossing is nearly complete. As of early this week, the railroad tracks are in place and only the curbing and paving needs to be completed. If the current schedule holds and the weather is OK, Beechwood should reopen on or about Monday, Oct.17. We have asked that the MBTA wait until Beechwood is finished before they start the next crossing. But, we'll just have to wait and see what happens.

The Pond Street / Spring Street crossing is next on the list. However, most of the early work will take place off of the present roadway, so there will be no road closure for quite a while. Since the new road will be configured over the area where a great deal of ledge now exists, the ledge must be removed first.

The process for removing ledge will be done by limited blasting which is done under rules controlled by the State Fire Marshall and Cohasset's Fire Chief. These are the steps that will be taken to perform the blasting.

Cashman Balfour Beatty (CBB), the MBTA's contractor will issue a blasting notice to their subcontractor. The blasting subcontractor will contact all residents within approximately 250 feet of the blasting giving them the option to have a preblasting survey done on their property. If the homeowner so desires, the blasting surveyor will take photographic pictures of their home that can be used by the homeowner as proof of the pre-blasting condition of their home. If the homeowner does not want to have a preblasting survey done it will be very difficult for them to prove damage in the unlikely event that damage is caused by the blasting. CBB will then issue a notice of blasting directly to the homeowners. The Cohasset Fire Chief will be asked to review the blasting plans and safety precautions. If all is OK, the Fire Chief will sign off and blasting can proceed. Blasting and ledge removal will proceed.

There is another project also underway in the Pond Street area that is being done by the Water Department, where the water main is being replaced. This is independent of the Greenbush project. To better coordinate this water construction, the MBTA's contractor will be putting the new pipes under the tracks for the Water Department while they are constructing the crossings.

While Pond / Spring work is underway, Lower King Street railroad crossing will also begin. (Lower King Street is the short section of King Street that connects the corner of North Main and Forest to Route 3A.). The first work in the King Street area will also not require an immediate road closure. Numerous Verizon phone cables along side King St. must be relocated before work can be done in the roadway. The time it will take to relocate these phone cables is a bit uncertain, depending what the contractors find. We'll keep you posted.

One good piece of information, at least for the present, is that when King Street is closed, North Main Street will remain open through Cohasset to Route 228 in Hingham. The traffic normally using Lower King Street will be able to use Sohier or North Main to Route 228 / 3A. The intersection of Sohier and Route 3A will become even more crowded than it is now. The added traffic on Sohier must also be very cognizant of the school traffic to and from the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools. When lower King Street does close we have asked for a traffic detail at Sohier Street, particularly at rush hour. As we all know, the Sohier Street / 3A intersection is very challenging due to the lack of a traffic light and that visibility from Sohier Street is very limited. We will continue to work with the MBTA on the traffic control issue.

Several weeks ago, we mentioned that it is possible that some homeowners on Smith Place may have deeded rights across the railroad right of way to Ripley Road from Smith Place. Since the Smith Place will be closed at the Greenbush tracks, it is obvious that owners with this right will no longer be able to exercise that right. Since we first published this dilemma we have heard that there are owners who have this situation. We are encouraging all property owners in the Smith Place area to check your property deed to see if this applies to your property. If so, please give us a call here at the Greenbush Office, 781-383-3094.

One last item that has been a bit troubling to us. Earlier this summer, the contractor, Cashman Balfour Beatty (CBB), replaced a culvert under the railroad right of way between Spring Street and the Pond St. / Spring St. intersection. This culvert is instrumental in draining Ellms Meadow, the site of our winter skating pond. When CBB replaced the present culvert, they missed the fact that there were actually two pipes in that location, a larger 30 in. pipe and a smaller 12 in. pipe. (see photo) The 12 in. pipe had been set into place lower than the 30 in. pipe by the Cohasset DPW Department after it was found that the larger pipe was too high to permit Ellms Meadow to drain sufficiently for its fall mowing. The mowing is necessary so that when the meadow is flooded in the early winter the ice will form clear of grass and weeds for skating.

So what's the deal? Well the MBTA admits that CBB missed the lower culvert and has filed a Notice of Deficiency with the contractor. But, the MBTA insists that they are powerless to get the culvert fixed before the skating season this year. We have been following this situation for about seven weeks with no answer from CBB. Perhaps a phone call to their outreach phone number (781-682-6350) might speed things up. If they don't fix it soon there will be no skating this winter. We thought you'd want to know.

Stories from flood-ravaged Louisiana

COMMENTARY

REV. JAN CARLSSON-BULL

There were the children — D'Juan and Devante, Bria and Jonathan, and Emmanuel.

There were the Moms and Dads and Grandparents — Eloise, Diane, Douglas and Monique, Karen, Cora, Carolyn. There were folks all by themselves — Percy and Franklyn and Patrick. Each name holds a face. Each face tells a story. I came home from a week in Shreveport, La. with a heart full of stories, so many stories swirling in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. I came home with so many questions about what was done and how and what wasn't done and why on behalf of our neighbors on the Gulf Coast. I came home with a sense of outrage, because it didn't have to be as bad as it was.

On Sept.12, I headed to Shreveport as a member of our Unitarian Universalist Trauma Response Ministry and as an extension of my ministry at First Parish Unitarian Universalist here in Cohasset. I went at the behest of my colleague there, Rev. Dr. Lyn Oglesby, the newly arrived minister at All Souls Unitarian Universalist in Shreveport. The church offices and entry were piled high with boxes of goods from as far away as our own state, all directed to the guest evacuees who found their way from the floodwaters of New Orleans to the shelter of Shreveport. This city of about 200,000 sits astride the Red River just across the Texas border in the northwest part of the state. It received about 4,000 guest evacuees, not quite the numbers pouring into Baton Rouge or Houston but surely enough to warrant three immense shelters in those first few weeks.

As folks found temporary living quarters in local hotels and apartments, and a civil level of privacy, the remaining guest evacuees were consolidated under the expansive dome of the Hirsch Center Coliseum amid the local fair grounds. Under the banner of Red Cross pastoral care, I spent time simply being with many of the children and families and solo folk whose names are faces are questions. Where are they now? Did Eloise make it to Washington State?

Are Douglas and Monique and their boys in Florida? Is Franklyn en route to Honduras?

During my time there, the stories poured forth:

"We were stuck in the attic for three days; finally my grandson bashed a hole though the roof, and we were finally picked up by a helicopter and here we are."

"I got out on a school bus, with my little boy here, and our neighbors' children, since they were at our house that day and there was no time for them to make it home. Their Mom and Dad were terrified that they were lost, but we met again here; they're together here."

In Cohasset, this community of abundant beauty and considerable privilege, there is much that we can do. There are voices to raise, editorials to be written, congressional leaders to be alerted, and surely a proposal of a longtime U.S. senator to be supported.

"I worked on one of the boats serving the oil rigs off shore. My wife and children are visiting family in Honduras. I just want to be with them."

So many recounted rescues that were unofficial. You've read the reports.

FEMA was beyond slow and downright obstructive when challenged. Strangers with boats, neighbors who co-opted boats, anyone who could get a bus, often a school bus, became heroes bringing so many to safety who otherwise would have perished, and too many did perish, far too many.

I listened to the stories and the questions and the anger and the anxiety. I prayed with people. And I extended to at least 10 children the gifts of Linus blankets, crafted by women and youth at First Parish, blankets placed into my arms as I headed for Logan and Shreveport the morning of the 12th.

"Take as many as you can for the children of Hurricane Katrina," I was told.

Inspired by that needy little boy from Charles Schulz's comic strip Peanuts, First Parish has participated for over a year in the national Linus Project, crafting more than 200 blankets for other needy children in hospitals, in circumstances of family loss, and now in the not-so-homelike shelters in the aftermath of a hurricane. It was so wonderful to have in hand those connecting fabrics of comforting softness.

Lyn (Rev. Dr. Oglesby) and I wore our psychologist hats along with our clerical hats as we met with psychologists from Louisiana State University and strategized inter-agency collaboration. Why didn't the schools — flooded with new and traumatized children — and the churches and the housing authority and tenants councils and the Red Cross and FEMA speak with one another? Why was collaboration rarer than dry land in New Orleans? Why are agencies whose purpose is to provide rescue and relief so hard-nosed about turf? What will happen when so many of the guest evacuees run out of their FEMA and Red Cross disbursements, spilling out of the somewhat invisible hotel rooms and temporary apartments that they currently occupy? Why didn't our President and FEMA respond with empathy and rescue that was on the ground and immediate? How is it that neighbors with boats or buses were more forthcoming than vehicles that were promised and promised again to desperate New Orleanians in the poorest neighborhoods of that city so casually named "The Big Easy?"

I left hoping that I had made some positive difference, but knowing that this disaster and all the disasters of which we haven't an inkling will not be mitigated or managed without mindful, authentic, systemic, and proactive government engagement. While we contribute to the American Red Cross or the UUA-UUSC Gulf Coast Relief Fund or the Salvation Army or other agencies that do make a difference, I sometimes feel that we're putting our fingers in the dike.

The level of funding and follow-up so sorely needed calls for a wholesale turnaround at the federal level—rescinding the tax-cut for the wealthy, ending a war in which so many have died for promises rising from lie-ridden rhetoric, bringing home the National Guard whose purpose is to respond to domestic strife, and heeding the reality of global warming.

I was heartened by the marked resilience and grace of so many guest evacuees whose lives have been ravaged by a hurricane that was a natural disaster by half. In Cohasset, this community of abundant beauty and considerable privilege, there is much that we can do. There are voices to raise, editorials to be written, congressional leaders to be alerted, and surely a proposal of a longtime U.S. senator to be supported. Yes, Senator Ted Kennedy has proposed the creation of a Gulf Coast Redevelopment Authority that would bring together under one roof government and business and local grass-roots agencies to map a comprehensive plan for rebuilding communities and lives in that stricken part of our nation known as the Gulf Coast. It would be a huge first step.

It's doable. For me, it's a spiritual call — to ensure that we are ever more mindful of "the least of these our brethren," for our futures intertwine. We are all guests on this fragile planet whose soil and seas and winds are subject in part to how mindfully we pay attention. We will each leave a legacy of reverence or lack of it for this good earth and one another as we share, for better or worse, its sacred space.

The Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull is minister First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset.

Red Cross Blood Drive is scheduled for Oct. 5

The American Red Cross reminds residents of Cohasset that blood donations continue to be needed at this time to meet the needs of patients in hospitals throughout New England.

The American Red Cross is searching for new blood donors in light of the widespread blood shortages occurring across the country.

Blood donors in Cohasset will have the opportunity to help out when the Red Cross comes to St. Anthony Parish Center, 10 Summer St. on Wednesday, Oct. 5. The hours of the blood drive are from 1 to 7 p.m. and new donors are encouraged to participate.

"Experienced blood donors are encouraged to bring someone who has never given blood with them to this drive," said Joanne Newton of the Red Cross. "New people will be pleasantly surprised to discover just how easy it is to help save a life." All blood types are needed. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 5 p.m. Ample parking is available.

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. Anyone with questions is encouraged to call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, the Red Cross Blood Services at 1-800-GIVE-LIFE or visit www.newenglandblood.org.

Beating the oil shortage

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I'm sure you've heard the story.

There was this guy out in Buffalo or Detroit or someplace else who invented an engine that ran on water only to have the patent bought up by Standard Oil and Texaco and tucked away in a safe place or burned outright so that it wouldn't cut into their obscene profits.

The accumulated burps of 10 cows could keep a small house heated and its stove operating for a year.

I think I first heard the story back in the '30s, when Salisbury steak and Saratoga potatoes was a nourishing Sunday dinner, and I believed it although over the years I have come to think of it as just another urban legend. I'm not so sure about the obscene profits part though.

I bring this up at this time because I've been hearing my friends, those who drive sports utility vehicles particularly, speak nostalgically of paying less than $3 a gallon for gasoline. The last time I drove a car I think it was still under $1 a gallon and we were griping about that.

At the same time, I was reading that Exxon Mobil was on track to make more than $10 billion in the third quarter of 2005, a 43 per cent increase over the $7.6 billion they made in the second quarter, and probably the equal of the gross national product of half the African continent.

There's a lesson to be learned there but I can't for the life of me figure it out. So while we're waiting for the oil barons to open the safe and reveal to us at last the engine that runs on water, let us explore possible replacements for oil when the earth's supply is used up.

All the nations in the world used 84.5 billion barrels in 2004, up from 82.5 billion barrels in 2003 and 79 billion in 2002.

"It took us 125 years to use the first trillion barrels of oil," said the Chevron company in a recent advertisement. "We'll use the next trillion in 30 years."

What if, as some authorities maintain, there are only about 1 trillion barrels left in the ground?

Well, there's always the cows.

Researchers at the Texas Department of Highways recently discovered that nationally our bovine friends burp some 50 million tons of hydrocarbons into the air each year. The accumulated burps of 10 cows could keep a small house heated and its stove operating for a year.

Presumably, the researchers are working on harnessing the cow burps, if Exxon Mobil hasn't already bought up the patent.

And then there's "Chicken Doodle."

A company called "Captain Calculus and the Normal Street Mechanics Institute" published a booklet of that name detailing how to heat chicken (expletive deleted) in a special cauldron to produce methane gas to run your car. It sells for $1.25, although it's probably in Buck-a-Book by now.

And an English inventor named Harold Bate has come up with a procedure to convert pig (expletive deleted) into methane gas for your tank.

Hey, if they won't let us use the water . . .

Teachers' union talks about impasse

Cohasset Teacher's Association President Patricia McGrail and CTA Union member Ed Leonard spend a full hour with co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin discussing the ongoing efforts between the CTA and the School Committee to get a three-year teachers' contract in place in Cohasset.

With a full year of negotiations already completed and the school year recently beginning without a signed contract, viewers can gain a perspective on which issues are stalling negotiations and what the future may bring if an agreement is not reached.

This edition will air Monday (Oct. 3) at 9p.m., Tuesday at 9:30p.m. and Thursday at 8:30p.m., all on Comcast channel 10. Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!

What you need to know about compost, fertilizer and grass seed

COMMENTARY

SANDRA DURANT

This past hot, dry, yet humid summer was exhausting for our grass, garden plants, and trees let alone the life above and below ground, life that is essential to the health and nutrition of the very plants under and around which they live. We all watered as needed and, hopefully, most of us remembered to set our lawnmower blade height at 3 inches as taller grass crowds out weeds, shades its own roots, and better withstands drought conditions.

But I doubt many of us got out in that relentless heat to test our soil, choose and buy grass seed, and start planning how much compost we need to spread this fall on our lawns before we seed or even researched where to buy the best compost and the right seed. So let's revisit compost, fertilizer, and grass seed again before I list some excellent resources.

Most importantly, create a healthy environment and bring back the life: top dress and rake in an inch of balanced, nutritious compost each spring and fall. Use organic fertilizer that can be broken down and naturally fed to grass plants. Reintroduce Nematodes, microscopic worm-like animals that cause disease in insects, particularly white grubs, sod webworms, and chinch bugs. Add grass seed mixes in the fall (you don't have to start from scratch) that naturally crowd out unwanted weeds and don't need endless watering. To speed up the soil building process you may want to add microbial innoculants, "good" bacteria and fungi that support beneficial microbes and earthworms.

If you want to give your lawn an extra boost of fertilizer in the spring and fall, choose a low nitrogen organic fertilizer with an NPK (nitrogen-phosphorous-potassium) ratio of approximately 3-1-2. Never use more than 1 pound per 1,000 square feet.

For a truly carefree lawn, plant a superior variety of hard fescue (Festuca longifolia) such as Nordic, Discovery, or Oxford, bred from grass plants that survive without pampering. It is recommended that you mix fescues with perennial rye grass (avoid annual rye grass) and Dutch white clover and some bluegrass seeds for superior vigor, insect and drought resistance. These mixtures are readily available. For the first few years, re-seed annually. Cost? Seeds of premium species and cultivars are worth the extra cost as bargain seed mixes are often adulterated with weed seed.

Now, a few words of caution. Compost is turning into a big and, as yet, unregulated business. Unfortunately, there are companies processing waste into compost without regard for what pathogens, microelements, and major elements might be carried into the material. Such compost can be full of the pathogen e.coli, contain too much nitrogen that helps pathogens increase rapidly, or have high levels of microelements like lead and cadmium. It is best to know where the compost came from and what's in it if at all possible.

Most importantly, create a healthy environment and bring back the life: top dress and rake in an inch of balanced, nutritious compost each spring and fall.

And remember, here in New England there is a lead zone around all older homes and buildings. Small pieces of paint containing lead land in the soil from deterioration and when old paint is scraped away. Never plant edible food within the 10-15 foot "lead zone" of a building. If you live in an older home and want herbs beside your doorstep, plant them in containers.

Now for some excellent resources:

Web sites

• The North and South River Watershed Association, NSRWA www.Greenscapes.org Their Greenscapes program has excellent information on creating beautiful low-maintenance lawns that protect our environment while saving you time and money. They also offer a free workshop series for citizens of Cohasset 781-659-8168

• Grass Roots Healthy Lawn Program www.ghlp.org This is an excellent web site that covers everything you need to know concisely and easily. It also has a great deal of information on children and pets, and their environmental exposure to chemicals. A must for parents.

• American Public Information on the Environment (American PIE) www.americanpie.com This site is a good educational resource on toxins in the environment and alternative solutions. They also have an environmental help line delivered in a neighbor to neighbor style. 800-320-2743

Books

• "Soil Biology Primer" by Elaine R. Ingham, et al. This book offers a good introduction with close-up photographs of fungi, amoebas, tiger beetles and other inhabitants of the soil. ($13 plus $5 shipping, www.swcs.org or 800-843-7645, Ext. 10).

Compost

• Greenleaf Composting, 179 Boylston Street, Jamaica Plain MA 02130, 617-522-4477. They will deliver or you can bring a bucket.

• The Vermont Composting Co. in Montpelier, makes organic compost from cow, horse, and hen manure, as well as from leaves, straw, dairy waste and other sources. Though primarily wholesale, it also sells to individuals at slightly higher prices. www.vermontcompost.com or 802-223-6049).

Soil tests

• The UMass Amherst Extension site has downloadable forms to submit your sample. Request the test which includes organic matter content @$13.00 per sample. It will tell you exactly what your soil needs‹and doesn't need‹to support a healthy lawn. http://www.umass.edu/plsoils/soiltest

• The Woods End Research Laboratory, Mount Vernon, Maine offers Solvita Soil Life Test Kit for gardeners interested in monitoring the microbial activity in their mulch, compost or soil. It is $75.00 for the 12-test kit; a trial kit with 2 tests is $15.00 www.woodsend.org 207-293-2457.

• Nematodes Gardens Alive sells nematodes for $17.95 for a package of 5 million www.gardensalive.com 513-354-1482. Nematodes go after borers, grubs, cutworms, flea larvae and other pests in the soil. Gardens Alive has an extensive selection of organic insect, weed, and disease control products.

Fertilizers

• Johnny's Selected seeds, in Winslow, ME, offers fertilizers made of fish emulsion and seaweed. Seacom-PGR is concentrated seaweed that provides micronutrients and hormones that stimulate growth and improve disease resistance. www.johnnyseeds.com or 800-879-2258.

• Village Greenery in Cohasset; Fitts Mill, Bloomin' Place and Kennedy's Country Gardens in Scituate; and Family Pet and Garden in Hanover carry such brands as Coast of Maine, Safe & Simple, and Cockadoodle Doo. Other labels to look for: California Organic Fertilizers, Earth-Gro, and North Country Organics

Grass seed

• Fitts Mill, Scituate, is a good local source for the seed discussed above. In addition, their pasture mix will produce excellent results and is a less complicated solution. The nice thing about Fitts Mill is that you can scoop just what you need from a bucket rather than buying a bag. If you tell them how much area you want to cover, they will tell you how much to buy.

• North Country Organics (NCO) manufactures and distributes natural fertilizers, soil amendments, grass seed mixes, and environmentally compatible pest controls. Visit www.norganics.com for information on their products and where they are sold locally.

• Northeast Organic Farming Association NOFA sponsors a bulk order of organic materials and supplies every January. Members order in sizes from 5 to 50 pounds. Regional pickup centers receive goods and participating members can pick up their orders on a pre-arranged date in mid-March. This is a great easy one-stop way to save money and get exactly what you need. Join NOFA/Mass. to take advantage of this benefit next year! Call 978-355-2853 to join or visit www.nofamass.org for more information.

Cohasset goes green — thinking and acting locally

WATER RESOURCES

JIM KINCH

Rachel Carson in her watershed book "Silent Spring" documented the impact of the overuse of chemical pesticides on the ecological web that sustains us. Many consider that book the tipping point in the ecological movement. Ms. Carson died of cancer before she could see the birth of the world-wide green movement in the late 60s.

That each of us votes for our fate with our purchases has become almost cliché in the past 40 years. It is a point of fact that American conceit still holds we can override natural systems with our technology to trump the reverence for nature voiced by Ms. Carson and her disciples. That is, until she slaps us with an epidemic or hurricane.

Here in Cohasset we see the fruits of our choices, we have invested prodigiously in protecting and enhancing our water supply and watershed. The town has spent millions to purchase land parcels and upgrade distribution and treatment systems. Our water commission has worked tirelessly to develop a full-time professional management system. A direct benefit is a reliable water supply the envy of other South Shore communities. But we have begun to take this supply for granted. And we have generally ignored the signs that limits exist.

Two years ago I attended a lecture given by Dr. Sandra Steingraber, a professor, award-winning author and speaker on the chemical causes of environmentally induced cancer. Her book "Living Downstream" is a journey through the dramatic and drastic impacts of modern industrial agriculture on the people and society of the Midwest and by extension, all of modern society. The price we pay is in our health and wellbeing. I recommend this personal compelling story, it brings statistics and isolated facts into stark personal context.

The motives behind Carson's and Steingraber's books are identical: to document the consequences of a chemical society in personal terms. The reader comes away shocked and hopefully charged to act – but how? Each of us has been touched by the faceless dread of cancer, a family member, a friend or associate. It has become too familiar. Cancer is the third cause of death in America. And yet we continue to demand the conveniences while we foot the bill for the growing costs of the epidemic.

Thinking locally means accepting responsibility in our everyday activity — the cost and desire for the manicured and unnaturally green landscape is becoming a symbol of our arrogance toward nature. The only way to achieve an unnaturally uniform green lawn is through the consistent and regular application of chemical fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides. Only a small percentage of the applied materials remain at the site to affect the desired impact, the large percentage runoff with the rain or seep into the water table to begin their journey to the local pond, lake and eventually, the sea. Continued expense and energy expended in this interminable process eventually destroys the resilient ecosystem and physico-chemical structure of the soil reducing the lawn to an addict unable to resist the inevitable invasions of resistant pests and requiring ever more chemical intervention.

Many common chemicals formerly praised as godsends have been damned by subsequent evidence only after widespread use (PCB's, DDT; chlorofluorocarbons and Vioxx are just a few major examples). Dr. Steingraber closes her book with a call to apply the "Precautionary Principle."

"When human activity raises threats of harm to human health or the environment, precautionary measures should be taken even if some cause and effect relationships have not been fully established. In this context, the proponent of an activity rather than the public should bear the burden of proof. Denial, despair and futility about our environmental situation are luxuries we can no longer afford. Science has shown us that we must begin to take action," Steingraber writes.

The effects of manmade chemicals on our lives and well being are well documented. Take a quick look at the precautions on the bag or bottle or watch while the professional applicator puts on his gloves and respirator, Tyvek suit and heavy boots and leaves those little signs cautioning you to keep pets (and kids) off the 'treated' lawn. It is well past time that we break our societal addiction to the uniformly green lawn, successful natural alternatives are readily available, all it takes is the desire to seek information. It is time to accept responsibility for our actions and move to more logical and sustainable ways of treating our local environment.

Man dies in shooting accident

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

Scituate police continue to investigate last Friday's shooting incident at Scituate Rod & Gun Club off Rte. 3A that took the life of a Cohasset man.

Long time fisherman and avid outdoorsman Mike Wilson, 62, was found dead at the club Friday afternoon at about 12:50 when police arrived.

"Someone had found a victim of a gunshot," said Scituate Police Chief Brian Stewart, who added that five police officers and members of the town's fire department were also at the scene. "We are still investigating."

Brigitte Norton-Middleton, spokesperson for the Plymouth County District Attorney's office, said state police detectives also responded to the shooting. The gunshot wound, located in his torso area was accidental, she said.

"He was calibrating his hunting rifle when it accidentally went off," she said. "No one else was involved."

Although, Stewart said details from the investigation of the self-inflicted death have yet to be determined. During the day of the incident, Wilson's body was taken to the medical examiner's office in Boston.

Stewart said he knows of no other accidents of this kind at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club .

"To my knowledge I know of no incident that has ever taken place there," he said of the club which was incorporated in 1929.

Ron Rice, president of the Scituate Rod & Gun Club, said Wilson would come in and out "on a regular basis" to the club.

As far as safety measures go, Rice said safety rules are posted throughout the club and all visitors must pass a required safety course on firearm use prior to becoming a member.

The incident was not tied to any broken regulations at the club, he said.

"It had nothing to do with anything unsafe," he said.

Wilson leaves behind his wife of 39 years, Sheila Wilson, a daughter Audrey McHay of Abington, and a son Paul Wilson of Brighton.

A life-long resident of Cohasset and a 45-year commercial lobsterman, Wilson was a boxing enthusiast, and outdoorsman who loved gardening, hunting and fishing.

Aquarion lifts voluntary water restrictions

Aquarion Water Company announced that effective Friday, Sept. 30, voluntary water restrictions will be lifted for its customers in Hingham, Hull and north Cohasset.

According to Aquarion senior vice president Larry Bingaman, the restrictions were effected Aug.4, due to higher than normal daily water demands and extended hot and dry weather conditions.

HEALTH NOTES

Examining harbor health to be comprehensive endeavor

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week, the Cohasset Harbor Health Committee had a plenary meeting in which representatives of several Town organizations were present, including the selectmen, the conservation commission, the board of health and several others. The meeting was an open forum in which was discussed numerous topics and issues relating to the harbor and Cohasset Cove.

As an onlooker from the board of health, it appeared that the main problems which were discussed included: beach closings and, in general, bacterial contamination of the harbor and surrounding waters; the effects of increasing amounts of fresh and stormwater into the estuaries leading to the harbor; mortality of lobster and other shellfish; as well as loss of beneficial flora (both seaweed and surface) around the harbor; and the unusual phenomenon of unusually rapid deterioration of moorings and other metallic structures in the water of the harbor and cove.

The board of health is officially concerned with the possible introduction of pathogens into Cohasset's water resources through bacterial pollution and we are diligent in attempting to find the sources of all such pollution. But we have an overall interest in other sources of pollution because of the long term and sometimes unknown human damage they can cause. Accordingly the meetings of the Cohasset Harbor Health Committee are monitored with considerable attention.

It is natural and appropriate for the question 'So what are you doing about it?' to be asked. And our answer was in general as follows: We have already talked about the three grant requests totaling about $90,000 we are requesting from Coastal Zone Management. There is a fair probability that we will receive at least one of these. We are monitoring more sites for bacterial pollution than the State requires, principally at sites where swimming is frequently observed.

Furthermore, and perhaps more important, is a growing recognition by many in Cohasset that stormwater must be managed and discussions are occurring at forums such as planning meetings and environmentally oriented committee groups about stormwater. The board of health has effective oversight of requests for new planned septic systems, although enforcement oversight is challenging. However, when a perceived public health is reported, it is always investigated and suitable action taken.

Regarding lobster mortality we concur with the HHC that an expert be consulted to come to Cohasset to review the situation and make recommendations.

Regarding lobster mortality we concur with the HHC that an expert be consulted to come to Cohasset to review the situation and make recommendations. Dr. Robert Bayer, Professor, Animal and Veterinary Sciences, Director, Lobster Institute University of Maine will be meeting with the HHC and the lobstermen and attending the scheduled Oct. 4 meeting. Further, I'm informed that the HHC will be inviting other experts to their meetings to discuss various aspects of harbor health.

About the deterioration of moorings etc., this phenomenon relates to a health concern about metals pervading the environment. A recent assessment of the harbor before dredging resulted in elimination from dredging of several locations because of the presence of excessive amounts of mercury. As for the moorings, there seem to be two types of corrosion.

According to anecdotal evidence from several sources, in some locations, the ground tackle seems to be corroding and leaving reddish brown residue. The metal is covered with rust. In other locations, far more frequent, the steel seems to be clean with veins occasionally observed in the silvery metal. This latter is associated with anodic attack. It is part of a process called electro cleaning used to clean metal in which the metal is introduced into a weak electrolyte and hooked up as the anode of a battery with the cathode of some nobler metal like copper.

According to some sources, the rapid corrosion became apparent after dredging. If these reports are correct, the condition of the harbor could be accounted for by two hypotheses: The first deals with a condition often seen in densely populated harbors. The bottom is covered with alternate layers of copper compounds deposited over the years by the large number of boats losing their mostly copper antifouling. This augmented by inflow from stormwater from boatyards which clean bottoms of many vessels in the fall. Fortunately in a healthy harbor, this layer of copper is covered, at least partially, by sediment from marine life and natural siltation. With dredging, the alternate layers of copper and silt could become disturbed and the entire harbor become a cathode with the water as an electrolyte and the chains as the anode simulating electrocleaning.

The second hypothesis deals with the sewer outfall. Boating citizens have repeatedly described that, under certain conditions, there exists a channel of water from the sewer outfall around Barron's point, by the yacht club and out the harbor. This is an intermittent situation depending on rainfall, tides, etc. For the most part tests have indicated that the outfall creates good mixing throughout the harbor. But in some situations it is possible to have cold clear fresh water from the outfall following a channel out of the harbor. Under some conditions, cold fresh water can be heavier than salt and thus, the channel would run along the bottom. Water from the outfall would have relatively high quantities of dissolved oxygen (DO) because of agitation at the water plant. This coupling of high DO with cold water could have an effect on mooring chains.

Both hypotheses need study and experimental verification by experts in the field. Hopefully some expert might become so interested in the problem that he would do the job pro bono. At the request of Karen Quigley, HHC chairman, on behalf of the HHC, the BoH has contacted Dr. Oscar Orringer formerly a principal metalurgist with the US Department of Transportation, Transportation Systems Center. Meetings are expected to be held in the near future to discuss the phenomena.

Pumpkin patch takes shape soon

Can you imagine doing an art project with 10,000 pumpkins? Every October that is exactly what Phil Lehr does when a giant semi-tractor trailer pulls into Wheelwright Park to deliver to the pumpkins to the ASP [Applachia Service Project] Pumpkin Patch.

Approximately 75 installers ranging in age from eight-to-80 pass the pumpkins off the truck and into waiting wheelbarrows. Pumpkin by pumpkin Lehr's secret design begins to emerge. Two years ago the pumpkin patch became a giant spider web, complete with a 12-ft. spider perched on hay bales in the center of the web. Last year it was a gigantic grinning jack-o-lantern. As people enjoyed a free hayride, they could see the giant pumpkin face as they emerged from the woods to return to the patch.

"It is a sight to behold," said aerial photographer Margot Cheel, "I fly over Little Harbor and the park and suddenly there is a giant orange jack-o-lantern grinning up at me. If ever there is a Kodak moment, this is it!"

Cheel flies over the patch every year to capture Lehr's latest design. For many families, the pumpkin patch is an annual tradition.

So, what is Lehr's design for this year? Countless adults and kids have asked him. "Oh, I've got an idea," he says with a Cheshire cat grin. It is always a secret until the day the pumpkins hit the ground. Oct. 7 the pumpkins arrive and starting on the eighth everyone is invited to visit. Lehr promises that all ages will appreciate this "interactive" design.

Beginning Oct. 8 through Halloween, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, the prolific pumpkin patch at Wheelwright Park off No. Main Street, better known as "The Patch," will again abound with pumpkins and all the trimmings. Sale proceeds benefit Cohasset Appalachia Service Project which will be making home repairs in impoverished areas of Kentucky this coming June, 2006.

LIBRARY CORNER

Knitting group – Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Historical Room. Open to all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring a knitting project and join like-minded friends. For more information call Mary Coughlin, 781 383-1348.

Artist exhibit – Award-winning Marshfield artist Maureen Brookfield's watercolors are on exhibit at the library through Oct. 30.

Independent film series – "The Middle of the World" at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Thursday, Oct. 20 at 7 p.m. Free admission and refreshments. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Sunday hours – In addition to its regular hours, the library is now open Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

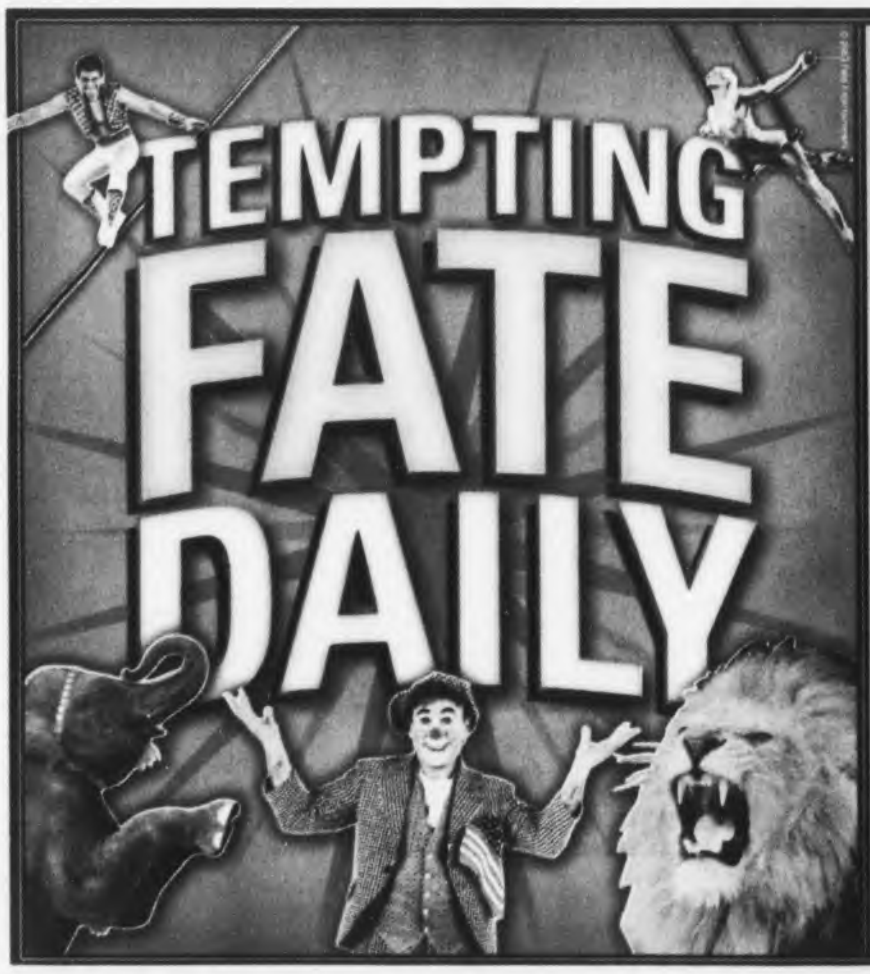
New titles – Newest editions to our collection are "Never have Your Dog Stuffed and Other Things I've Learned," by Alan Alda; "Tyrannosaur Canyon," by Douglas Preston; "Vita," by Melania Mazucco.

Homebound delivery service – The library is offering home delivery service for our users who are confined to their homes due to illness or disability. Volunteers from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit interested participants at their residence to discuss reading preferences and take requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to and picked up from residences and returned to the library on a regular schedule. Those interested or who know someone who could benefit from this service, call the library at 781-383-1348.

Computer Help – Reference librarian Gayle Walsh will provide one-on-one tutorials to library users needing help using the computers and would like to learn how to search the online catalog or reference databases. Call the library to schedule a session.

FOR CHILDREN

Backpacks – There are still plenty of backpacks awaiting their owners All students who registered for the summer reading program need to pick up their backpacks before Oct. 1.



Library Cards – September is National Library Card month. Library users must present their library card each time they use library computers or check out materials. The library will replace lost cards one time, free of charge. Additional replacement cards will cost $5. Take time now to locate or replace your card. School projects are beginning and library users will not be serviced without a card.

Lady Skippers handle Pirates

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Entering Monday with a 2-0 South Shore League record, the Cohasset girls soccer team faced off with school and league rival Hull.

As the game started, so did the rain. But that didn't stop these Skippers, as they cruised to a 4-0 win.

The girls jumped out to an early lead when freshman Torey Hart headed the ball in with an assist from Maggie McGoldrick. The scoring went on hold for a bit but Cohasset's defense didn't. Led by senior keeper Melissa Crowley-Buck, the Pirates had few chances to score and just couldn't capitalize.

When a Hull forward was on a breakaway and looked like she was about to score, Crowley-Buck came out of her net and displayed no fear, making a sliding save in the mud and then another right after to keep the Cohasset lead at 1-0 entering the half.

The second half began great for the girls when the Hull goalie had the ball bounce off her and into the net after junior defender Colleen Richardson kicked it off the crossbar after only three minutes of play in the second half. Only a few minutes later, freshman Kristin Monaco scored Cohasset's third goal of the game.

The scoring for Cohasset was heating up and the defense stayed strong. New goalie Shalea Daly got very little action in the second half, simply because the rest of the defense played so well. Senior captain Katie Bolger led this awesome defense against the Pirates to help shut them out. Bolger played phenomenal defense, stopping almost anything that came her way.

Cohasset's final goal came with 6:37 left in the game from senior captain Emilie Shea off a rebound. With only a couple minutes left in the game, Daly finally got some action in net. Though she had been standing there in the rain for a while, she was still loose enough to make some great saves.

The game ended shortly thereafter and, at the time, made the team 3-0 in their league and 3-1 for the season. Afterwards, Crowley-Buck said it was a big win because it was in awful weather and against a school rival.

Cohasset's Molly Trahon turns and boots in a goal in the first half of last Thursday's game against Harwich. The goal gave the Skippers a 2-1 lead, and they would go on to an impressive 7-1 victory.

Boys soccer tops Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The last week has been a weird one, to say the least, for CHS boys soccer.

The Skippers followed a 2-1 loss to South Shore League leading Harwich last Thursday with a rather shocking 3-1 loss to Abington Saturday morning.

Cohasset got back on the winning track Monday with a 7-1 victory over Hull, followed by Wednesday night's 3-1 win on the road against arch-rival Norwell. The Clippers are one of the league's best teams, making the win that much sweeter for Cohasset.

While he said after the Norwell game that he believes the situation has now changed, Cohasset head coach Rob Leary said his team has had a tendency to play to the level of their opponent early in the season.

"Our problem is we play well against good teams, but when we play a team we're better than, we play down," he said.

Playing down certainly was not an issue Wednesday night under the lights in Norwell. Two goals from Aidan Buick and one from Andrew Clark paced the Skippers' attack.

Chris Ofsthun also played a big role in the win. A midfielder by trade, Ofsthun played most of the second half in defense and helped shut down a strong Norwell offense.

Leary also praised the play off the bench of Tristram Norman and Lenny Brown. Norman set up Cohasset's second goal when he sent Buick into the box with a nice through ball, resulting in a foul and subsequent penalty kick for Buick, which he buried.

That goal came five minutes after Clark opened the scoring three minutes into the game off a throw-in from Buick. The Clippers made it 2-1 on a well-placed free kick from senior Scott Kitchen from 20 yards out.

Still in the first half, Buick made it 3-1 when he beat the Norwell defense down the left wing and beat the Clippers keeper in a one-on-one situation. It was the Cohasset senior's eighth goal in his last four games.

The score was 3-1 at the half, and that is how it would stay, as the defenses took over in the second half. The win - Cohasset's second in a row - improved the Skippers' record to 4-3 overall, 3-2 in the league.

Players, coaches gear up for Cohasset-Scituate battle

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It's been a while since Scituate and Cohasset have faced one another on the gridiron.

What could be a great, natural rivalry is getting a new beginning when the two programs square off tonight at Cohasset High School.

Sailors head coach Pete Saba said Tuesday his team is up for the showdown, and then some.

"They need no motivational speech this week," Saba said. "They're a little more fired up than usual."

In addition to the fact that the towns border one another, Scituate (2-1) and Cohasset (1-0-2) share a youth football program. Athletes on both sides will be lining up against friends and former teammates, making it a little more special, says Cohasset senior co-captain Nick Arment.

"I don't think there's a person on either team who doesn't know someone on the other side," he said. "It's nice to play a game where you know someone on the other side of the ball. It adds another element to the game."

The game became possible when one of Cohasset's originally scheduled opponents dropped the Skippers from their schedule, giving Cohasset and Scituate a mutual open date. Making it better for Cohasset, says head coach Tony Rolfe, is playing under the lights, something they have done just once in their first three games.

"We just like the fact that we're playing on a Friday night

'Moral victory' for field hockey

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Moral victory - not a term we hear too often in the world of high school sports.

Most fans believe a team walks off the field with either a win or a loss. End of story.

Cohasset field hockey coach Deb Bostwick begs to differ, and with good reason. Last week, the Skippers trekked down to Harwich to test their skills against the defending South Shore League champs.

As the Skippers arrived on the scene, the thunder clapped and the rains poured down like a script out of a horror movie. Yet, Bostwick saw some silver lining inside of those storm clouds.

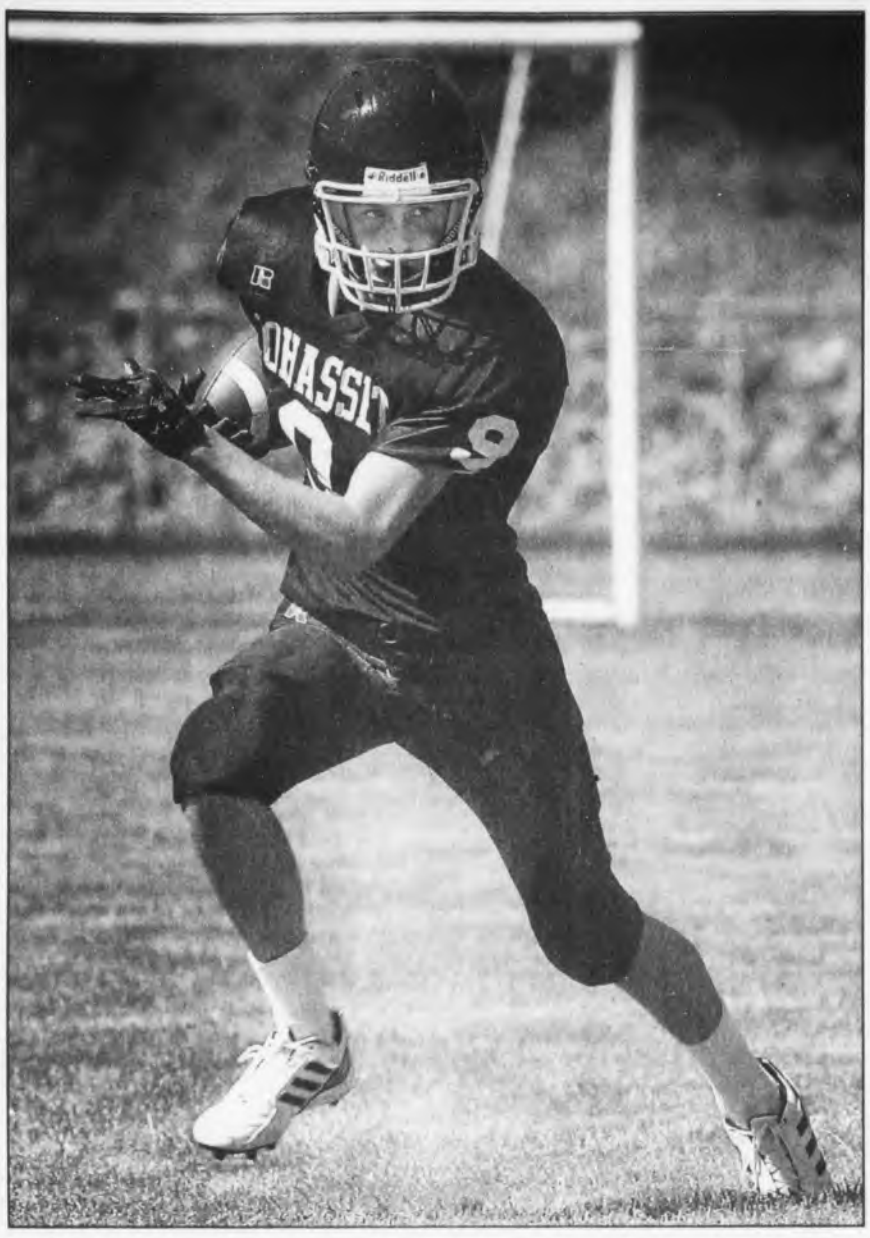
Yes, Cohasset lost 2-0. Compared to last year's 8-0 and 5-0 Harwich slaughters, though, she believes this season looks encouraging.

"Everyone played with skills, determination, teamwork, and heart-filled effort," said Bostwick. "The score doesn't begin to tell you how awesome we played. This was a moral victory."

The Cohasset column in the stat book didn't lack numbers either. Nine Cohasset offensive corners and 10 shots on goal certainly gave the Rough Riders a run for their money.

The Skippers' individual performances caught Harwich by surprise as well. The "outstanding" list would go on for pages. Bostwick mentioned nearly every starter and bench player on her team for their efforts.

So if Cohasset did so much right, why the loss? Twelve offensive corners and 21 shots for the Rough Riders should explain a lot. Add in the short and not so sweet mid-game letdown, and you end up with a 2-0 Harwich victory.



"We really showed Harwich we have some strong skills," said senior co-captain Remy Lee. "We communicated well and gelled as a team."

Unfortunately, the Skipper's "de-gelled" when they traveled to Mashpee last Thursday. Aside from the first 20 minutes of the game, Cohasset just couldn't get it together.

"Not our best game," remarked senior defender Vanessa Plante. "We need to work on capitalizing on the scoring opportunities we have."

Despite the disappointing 2-0 loss, Cohasset racked up some pretty impressive stats. Twelve offensive corners and 15 shots tried hard at times. Bostwick at home," Rolfe said. "Playing Scituate makes it even better."

Both teams will be looking to rebound from disappointing results in their last game. The Sailors traveled to Taunton last Friday night and came home with a 28-7 loss, their first of the year. Taunton is a Div. 1 program, so a loss is nothing to be ashamed about, and Saba said he was able to take some positives from the game.

"We're taking our first steps in building a program, and sometimes you have to take your lumps," he said. "I think my team handled it very well. They hung tough, especially in the second half. I was fairly pleased."

The Skippers, meanwhile, are coming off their second straight tie. They went to Brockton on Saturday to face Cardinal Spellman, and came away with a 14-14 draw. Their previous game against Archbishop Williams finished with the exact same score.

"We're getting a little tired of the ties," Rolfe said.

The Cohasset coach said he has been impressed with what he has seen from the Sailors' offense and its ability to mix the pass and run. Rolfe said his defense is preparing to be spread out and see a lot of Scituate's passing game.

On the other hand, Saba said Cohasset's discipline and well-rounded game are what jump out to him.

"Cohasset is very well-coached, disciplined team," Saba said. "They do a lot of things really well. They just play a very solid football game and don't make many mistakes."

Tonight at 7, the talking ends and the playing begins.

Buick scored four goals to lead the way. Clark, Emerson Oronte and Sam Roth each scored once. Center midfielder Brandon Smith played another strong game, as well.

"Brandon has been doing a good job controlling the tempo of the game," Leary said. "He has very good passing ability to set up our offense, and he's been playing 80 minutes a game. That's a lot to ask for a center midfielder."

The Skippers were up 5-0 at the half against Hull, allowing Leary to empty his bench in the second half and play 25 boys in the game.

Both wins were a good way for the team to bounce back from the disappointing Abington loss. Cohasset dominated most of the game; Leary estimates his team had about 20 shots on net in the first half alone.

Those shots resulted in only a 1-0 lead at the half, however, and three Green Wave goals - including two in the final five minutes - gave them the win.

"It's not that we didn't play well," Leary said. "We just kicked it at the goalie or over the net every time."

The Skippers have been focusing on finishing in their practices, and starting with the Hull game, it appears as though it is starting to pay off.

The team will hope that continues today when they travel to league foe Mashpee. Cohasset is not in action again until Thursday, when they host Abington in a rematch.

Two heads are better than one, except when you're going for a header, as Cohasset's Aidan Buick found out on this play during a game with Hanover. Opponents have had trouble lately keeping up with the senior striker, who has scored eight goals in the Skippers' last four games.

One of the team's three senior captains, Crowley-Buck said after the game she has an optimistic outlook for the rest of the season.

"I'm actually really positive and I think the team is really coming together," she said.

Cohasset 7, Harwich 1

Prior to the Hull win, the Skippers scored another strong league victory over the visiting Rough Riders of Harwich. McGoldrick and junior midfielder Kara Wilcox led the way with two goals each.

Head coach Deb Beal said earlier this week that Wilcox has been among the team's most impressive players so far this season.

"The confidence she has in her foot skills and her ability to distribute the ball is such an asset," Beal said. "She's a quiet kid, but her presence is definitely known out there."

The defense of Richardson, Bolger, Anna Haggerty and Sarah Coggins turned in another strong performance in front of Crowley-Buck and Daly, who again split the goalkeeping duties. Beal also praised the play of junior midfielders Caren Garber and Alyssa Hinman, junior defender Haley Haracz and sophomore forward Meg Anderson.

The coach said she is also starting to see her group of strikers work better and better together. With Shea, Hart, Christina Pinkus and Gabby Flibbotte, Beal knows she has four girls who can score at any given time.

Norwell 7, Cohasset 1

Things were a little different Wednesday, as the defending league champs held true to the form they have displayed all season.

The Skippers hung tight for a while, as a Shea goal early in the first half tied it up 1-1. The Clippers eventually ran away, however, and maintained their undefeated record. The only real disappointment Beal expressed afterward was that her team did not play the way they have in practices.

"They are so confident dribbling with their friends and teammates, but in a game situation they don't want to take on Norwell, even though they have the skills to do that," she said.

With that acknowledged, the coach said she was pleased with the effort her team put out on the field.

"Last year or two years, we would've bowed out of a game like this," Beal said. "We didn't give up in this one."

Another positive on the night was the Cohasset JVs, who defeated Norwell 3-1. The JVs are having a promising season so far, led by the play of Caitlin Mahoney, Melissa Castro, Rachel McMorris and Kayla Farren.

Beal is also excited about what her two new assistants - Rachel Cleaver and Ruairi McClean - have brought to the program.

"They just bring a newer, fresher approach. It's something different than old, worn out Beal," said the coach with a chuckle.

The Skippers (4-2 overall, 3-1 league) host Mashpee this afternoon at 4, travel to Holbrook on Wednesday (4 p.m. start) and face another big league test when they go on the road to face Abington on Thursday. Kickoff for that match is scheduled for 6:30.

SPORTS NOTES

Soccer Boosters pancake breakfast

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters will be holding their annual Pancake Breakfast on Sunday, Oct. 16 at the Deer Hill Elementary School from 8 a.m. to noon.

The breakfast is the group's major fundraiser for the year and the proceeds benefit the high school soccer program. The boosters provide the warm-up suits for the varsity teams and the scholarships for the graduating seniors.

The breakfast includes pancakes, sausages, bagels, donuts, juice, coffee and tea. The cost is $5 per person or $20 per family. The student-athletes will be selling tickets at various high school sporting events and youth soccer on Saturdays, or you can arrive on Sunday and purchase at the door. There will be a raffle drawing for all ticket purchasers that will be drawn at the breakfast; you need not be present to win.

The boys and girls teams will be there serving and greeting our visitors. There will also be a fundraising car wash that morning. Come join us for breakfast and have your car washed.

Travel basketball registration

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will conduct registration for grades 5-8 travel basketball teams for boys and girls on Saturday, Oct. 15, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for this program is $75 per player and checks should be payable to CBBC.

The intent for the 2005-06 season is to further develop the travel basketball program by expanding both the number of teams in each age group, coupled with a longer season. Coaches are needed and may sign up at registration for coaching slots.

In order to accomplish this, an earlier than usual registration is necessary. Registration details regarding grades 1 and up, Saturday Recreation Basketball program will be coming soon. The date of registering will be Saturday, Nov. 5, and at that time there will be a Multi-Sports program registration.

Details regarding the Nov. 5 registration will be available via local news media and coming home via school in the near future.

admitted, however, her team could have performed better.

"We felt disappointed," she said. "We played so well against the defending champs Harwich. Then we lost to Mashpee. I guess the match with Mashpee just wasn't our game."

"If we want to step it up and get some wins, we need to work on a few things," explained Lee. "Spacing on the field remains very important. Also, we need to protect the lead when we have it."

So there you have it. The Cohasset players face a key point in their field hockey season. They may look back at the 2005 season like Keith Foulke or Curt Schilling have and say they never should have gotten out of bed.

Or they could turn the season around like Cohasset's 2005 softball team did and call it a wonderful year. Games this week against Hull, Marshfield and Norwell will tell much of the story.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

College Board names 22 CHS AP Scholars

The College Board has named 22 Cohasset High School students AP Scholars in recognition of exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Exams. Of the recipients, 11 are sophomores or juniors, who will have at least another year to complete college-level work and possibly earn another AP Scholar Award.

Four students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are: Jonathan Grimm, Lindsey Kennedy, Toby Norman and Domenic Strazzulla.

Five students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on four or more of theses exams. These students are: Cecelia Chapman, Kate McBride, Molly Ogrodnik, Christopher Reynolds and Elizabeth Stone.

Thirteen students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations, with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are: Dominique Asnault, Susan Curry, Jeanette Dale, Zachary Etkind, Andrew Jerz, John Kiniley, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Jonathan Littauer, Emily Nash, Christopher Ofsthun, Emily Savage, Nils Sceery, and Molly Trisler.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program offers students the opportunity to take challenging college-level courses while still in high school, and to receive college credit, advanced placement, or both for successful performance on the AP Exams. Almost 18 percent of the more than one million high school students in over 15,000 secondary schools worldwide who took AP Exams, performed at a sufficiently high level to merit the recognition of AP Scholar. Students took AP Exams in May after completing challenging college-level courses at their high schools. The College Board recognizes several levels of achievement based on the number of yearlong courses and exams or equivalent semester-long courses and exams.

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit, advanced placement, or both based on successful performance on the AP Exams. More than 1400 institutions award a full year's credit, sophomore standing, to students presenting a sufficient number of qualifying grades. In 2005, 34 AP Exams are offered in a wide variety of subject areas, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response essay or problem-solving questions, except for the Studio Art exam which evaluates students' original artwork.

The College Board's mission is to connect students to college success and opportunity. They are a not-for-profit membership organization committed to excellence and equity in education. Founded in 1900, the association is composed of more than 4700 schools, colleges, universities, and other educational organizations. Each year, the College Board serves over three million students and their parents, 23,000 highs schools, and 3500 colleges through major programs and services in college admission, guidance, assessment, financial aid, enrollment, and teaching and learning. Among its best-known programs are the SAT, the PSAT, NMSQT, and the Advanced Placement Program. The College Board is committed to the principles of equity and excellence, and strives to embody that commitment in all of its programs, services, activities, and concerns.

Central air conditioning
for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.

Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.

Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

OBITUARY

Michael P. Wilson

Commercial lobster fisherman for 45 years

Michael P. Wilson, 62, a life long Cohasset resident, died September 23, 2005.

Mr. Wilson worked as a commercial lobster fisherman out of Cohasset Harbor for 45 years. He was a boxing enthusiast who taught the sport to children and adults. He was an avid outdoorsman, loved gardening, hunting and fishing.

He leaves his wife of 39 years, Shelia (Kirk) Wilson. Devoted father of Audrey G. McKay of Abington and Paul M. of Brighton. He also leaves his stepmother, Nancy Wilson of Medomak, Maine; a sister, Lucinda Brennan of Marathon, Fla.; a brother, Christopher Butler of Medomak, Maine; and four grandchildren, Alyssa, Haley, Ethan and Miles.

A graveside service was Wednesday, Sept. 28 at the Beechwood Cemetery. Arrangements made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Donations in Mr. Wilson's name may be made to the American Red Cross, 285 Columbus Ave., Boston, MA 02116

Colonial medicine subject of meeting

Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual meeting and fall dinner Sunday, Oct. 23, from 5:30 to 9 p.m. at the Cohasset Harbor Resort. Featured speakers will be Dan and Judith Grillo with a "Colonial Medicine." program. The Grillo's have participated in revolutionary re-enactment for the past 18 years, Dan having portrayed both a common soldier, and an officer in the militia.

For the Oct. 23 meeting presentation, Dan portrays an American Revolutionary militia surgeon and Judy, a housewife-herbalist. Through demonstration and lecture, the Grillo's present medical theories of the era and the medicinal herbs used in healing. They also look at methods of tooth extraction and transferring teeth from one person to another; smallpox inoculation; the use of leeches; preparation of herbs; and midwifery. Dan has a collection of 18th century instruments, some original and some reproduction, that he incorporates into the program.

The buffet dinner includes herb roasted chicken with garlic herb au jus, and a penne pasta with plum tomato sauce and cheese, as entrées, with Apple Crisp and Vanilla ice cream for dessert. Cash bar service is included. The Cost for members is $31; non-members, $36. For reservations, mail name, address, phone, and number of those attending to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. Make check payable to The Cohasset Historical Society. For additional information or to make reservations by phone, call 781-383-1434.

Bloomfield talk is open to public

Prof. Lincoln Palmer Bloomfield presents "The Once and Future Middle East: Realities, Myths, and U.S. Policy" as a two-part adult education series at the Parish House, 23 North Main St. on Sunday, Oct. 16 from 11:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.: "The Forces Behind It All", and on Thursday, Oct. 20 from 8 – 9:30 p.m. "Current Issues and Conflicts".

This series offers a look behind the headlines at some of the roots of today's combustible Middle East issues, including cultural chasms, crusades then and now, terrorism, and the twists and turns of American diplomacy. Dr. Bloomfield is a scholar, lecturer, and consultant, with seasoned experience at the White House, the U.S. State Department, and the United Nations. His lecturing venue spans well over 30 countries, including the Middle East.

Dr. Bloomfield is the author of many books, including his most recent, "Accidental Encounters with History (and_some lessons learned)." He is also a longtime activist member of First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church in Cohasset. This series will be conducted in interview format, with the Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull posing some critical questions as forays into Dr. Bloomfield's elaboration on various dimensions of this comprehensive and complex topic. Questions and open discussion will conclude each session. The public is invited.

'Float the Boats' fashion show, lunch

The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) is in the midst of an aggressive fundraising initiative. The two "sliding seat fours" that the group has rented for the last six years are being recalled by their owner at the end of this season.

CMI's goal is to fund raise $30,000 for the purchase of two of its own sliding seat fours. At this time, the group is just about half way there and a "Luncheon and Fashion Show" is being planned to keep the fundraising momentum going. Please plan to join CMI on Tuesday Nov. 8 from 11:30a.m.-2p.m. at the Square Cafe in Hingham. A lunch will be served and "The Sports Closet" of Cohasset is presenting a sportswear and work-out attire fashion show. Tickets are $75 per person ($50 of which is tax deductible) and may be obtained by calling Susan Galligan (781-383-0765) or at Buttonwood Books.

CMI offers Middle and High School rowing programs and an extensive adult program. Help keep ocean rowing alive on Cohasset's waters and join CMI and its' friends and supporters for an afternoon in support of the CMI rowing program.

Greenbush work impact on bus routes

The following information was received by the transportation coordinator Sept. 26.

•The Pond Street/Spring Street detour will be delayed.

•Pond Street will at times be limited to one lane by the Cohasset Water Dep. in order to replace the water main prior to that MBTA detour.

•On Monday, Oct. 3, the lower King St. detour will take effect.

•The Beechwood detour "most likely" will not be removed prior to closing lower King St.

The above, will effect all buses and schools. Currently in the process of determining the most efficient route changes possible and request your patience during this effort.

Helpful tips about talking to teens

Do you need help talking with your teen? Ideas to enable them to resist peer pressure? Project Safeguard again presents "Active Parenting of Teens and Preteens" with Jan Tedeschi, facilitator. Insight into today's teen pressures and issues combined with valuable information on communicating about drug and alcohol use, teen sexuality, and violence will be covered.

The two-hour, fast moving, six-session series will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Tuesdays beginning Oct. 11. A morning and evening session will be held and parents will have the flexibility to attend the alternate session if needed. Many Cohasset parents have raved about the practical, helpful information they have learned from the series.

For further information and to sign up, call Jan Tedeschi at 781-982-7007.

Adolescent parenting lecture series at library

Licensed school psychologist Alan Jacobson, Ph.D., will present a three-part lecture series for fall and winter on issues concerning parents and their adolescent children, at the Paul Pratt Library. The lecture series is sponsored by The Social Service League of Cohasset.

As director of Bayview Associates, Dr. Jacobson runs a large out-patient program treating adults, children, and adolescents in individual, group and family therapy settings. His experience includes consulting to area schools and community groups for the past eight years. A columnist on mental health issues for the Patriot Ledger newspaper, Jacobson developed the noted "Bully Busters" workshop program.

Talking to Kids about Sexual Activity – Thursday, Oct. 13 from 7 to 8:30 p.m., will address parents' concerns over the ever expansive world of sexual activity and information to which adolescents are exposed. Attention given to approaching young teens on the subject, and techniques and tips for handling delicate information.

Bully Busters - Managing your Child's School Environment – Friday, Nov. 4 from 10 to 11:30 a.m., will discuss the nature of bullying from all perspectives. Emphasis on assisting children in dealing with a bullying situation. Focus paid to why children bully, who bullies are, likely targets, and empowering witnesses. Attention also given to helping the bullying child.

Building Self Esteem – Winter session, will focus on the hallmarks of low self-esteem, the potential causes, and methods of bolstering a child's self esteem over the long term.

The lecture series is free and open to public. For more information call Social Service League at 781-383-0771.

Organizational skill for kids is talk subject

Join us on Oct. 4 for Mission: Organization! presented by Sarah Ward, a speech pathologist specializing in cognition and attention, teaches organizational skills for children. Helpful for parents of special needs students as well as any child struggling with organization. The event starts promptly at 7:30 p.m. at the Osgood School, 210 Sohier St. All workshops and presentations are Free. Sponsored by the PSO - Parent Advisory Council.

SOUTH SHORE PAC Network - Cohasset has joined with local PAC members in the South Shore area to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. If you would like to be added to the e-mail network for updates please forward your contact information to: southshorepac@comcast.net

PSO fundraiser benefits programs

The Osgood and Deer Hill PSO are conducting their Innisbrook Gift Wrap Fundraiser. There are two catalogs this year filled with the quality, stylish gift wrap Innisbrook is known for, but also available are many gift ideas and candy and chocolate. New this year is an opportunity to purchase from a wide selection of magazine subscriptions. As always, 50 percent of all sales go directly to the PSO and orders can be placed with students, at the schools or online.

Catalogs can be viewed at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, the Town Hall, the Library Community room and the South Shore Community Center Nursery School. The fundraiser will end on Oct. 3. If you have any questions or would like to place an order, please call Mary Jo Blackington at 781-383-0626.

Fire department open house is Oct. 15

October is National Fire Prevention Month, and Papa Gino's, in conjunction with the Home Safety Council, is teaming up with local fire departments to help educate the community on fire prevention and potential fires and hopefully save lives.

For the past 12 years, New England Fire Departments and Papa Gino's have helped more than 1 million people by supplying educational materials and free pizza at fire safety open houses. The Cohasset Fire Department is holding an Open House at Cohasset Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St., Saturday, Oct.15, from 1 - 4 p.m.

Some of the visuals include firefighters demonstrating the way to escape a smoke-filled room, fire prevention tips and training and Sparky, the fire safety mascot, interacting with the children.

For more information about the Fire Prevention Open Houses in your area, call Marianne Sabella at 508-435-2020. For additional information about this open house, contact Captain James Runey at the Cohasset Fire Department.

Rick Springfield undercover

Rick Springfield

Grammy-winning pop artist to perform familiar favorites at Memorial Hall show

Rick Springfield secured his place as a 1980's pop music sensation thanks to hit songs like "I've Done Everything for You," "Love Somebody," "Don't Talk to Strangers" and the number one "Jessie's Girl."

On his latest album, "The Day After Tomorrow" released in July on Gomer/DKE, Springfield — who plays Plymouth Memorial Hall on Sunday — covers some of his favorite songs from that period including classics by 10cc ("I'm Not in Love"), Foreigner ("Waiting for a Girl Like You"), Gerry Rafferty ("Baker Street") and Mr. Mister ("Broken Wings").

"I've always wanted to record these songs. These are some songs I wish I had written," explained Springfield by telephone on a Chicago tour stop last week. "They've been favorites of mine for a long time. I suspected that they would work well together, when done acoustically with a clean guitar sound and background vocals, and they do. The album is moody and atmospheric. I wanted to be faithful to the originals while treating the songs just a little differently and giving them the benefit of new recording technology. And, I wanted to see if it would be easier and less painful doing a CD of songs I hadn't written and it definitely was."

Springfield, 56, was still in high school in the 1960s when he formed his first band in his native Sydney, Australia. After stints with groups like Rock House and Zoot, Springfield went solo in 1971. He released several albums in Australia, including 1975's "Mission Magic," which became the basis for a Saturday morning cartoon series about a rock and roll troubleshooter. Springfield provided the voice for the lead character and each episode of the series featured at least one of his original songs. After some record label issues stalled his recording career in the late 1970s, Springfield signed with RCA in 1981 and released "Working Class Dog," his debut album in America, later that same year. He was also acting on ABC-TV's "General Hospital," but left the soap opera to pursue music full-time when his album went double platinum and he picked up a Grammy Award for Best Male Rock Performance for "Jessie's Girl."

Springfield went on to earn two more Grammy nominations in 1982 and 1983. It may now be more than a decade since his last hit single, but Springfield continues to earn acclaim for his live shows which now draw fans from his early days and sometimes their children.

"I actually enjoy playing live a lot more now than I did when I first hit it big. I have a much better relationship with my audience and a stronger respect for them, too. I'm definitely not as big-headed as used to be. It's very humbling to realize how long some of my fans have stuck with me."

Rick Springfield will be at Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court Street, Plymouth, Sunday, Oct. 2 at 7 p.m. For tickets and information, call 866-468-7619 or visit www.plymouthhall.com. Tickets are also available at all Strawberries locations.

Bullock warms to 'Wilbur' role in musical comedy

Opera house set for 'Hairspray' Oct. 4-16

The role of Wilbur Turnblad may be the mature male lead in "Hairspray," but 50-year-old actor Jim J. Bullock — who plays the loveable joke store proprietor in the national tour of the musical comedy opening next week at Boston's Opera House — wasn't always sure it was the right part for him.

"I'm in the proper age range and I certainly could have a 16-year-old daughter," explained Bullock by telephone last week from Ohio. "Wilbur is a straight role, however, and those don't usually come my way."

Jim J. Bullock

That may explain what the openly gay actor, best-known as Monroe Ficus on the 1980s sitcom "Too Close for Comfort," had in mind when he auditioned to be a replacement in the Broadway company of the Marc Shaiman and Scott Wittman show that won eight 2003 Tony Awards including Best Musical.

"I tried out for Edna, Wilbur, and the Male Authority Figure, in that order. I ended up being cast as the Male Authority Figure in New York. When I was approached about joining the road company, I still wanted to play Edna."

Edna —which earned Harvey Fierstein a Tony Award as Best Actor in a Musical and which was played in Boston two years ago by Bruce Vilanch — just wasn't in the cards, though, for the tall and slim, Bullock.

"After Michael McKean played the role in New York, the producers decided they didn't want to pad another actor as Edna. They had to pad both Harvey and Bruce a bit, too, but they just weren't going to consider people built like me."

Bullock agreed to play Wilbur — originated on Broadway by Dick Latessa, who took home the Tony Award for Best Featured Actor in Musical, and last played in Boston by Todd Susman — despite his insecurity about winning acceptance as Edna's loving husband and Tracy's devoted father in the stage production based on John Waters' classic cult film about integration in early 1960s Baltimore.

"The producers wanted me for the fun they thought I could bring to the show, not necessarily the flamboyance that has always been kind of my trademark. When I first played Wilbur, I had this phobia that I would be laughed at when what I really wanted was for people to laugh with me. As it turns out, the audiences have been great. And, I just adore Wilbur. He is so loveable and he loves his family very much. Hope truly springs eternal from Wilbur."

Bullock now believes he may have more in common with Mr. Turnblad than he first realized.

"Not that I will ever be one, but I think I would make a sweet Dad, too."

"Hairspray" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, Oct. 4-16. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com.

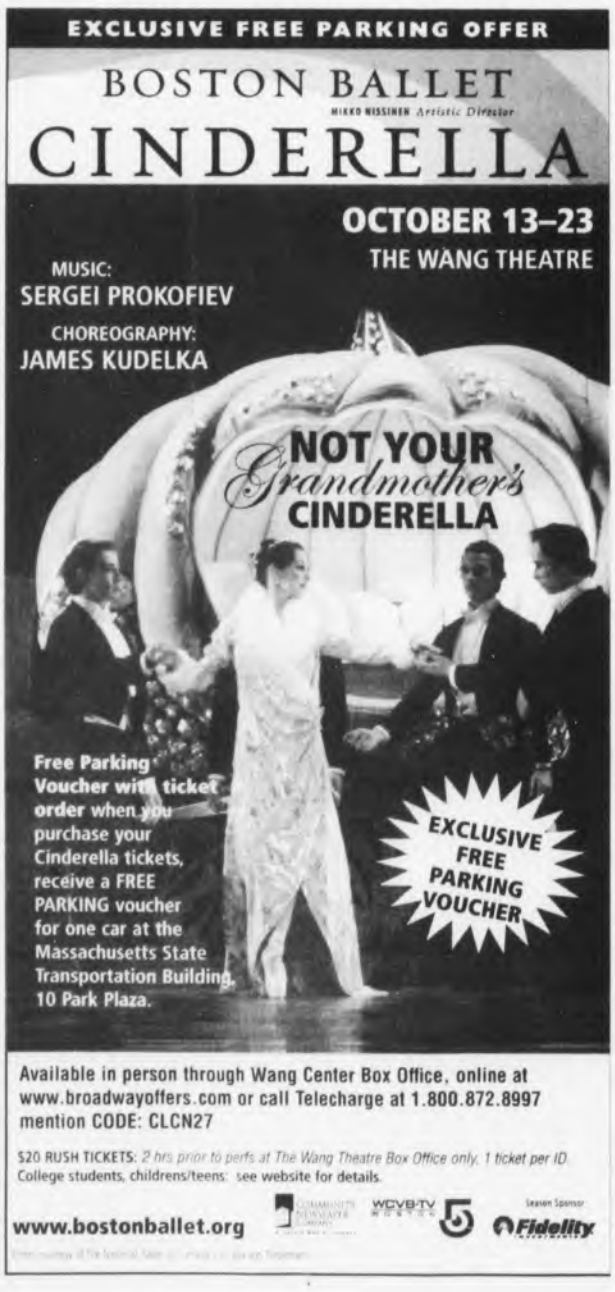
LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS



Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

COPING WITH TINNITUS

Tinnitus is ringing in the ears caused by age-related hearing loss and/or damage to hair cells (the specialized cells in the inner ear that detect sound waves). Most tinnitus treatments focus on giving the ears something else to listen to. Maskers, electronic devices similar to hearing instruments, are used to generate white noise that is loud enough to block tinnitus but unobtrusive enough for listeners to ignore. The brain responds to maskers as it responds to window air conditioners. These sounds do not register as loud, and the brain can screen them out. Hearing instruments can be helpful for similar reasons. They allow people to hear the sounds they prefer, which blocks out the ringing in their ears.

For most people, it's easier to adjust to wearing a masker that produces white noise than to endure the constant annoying ringing and buzzing sounds associated with tinnitus. There are many products on the market today to address the needs of the hearing impaired, from maskers to tiny in-the-canal instruments to assistive listening devices. To find out what's new in better hearing today, we invite your call at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. We offer complete hearing health care services at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and at our office in Abington.

P.S. More than 36 million Americans suffer from tinnitus.

BY FELICITY LONG
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Even this year's long, hot summer won't dampen the fall foliage spectacle, thanks to a soggy spring that experts predict will make this year's New England colors pop. That said, you can expect hordes of fellow leaf peepers this year, so plan ahead, especially if your excursions include a hotel stay. Here are our top tips for making the most of the foliage season in New England.

MAINE

Type A personalities who can't wait for the fall colors to head south can get a jump on the action in Maine, where the transformation is already underway. To stay on top of the changing foliage in the state's 17 million acres of forest, state rangers are offering up-to-date reports on www.mainefoliage.com, through Oct. 12.

Try leaf peeping from a new perspective on a scenic Kennebec River raft or kayak float through the gorges and forests of Maine through Northern Outdoors (800-765-7238 or www.northernoutdoors.com). Or leave the car at home and hop on the new Maine Eastern Railroad (www.maineeasternrailroad.com) for a scenic trek between the coastal towns of Brunswick and Rockland.

Don't miss the Pumpkin Patch Trolley at the Seashore Trolley Museum in Kennebunkport, set for Oct. 1 and 2. As its name implies, the trolley crosses Meserve's Crossing for a pumpkin patch, where passengers can descend to pick out their own pumpkin before making the return ride to the visitor's center station (207-967-2800 or www.trolleymuseum.org).

Hike on well-groomed trails in one of Maine's state parks (www.parksandlands.com lists detailed information about each park, including camping and historic sites).

Spend a day at a local farm or orchard where you can try apple picking, sample hand-pressed cider and homemade pie, pick out a pumpkin, join a wagon ride or even help feed the animals (details at www.getrealgetmaine.com).

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The season in the Granite State tends to run to around Columbus Day Weekend, which means that you have some time to take it all in. And don't miss at least a few of New Hampshire's 50-plus covered bridges along the way (www.state.nh.us/nhdhr/bridges).

The perennial favorite way to see the sights -- from the window of your car still holds its appeal, thanks to 14 officially designated scenic byways covering some 900 miles. Check out www.state.nh.us/osp/scenicbyways.htm; www.byways.org or www.whitemountainstrail.com.

See the sites from a canoe on the Connecticut River. Get a map at www.connecticutrivertravel.com/recreation.htm or look into boat rentals at North Star Canoes in Cornish (603-542-5802).

Try a tour of the 16-mile Sugar River Recreational Trail from Claremont to Newport (www.ctrivertravel.net/claremont.htm) or a leg of the Appalachian Trail or one of the other scenic trails throughout the state (603-271-3556; www.nhparks.state.nh.us/Trails/hbh.html; White Mountain National Forest, http://www.fs.fed.us/r9/white or www.nhbikeped.com).

Shiver your timbers on a narrated cruise on the 230-foot M/S Mount Washington on Lake Winnipesauke from Weirs Beach, where Captain Smith will sail you to the best places for fall color (888-843-6686 or www.cruisenh.com).

Get an aerial view of the colors from a ski lift, available at many of the state's top ski areas (800-887-5464 or www.skinh.com).

VERMONT

There's a reason nearly 3 million people converge on Vermont every fall, and it's not just the cows. Aside from the obvious attractions of vibrant colors and quaint towns and villages, the state is narrow enough that visitors can drive from side to side in a weekend. We however, believe the best way to enjoy Vermont is to take it nice and slow -- stop and smell the maple syrup.

For instance, why drive over mountains when you can go between them by exploring the winding gap roads in central Vermont? Try the Appalachian Gap through Waitsfield, the Lincoln Cap through Lincoln and the Middlebury Cap through Warren.

If you are the type who is only happy when their speeding down a mountain, stave off the pre-winter blues on an Alpine slide, open in Stowe and at Bromley Mountain through mid-October (www.gostowe.com/activities/alpineslide.php or http://summer.bromley.com).

Enjoy the views on a tram/gondola ride at Jay Peak (www.jaypeakresort.com); Killington (www.killington.com); Stratton (www.stratton.com); or Stowe (http://summer.stowe.com).

If ski lifts aren't high enough for you, try the ultimate in aerial views in a hot air balloon, but be aware that a stiff wind will cancel even your best-laid plans last minute. In the Quechee area, try Balloons of Vermont (www.balloonsofvermont.com); in Fairlee/Lake Morey, Balloon Inn Vermont (www.balooninnvermont.com); in Greater Burlington, Above Reality Hot Air Balloon Rides (www.balloonvermont.com/contact.html), Vermont Balloon Rides (www.vermontballooning.com) or U-Ken-Do Ballooning (www.hotairballoon.org).

Enjoy the colors reflected in the waters of Lake Champlain or a state river on a boating excursion through Lake Champlain Ferries (www.lakechamplaincruises.com) or rent a kayak or canoe from a state park (www.vtstateparks.com).

Meet the locals at a town fair, such as the 14th Annual Hildene Foliage Arts & Craft Festival, Sept. 30 to Oct. 2 at Hildene Meadowlands in Manchester or celebrate the arts at Festival 05301 in Brattleboro.

CONNECTICUT

Although many of us look north for foliage, Connecticut offers plenty of color and more. For a suggestion of the 10 best foliage viewing spots check out the website of the Connecticut Department of Environment Protection (www.dep.state.ct.us/updates/foliage), which touts, among other spots, Cobble Mountain in Macedonia Brook State Park in Kent, the Stone Tower in Sleeping Giant State Park in Hamden and the observation tower in Shenipsit State Forest in Somers.

Get behind the wheel for a driving tour of Mystic Country from Stonington to Old Mystic (http://mycoast.com/Directions) or the Litchfield area (www.litchfieldhills.com) where you can brake for shopping at the Hitchcock Chair Company Store in Riverton. Or enjoy an Apple Orchards and Panoramic Views drive in the New Haven region (www.newhavencvb.org or 800-332-STAY).

Burn off that second piece of apple pie on a Walking Weekend in the Quinebaug and Shetucket river region, where more than 100 free guided walks are on tap Oct. 7-10 and Oct. 14-16 (860-963-7226). Or explore the 100-plus miles of hiking trails in the state, such as Bluff Point State Park in Groton, Mount Misery in Voluntown (www.thelastgreenvalley.org also lists biking options).

Check out festivals like the 44th annual Chrysanthemum Festival in Bristol, until Oct. 8 (860-584-4718); the 25th Annual Chowderfest at Mystic Seaport, Oct. 8 to 10 (888-973-2767) or the Garlic & Harvest Festival in Bethlehem, Oct. 8-9 (203-266-7350).

MASSACHUSETTS

If you're not in the mood to travel far, the good news is that Massachusetts has plenty of fall foliage events and scenic views closer to home.

Join the Blue Hills Adult Walking Club or try a ranger-led hike every Saturday or Sunday, on alternating days, to explore the Blue Hills Reservation, open to anyone 16 or older (617-698-1802).

Go wicked fast with the New England Mountain Bike Association's Wicked Ride of the East on Oct. 30 at the Berry Pond Recreation Area in Harold Parker State Forest in North Andover (978-686-3391 or www.nemba.org/nembaevents/events.html).

Other excellent hiking and biking trails include the 25-mile paved Cape Cod Rail Trail, which passes cranberry bogs, scenic views and villages; the 11-mile Minuteman Bikeway from the Alewife Station on Boston's Red Line to Bedford; and the 10-mile Northampton Bikeway and Norwottuck Rail Trail from Northampton to Amherst (details at www.massvacation.com).

Climb high at the Ramble Up Mt. Greylock event on Columbus Day (Oct. 10) at Mount Greylock State Reservation. Competitive types can vie to be among the first 2,000 hikers to reach the summit for a certificate of accomplishment (413-743-8300 or www.celebrateadams.com).

Pile the kids in the car for a day of hay rides, kite flying, pumpkin decorating, relay races, and a petting zoo at the Fall Harvest Fest at Borderland State Park between Easton and Sharon on Oct. 9 (508-238-6566). Or measure the giant pumpkin at the Topsfield Fair, Oct. 1-10, the country's oldest agricultural fair (www.topsfieldfair.org).

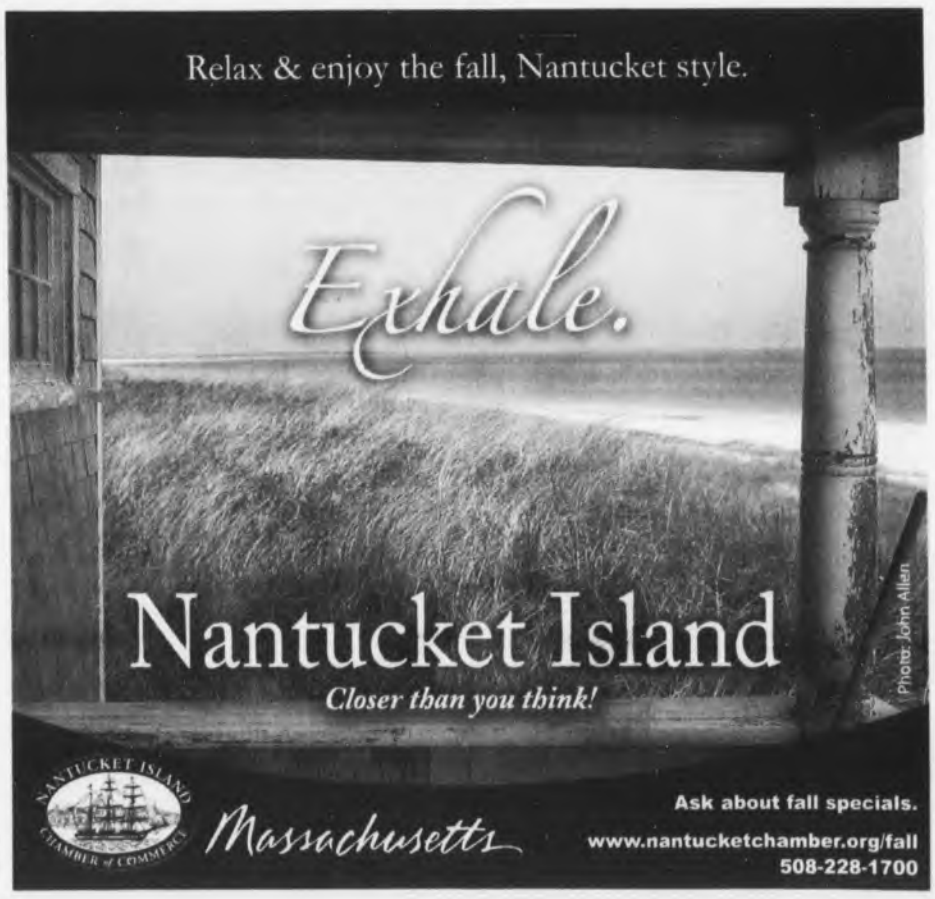
The giant Big E in West Springfield runs through Oct. 2 and offers everything from horse shows and a circus to a Mardis Gras parade (www.thebige.com).

RHODE ISLAND

Autumn in Rhode Island is a more low-key experience than you'll have further north, but those who don't mind waiting until mid- to late-October to see the colors will find plenty to enjoy.

See the colors from a bike along miles of trails and paths converted from former rail lines throughout the state. For a list of scenic routes, check out www.dot.state.ri.us/webtran/bikeri.html.

Or spend the day enjoying the scenery at Fort Adams State Park in Newport, then get a jump on Halloween by staying for Frightnights at the Haunted Fort, complete with ghosts and goblins. The event runs all month in October (401 841 0707 or www.fortadams.org).



Get a taste of the varied cultures that make up Rhode Island at the annual Rhode Island Heritage Festival on the Providence State House lawn, Oct. 1 and 2 (401-222-4133 or www.preservation.ri.gov).

Get in your last beach visit of the year at the Misquamicut Beach Fall Festival and Street Fair, Oct. 8, with clowns, pumpkin carving and classic cars (410-322- 1026 or www.misquamicut.org.

Or spend a day indulging in German food and drinks and listening to Bavarian music and watching Alpenblumen dancers at the annual NBC-10 Oktoberfest at the Newport Yachting Center, Oct. 8-10 (401-846-1600 or www.newportfestivals.com).

School safety forum is held

Event prompted by threats, vandalism

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Some Cohasset parents think enough is enough. After four criminal incidents at the middle-high school in the past five months, some are willing to have every bag checked at the door and students fingerprinted.

These were just some of the ideas raised during a forum held Tuesday, Oct. 4 at the middle-high school library, to help open the lines of communication between parents and the schools. The conversation comes in the wake of a string of incidents at the middle-high school that have required a police response.

Roughly 35 parents and teachers attended the forum, as well as all three building principals and the high school and middle school assistant principals, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh, school psychologist Jason Levine, and Police Chief James Hussey were also present.

The overwhelming concern of parents at Tuesday's forum is whether their children are going to be safe at school. Investigations are still underway regarding a threatening note which was found with a bullet outside the school in May, as well as two incidents of vandalism and the recent bomb scare.

"Has a security audit been done?"
— Jamie Williams, parent and school committee chairman

During the most egregious incident, vandals ripped bushes from the ground, broke windows, and spray-painted the building with foul language and obscene illustrations. Even the school golf cart which is used by the athletic department was covered with graffiti and turned upside down.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams, who attended the forum in her role as a board member as well as a parent, said — when there is no closure for an incident — it leaves parents with a lot of anxiety. She asked

Nip flu germs in the bud

Shots to be available soon

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Sept. 22 marked the first day of fall, which means cold weather and flu season is right around the corner. To stay healthy all winter long, flu shots are often recommended, and it's not too early to begin thinking about getting one.

Town public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons said typically, the town begins holding flu shot clinics in mid-October, and usually, everyone has received their shots by mid-November. She said dates for the town's flu shot clinics have not yet been set, as the doses of vaccine from the state have not arrived, but she expects the same schedule will hold true this year.

"Hopefully we can start giving shots by the second or third week of October," she said.

The town receives doses of flu vaccine from the state. Fitzsimmons estimates this year, Cohasset will receive roughly 900 doses. The state purchases its doses from Sanofi Pasteur, a European company which develops vaccines. The town also purchases additional doses of vaccine. Fitzsimmons said the town and the state purchased vaccines from Sanofi Pasteur last year, and will do so again this year.

The town will purchase 300 doses of vaccine this year, while

Boy Scouts "RK" Quebec and August Oddleifson have been members of the program since they were very young. Soon, they will embark on their Eagle Scout projects, which will earn them the highest honor a Boy Scout can achieve.

Boy Scouts spread their wings

On their way to Eagle status

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Becoming an Eagle Scout is no easy task. It takes years of planning and hard work to carry out one defining project that will earn a Boy Scout the highest honor he can receive. While that achievement is still a few years away for 15-year-olds August Oddleifson and Richard "RK" Quebec, the wheels are already spinning to get their projects in motion.

Both boys have participated in either the Cub Scouts or Boy Scouts since they were very young. Currently, the two are Life Scouts, the last step before coming Eagle Scouts. Once a Boy Scout becomes an Eagle Scout, he is an Eagle Scout for life.

For his Eagle Scout project, August would like to produce a new map of Wheelwright Park, which will include a new trail he plans to clear himself. August said he has Global Positioning System (GPS) equipment at home which will help him accurately map the area.

"Mr. (Jack) Buckley introduced me to mapping," said August, who had already heard from longtime Eagle Scout Arthur Lehr, who lives next door to the park, that it is in desperate need of a map. In addition, the scouts own six acres of land in Wheelwright Park, so having an accurate map available made sense.

August said using the GPS, he will walk the park and the points of his location will be recorded in the device. From there, he can load the information into his computer, then work with the data to make it come together and look nice.

PICTURE THIS/Judy Fitzsimmons

The Mariner caught up with Public Health Nurse Judy Fitzsimmons on Monday in her office on the first floor at Town Hall.

Name: Judy Fitzsimmons.

Occupation: Public health nurse, Cohasset Board of Health.

Best day of your life: Impossible to pick only one — I've been blessed with many "best days."

Best vacation: Our first trip to Disney World with all our (five) children after years of saving change (pennies) and waiting until our youngest was in the first grade so we could enjoy the trip.

Favorite season: Autumn.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite junk food: Brigham's ice cream.

Best book: Jan Karon's Mitford Series.

Best movie: "Ghandi."

Best TV show: Any British drama series on PBS. (Red Sox and Patriot's games come in a close "second.")

Pet peeve: Drivers who don't know the "rules of the road" and people driving the wrong way into the Town Hall parking lot. "Enter" means in and "exit" means out!

Dumbest thing I've ever done: Years ago, tearing up and throwing away an income tax refund check. It took two years to get another check issued.

Goal: To do my best for the people I serve as public health nurse and to enjoy each day as it comes.

Person I'd most like to meet: Any of the founders of our country.

Biggest worry: Health and safety of my family.

Best part of Cohasset: The natural beauty and the good friends I have here.

School department talks preparedness

Members of the school department will meet with members of the Office of Emergency Management in early October to discuss the roles of the schools during emergency situations. The town relies on the school buildings to house emergency supplies, provide transportation for evacuation through its buses, and for emergency shelter at the middle high school, which is equipped with a full kitchen.

Van drivers needed

Van drivers are needed at the Council on Elder Affairs. The commitment is only three hours, once per month, to drive the CEA vans to take elders shopping and do other essential errands, as well as bring them to the Center for lunch. To volunteer, call Martha Horsefield at (781) 383-9112.

Buckley questions pre-payment of special education tuitions

Disagrees with Walsh over fiscal 2005 funds

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In the roughly eight years that have passed since the town adopted the town manager form of government, Director of Finance Michael Buckley said he has not consulted with either the board of selectmen or advisory committee about payment of bills.

However, requests from the school department to pay roughly $190,000 in out-of-district special education tuitions in fiscal 2006 with left over fiscal 2005 funds has changed the way Buckley operates.

While Buckley said he is not opposed to paying the bills, he has contacted Town Counsel for advice and said he wanted both boards to be aware of the change as well. Selectman Rob Spofford said Tuesday, he would like the board to take up the matter at its next meeting, scheduled for Oct. 18, to better understand the situation.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has proposed using $190,652 in left-over funds from the fiscal 2005 budget to pay the fiscal 2006 first-quarter, out-of-district special education tuition bills. On Sept. 22, the school committee met and approved the Warrant — or financial report — with the $190,652 included.

In a Sept. 27 letter sent to both the advisory committee and board of selectmen, Buckley outlined the reason for his concern.

Buckley reminded the boards that the April 2005 Town Meeting transferred $100,000 to the fiscal 2005 school department budget to provide for unanticipated deficits in its operating budget. In addition, Town Meeting transferred $100,000 to the reserve fund in case it was needed, which it was not.

Also in July of 2005, the advisory committee transferred $122,802 from the reserve fund, which was appropriated at the December 2004 Town Meeting to provide for unanticipated deficits in the school operating budget.

In summary, he explained, a total of $222,802 was added to the school budget in fiscal 2005. Now, the school department wants to use $190,652 from the fiscal 2005 budget to pay fiscal 2006 bills.

Buckley said in late August, he was presented with school department bills payable for fiscal 2005. Fiscal 2006 began July 1. "This is unusual in that, in the normal course of events, all bills for a prior fiscal year are due in by mid-July," Buckley stated. "During my customary review of the bills, I determined that a majority of the charges, approximately $230,000, were charges for fiscal year 2006."

Buckley said chapter 41, section 56 of the Massachusetts General Laws generally prohibits incurring liabilities in one fiscal year and using funds from another fiscal year to satisfy the obligations. The law states all boards, committees, heads of departments and officers authorized to spend money must approve and transmit to the town accountant as often as once per month, "all bills, drafts, orders, and pay rolls chargeable to the respective appropriations of which they have the expenditure. Such approval shall be given only after an examination to determine that the charges are correct and that the goods, materials, or services charged for were ordered and that such goods and materials were delivered and that the services were actually rendered to or for the town as the case may be." Therefore, towns may not pay bills for services which have not yet been rendered, Buckley believes.

When he questioned the school department, Buckley said he was presented with a copy of chapter 71, section 71D of the Mass. General Laws. That law states, "A school committee of any city, town, or regional school district may authorize the prepayment of tuition for a period not exceeding three months to any approved private school or approved program source which a student is attending under the provisions of chapter 71B, and the city, town, or regional school district treasurer shall be required to approve and pay such monies in accordance with the authorization of the school committee."

However, Buckley received an opinion from Town Counsel Paul DeRensis which was included in this week's selectmen's correspondence. While DeRensis said pre-payment of tuitions is allowable across fiscal years or within fiscal years, there is a caveat.

DeRensis spoke with a representative at the Department of Revenue via e-mail and the direct quotes were included in the e-mail he sent to Buckley. The e-mail said the DOR is "not enthusiastic about the practice" of pre-paying tuitions and said it thinks a school committee should only pay 12 months worth of services from any one fiscal year's budget.

Buckley said to the best of his knowledge, Cohasset has not used Walsh's proposed method of funding tuitions in the past. "Therefore, I sought the advice of Town Counsel on the proper course of action. In the meantime, I returned the bills to the school department," he said.

Schools draft budget calendar

The school department has drafted a budget calendar which has been approved by the school committee. Although it is subject to change, dates have been tentatively set as follows:

- Oct. 10 - Principals/supervisors submit technology requests to technology director. Principals/supervisors also submit special building maintenance requests and capital requests to business manager.
- Oct. 18 - Curriculum director and department heads submit budget requests to principals. Elementary principals, athletic director and director of student services submit budget requests (excluding out of district tuitions and transportation) to business manager.
- Oct. 25 - Secondary principals, technology director, submit budgets to business manager. Director of student services submits out of district tuition and transportation budget requests.
- Oct. 31 to Nov. 4 - Superintendent and business manager review budget requests with principals and supervisors.
- Nov. 10 - Superintendent and business manager meet with principals and supervisors to discuss preliminary fiscal 2007 budget.
- Nov. 28 - Superintendent reviews preliminary budget
- Dec. 1 to Dec. 14 - Central office staff prepares fiscal 2007 budget materials.
- Dec. 5 - SPECIAL TOWN MEETING
- Dec. 15 - Superintendent presents proposed fiscal 2007 operating budget to school committee
- Jan. 6, 2006 - School committee budget sub-committee meeting.
- TBD - Budget summit with the town
- March 2 - School committee public hearing on budget, votes final adoption of budget and certifies budget figure.
- March 6 to March 17 - Central office staff prepares Town Meeting budget materials
- March 17 - Budget ready for distribution
- TBD - ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

Water taste tests yields some interesting results

On Thursday, Sept. 15, Aquarion Water Company and the Cohasset Water Department were invited to provide a water taste test before a joint meeting of the Hingham and Hull Boards of Health. According to Martin Cohn, spokesperson for the Cohasset Water Interconnect, the purpose of the water taste test was to demonstrate the quality of Hingham and Cohasset water.

Cohn explained that "Each participant tasted five samples of water – Hingham, Cohasset, MWRA, a 90 to10 percent mix of Hingham and Cohasset, and a 90 to 10 percent mix of Hingham and MWRA, and were asked to rate each water from one to five, with one being excellent and five being no opinion."

"The results," Cohn noted, were similar to other blind taste tests that we have conducted. MWRA was rated 2.5; the 90 to 10 percent mix of Hingham and MWRA was rated 2.6; Hingham was rated 2.9; the 90 to 10 percent mix of Hingham and Cohasset was rated 3.0; and Cohasset was rated 3.2," Cohn reported. "Contrary to some preconceived notions, the taste test showed that taste is a subjective quality," he said.

Glenn Pratt, chairman of the Cohasset Water Commissioners, reported on the $15 million of improvements to the Cohasset water system over the past 10 years. "We have and will continue to invest in operational improvements that include improved removal of organic and inorganic materials, change to a 24 operation, replacement of filter media and additional flushing of the distribution system," Pratt noted. "Job number one for water utilities is health and environmental protection. All utilities must meet state and EPA water standards," Pratt continued.

"We have formed a working committee with representatives from Aquarion and Erickson that meets regularly to insure that the highest quality water is provided to consumers in Hull, Hingham and Cohasset," he said. The Cohasset Interconnect is expected to be activated the first week of October.

Town flu shots to be available soon

last year it purchased 400. Fitzsimmons said the reason for the decrease in the amount to be purchased by the town is simple — the vaccines weren't utilized last year, and they do not have a long shelf life.

Last year was a special situation due to the contamination found in some doses of vaccine from Chiron Corporation, another European vaccine-development company. The threat of a shortage led the town to prioritize recipients, and many became fearful they would not be able to receive a shot at all. The town usually receives its doses in three separate shipments, so each shipment was doled out to high-risk patients first. By the time the town received its last shipment, it had received the same amount of doses it would have without the contamination scare, but by then, many people had gone to private providers instead, leaving the town with unused doses.

"Hopefully we can start giving shots by the second or third week of October."

— Judy Fitzsimmons, public health nurse

"By the end, I was practically begging people to have shots," Fitzsimmons said. "We had many doses left over (last year) and that is a waste of money." This year, Fitzsimmons said it made more sense to order 300 doses, to ensure they are all administered.

Coupled with the state's supply, the town will have roughly 1,200 shots available for residents, which Fitzsimmons said should be "more than enough." Because children typically receive flu shots from their pediatrician, that decreases the number of people the town needs to be prepared for.

While there is a cost associated with the town's purchasing and distributing flu shots, Medicare provides reimbursement. To receive reimbursement requires some paperwork, which is where volunteers come in.

Merle Graham coordinates volunteers for the health clinics and Fitzsimmons said new volunteers are always welcome. "She does a wonderful job finding people, but we could always use more," Fitzsimmons said. "It's always nice to have new people."

There are usually four to five clinics held every fall, and the more volunteers helping out, the more smoothly things are able to run. There is a training session held just prior to the clinic for those volunteering.

While high-risk patients are encouraged to receive flu shots annually, and are given priority to receive shots at the flu clinics, Fitzsimmons said the town offers vaccination town-wide for any people who want them.

To volunteer time to help run the upcoming flu clinics, or for more information on flu shots or the flu in general, please contact public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons at (781) 383-2210 or the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Who's at risk?

High-risk patients who should receive a flu shot include:

- Children 6 months to 23 months old.
- People 65 years of age and older.
- People ages 2 to 64 who: have chronic cardiac or pulmonary conditions including asthma; have required medical follow-up or hospitalization during the preceding year due to chronic metabolic diseases (including diabetes), renal dysfunction, hemoglobinopathies or immunosuppression (including immunosuppression caused by medications or HIV); or any condition that can compromise respiratory function or the handling of respiratory secretions, or that can increase the risk of aspiration.
- People ages 6 months to 18 years who are receiving long-term aspirin therapy.
- Pregnant women.
- Health care workers involved in direct patient care.
- Household contacts and out-of-home caregivers of children less than 6 months old.

In addition, August said he plans to clear a new trail, which will include removing brush and some bushes. He said he has already received permission to go ahead with his project from Town Manager Bill Griffin.

August said his fellow scouts in Troop 28 will help him with the project, as well as some of his friends who are not scouts. He said he anticipates the project will take between a year to a year and a half.

"I hope to get it done as soon as possible," he said, but he has time, as projects must be complete before a scout's 18th birthday. If he finishes early, there are extra awards a scout can receive in addition to becoming an Eagle Scout.

RK said the Eagle Scout project he will likely begin will dovetail with the project August has proposed. He has plans to build a bridge in Wheelwright Park, to allow walkers to stay on a path, even where water runs through.

But for now, the two have lot of adventures left as Life Scouts.

RK said he always looks forward to the annual ski trips and white water rafting trips. He said the troop also goes on a lot of hiking trips where they stay over and camp out.

August said he recently went on a Boy Scout outing on the Cape Cod Rail Trail, a biking and walking path which follows a former railroad right-of-way, and stretches for 25 miles from Dennis to Wellfleet. "We biked 50 miles in two days," he said.

RK said for every trip they take, they earn merit badges. "I received my cycling badge over the weekend," said August. RK said every scout must earn 21 total badges, and roughly 12 of those badges are in required topics such as lifesaving, personal management (managing money), and citizenship in the community, nation, and world.

August had the opportunity to earn his citizenship badge at the national level when he met up with some of his fellow scouts during the National Jamboree, a gathering for all the scouts in the country. He said there were roughly 40,000 scouts in attendance, and they all camped out at Fort AP Hill in Bowling Green, Va.

"You meet a lot of people there," he said, adding there are tons of activities to take part in, including everything from shooting a shot gun to scuba diving. "It's very impressive," he said, and it takes place every four years.

When not scouting, RK is a member of the Cohasset High School hockey team. He also likes to wind surf and surf, kite board, play golf, and scuba dive. August is a member of the Cohasset High School soccer team, is a member of the school's jazz band, and likes to sail in the summer.

Both boys say the experiences they have had as Boy Scouts will help build a foundation they can stand on for the rest of their lives.

"This is one organization where you can really be a leader for young kids," said August. He also said the hands-on lessons taught outdoors, allow Boy Scouts to "become really good campers by the time you're done."

RK said because he has been a Boy Scout, there have been many opportunities he has had that he otherwise would not have. He said the skiing trips and white water rafting trips have all been free — due to hours of fund-raising and bottle collecting at the Recycling Transfer Facility — and in the future, the doors will open for scholarships to college. Committee Chairman Merle Brown said every year, scholarships are awarded to scouts, usually in an amount close to $2,500.

"It's a pretty great organization," said August.

To make a contribution to support the Eagle Scout projects of August Oddleifson and RK Quebec, please contact August at (781) 383-0408 or RK at (781) 383-6023.

Weir River Race is Sat., Oct. 15

The date for the Hull Lifesaving Museum's 18th Annual Head of the Weir River Race has been changed to Saturday, Oct. 15. The Race Start is at 10:30 a.m. As many as 45 boats jockey for position racing out the narrow estuary and onto open water, traveling from West Corner (on the Hingham/ Hull/ Cohasset line), past Bumpkin Island, across Hull Bay, to the museum's Windmill Point Boathouse at Hull Gut. A highly contested 5-1/2 miler, the Weir draws coxed youth and adult rowers in gigs, single and double livery and workboats, currachs, and ocean shells.

In the "head of the river" format, boats kick-off the starting line at one-minute intervals, and times are collated at the finish to determine the race winners. Best spectator views are from the bridge on George Washington Boulevard (10-20 minutes after the start), at the tip of Hull's Sunset Point, or at the Windmill Point Boathouse finish line.

Registration, required for all participants, will begin at noon at the race starting line behind the Hull Public Works building at the Hull Town Line on Route 228. All coxed boats must contact the race organizers before the day of the race. Call 781-925-5433 or check out the museum's website: www.lifesavingmuseum.org

Cohasset school enrollment numbers make the grade

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Enrollment figures for all three Cohasset schools are in. Supt. Denise Walsh said the school year has begun with roughly the same amount of students as were expected.

"I'm pleased to say we're not far off from what we thought," Walsh said at the Sept. 22 school committee meeting.

At the kindergarten level, there are 101 total students. This year's brand new full-day kindergarten program has a total of five classes, each with 18 children. Four of the sessions are inclusion classrooms, which means typically developing students are in the same classrooms with peers who participate in the special education program. There are currently 54 boys and 36 girls enrolled. There is also one half-day kindergarten class with 11 students — four boys and seven girls.

"Everybody's happy," said Walsh, adding the teachers are satisfied with the numbers in their classes and so are the parents.

In the first grade, there are 136 students enrolled who are spread throughout six classrooms. Five of the classes have 23 children and the sixth has 21. Two of the classes are inclusion classes. The grade is an even mix of boys and girls with 68 of each.

Grade two has a total of 122 students in five classes, three of which have 25 students. The other two classes have 24 and 23, respectively. Three of the sessions are inclusion classrooms. There are 67 boys and 55 girls in grade two.

In addition to kindergarten and grades one and two, the Osgood School also houses its own preschool program, which is something new this year. Although there had been a preschool in the building, it was operated by the South Shore Educational Collaborative. There are currently eight students in the morning session and 14 in the afternoon. Of the total 22 students, eight are girls and 14 are boys. That brings the total number of students at the Osgood School up to 381, with 207 boys and 174 girls in attendance.

Overall count down by 16 students

"Osgood had a total decrease of six students," from last year, said Walsh.

At Deer Hill, the total school population has decreased by 30. The school has a total enrollment figure of 338, of which 179 are boys and 159 are girls.

"The population shifted when grade six moved up to the middle school," said Walsh.

The third grade has 111 total students, with two classes of 23, two classes of 22, and one class of 21. Three of the classrooms are inclusion classes. There are 57 boys and 54 girls in the third grade.

The fourth grade has one fewer than the third, with a total of 110 spread throughout five classes. There are classrooms each with 24, 23, 22, 21, and 20 students and three are inclusion classrooms. There are 60 boys and 50 girls in fourth grade.

Grade five is the largest class at Deer Hill with 117 students. There are six classes — one with 23 students, one with 21, one with 19 and three with 18. Three of the grade-five classes are inclusion classes. There are 62 boys in grade five and 55 girls.

At the middle school, there are a total of 374 students enrolled, of which 178 are boys and 196 are girls. Students begin switching rooms for different subject areas, and class numbers vary throughout the day. In grade six, there are 124 total students with 54 boys and 70 girls. In grade seven, there are 122 total students with 60 boys and 62 girls. In grade eight there are 128 total students with an even split of 64 boys and girls. The middle school has lost six students from last year's figures.

There are 413 total students attending high school this year. Grade nine has 112 students, with 54 boys and 58 girls. The sophomore class has 92 students with 52 boys and 40 girls. There are 109 students in their junior year, with 58 boys and 51 girls. The class of 2006 has 100 students, with 45 boys and 55 girls.

"At the high school, we're up by 26 (from last year's figures). This is why we wanted the extra math and English teacher," said Walsh. However, with the decrease in students at Osgood, Deer Hill, and the middle school, even with the increase at the high school, district-wide there has been a decrease of 16 students.

Walsh said enrollment figures can change as it is still early in the year. She said the current figures are based on enrollment counts as of Monday, Sept. 19. The Department of Education uses enrollment figures as of Oct.1.

Full-day kindergarten draws a crowd

Many kindergarten students heading off to school for the first time became part of the Osgood School's new full-day kindergarten program.

"There were 101 full-day kindergarten students (on the first day)," said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh during a recent school committee meeting. She said there are five full-day classes, each with 18 students, and one half-day class with 11 students. "Those are nice numbers to open with," she said.

Full-day kindergarten was proposed this year as a means of both offering more educational opportunity for Cohasset's youngest students and provide a way to help boost the school budget. Full-day kindergarten students must pay a tuition of roughly $1,800 per year, while half-day kindergarten is free.

The new integrated preschool at Osgood, which will has regular education and special education students in the same classroom, replaces the preschool formerly located in the school that was run by the South Shore Collaborative. The program is also tuition-based, charging parents $1,500 per year, and will help supplement the budget.

Vinny Harte, executive director of Wellspring, is flanked by the co-chairs of the multi-serve center's 10th anniversary auction, Meg Lind, left, and Margaret Mellon. Some of the auction items include an iPod, Perrier-Jouet champagne, a Celtics hat autographed by legends like Tom Heinsohn, ballroom dancing lessons, and bath & beauty supplies.

Wellspring celebrates 20 years with benefit gala

Hopes to raise upwards of $45K

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Swimming with sharks won't just be the name of a movie when Wellspring, the social service agency in Hull, celebrates its 20th anniversary with a gala dinner/auction on Oct. 15 at the River Club in Scituate. That's because one of the items to be auctioned is a dive into the New England Aquarium's Great Ocean Tank.

If that's a little too adventurous for some, the live auction also will include a deed to a time share in Maine that can be exchanged for time shares all over the world; a 46-inch, flat-screen television set; a week on the island of St. Kits in the Virgin Islands; dinner for eight provided by the Hull catering company Z-Chef; a private, behind-the-scenes tour of Franklin Park Zoo for two adults and four children; another private tour, this one of the spectacular Frank Gehry-designed Stata Center at MIT; golf and dinner for four at the Black Rock Country Club, and $5,000 worth of orthodontia, donated by Dr. Steve Locke of Hingham who practices in Hull. Veteran auctioneer Dan Flynn will be pounding the gavel.

In at least a couple of instances, the gala committee literally stumbled on items they believe will be of considerable interest to auction bidders. They are autographed copies of a couple of books that were brought into Wellspring's thrift shop, "The Bonfire of the Vanities," by Tom Wolfe, and "Mystic River," by Boston-based author Dennis Lehane.

Besides the 12 items in the live auction worth $1,000 to $8,000, there will be a silent auction, including about 60 items, some of which will be offered as packages. So far, the gala committee, chaired by Meg Lind of Hingham and Margaret Mellon of Hull, has gotten gifts worth $48,000. Those include $1,000 sponsorships and ads purchased by local merchants, amounting so far to $4,500. In addition, there will be a $100-a-ticket raffle for a 42-inch, high-definition plasma TV, donated at cost by Running Solutions in Hull.

"Probably the most fun we've had organizing the auction is coming up with ideas."
— Meg Lind, gala committee

Sitting in her cluttered office at Wellspring headquarters, Lind marvels at the generosity of local merchants, particularly those in Hull, "who consistently have bent over backwards to help us."

Indeed, in the 20 years since Wellspring was just one rented storefront where used clothing was sold to those in need, the organization has expanded into an entire block and grown into a multi-service center providing educational opportunities, psychological counseling, job training, as well as the basic necessities of life. The five storefronts that it now owns on Nantasket Avenue is both a beacon and a destination for their thousands of clients who need help and the many people anxious to give it.

"Probably the most fun we've had organizing the auction is coming up with ideas," says Lind. One of the most original of those, she adds, is a two-hour, chauffeured ride in a pristinely-restored Model A Ford to a destination chosen by the winner.

Lind, Mellon and the seven others on their committee have been working for eight months on the auction. But all the work will have been worth it if the event raises what they hope will be between $45,000 and $50,000.

And it should. Because, on that evening, with everyone dressed to the nines and having a good time, no one will forget what it's all for. Certainly, Wellspring's director, Vinny Harte, won't.

Hard at work in his own office, helping to direct aid to victims of Hurricane Katrina, Harte ticks off where the money raised by the benefit dinner and auction will go.

"A good part of it will go into our education component," he says. "Because the state's Department of Education has made so many cuts. Our transportation program is running well now, but we do need to raise funds because of the high cost of gas. Our housing program, too, is very ambitious. We're looking into purchasing a building, to be able to provide affordable housing and services on site for our Wellspring clients. We've identified a facility, and we're actively pursuing it now. In fact, we've actually signed a purchase and sale agreement." Pausing to consider the size of this undertaking, he adds with pride: "The housing project will fund itself through its rental program."

Harte speaks softly but with great confidence about Wellspring's future plans. And, why not? Looking back at what the organization has accomplished in the past 20 years, there's no reason he shouldn't be confident about the next 20.

Tickets are $75 apiece to the 20th Anniversary Fall Gala, on Oct. 15, 6 to 11 p.m., at The River Club, 78 Border St., Scituate. For more information or to purchase tickets, call Vinny Harte, Meg Lind or Margaret Mellon at Wellspring, 781-925-3211. A complete list of auction items is on Wellspring's web site: wellspringhull.org

CDC to host Broadway benefit for hurricane victims

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

New England is distant from the battered Gulf coastline in miles, but not in heart. As fundraisers continue to thrive in the hope contributions will help ease the pain being felt in areas battered by Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Rita — the Cohasset Dramatic Club is doing what it can to help raise money for the cause.

Saturday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m., talent from every corner of the South Shore will take the stage at Cohasset Town Hall as the CDC hosts "The Best of Broadway," a musical review featuring performances from some of the best-known musicals, both old and new. Tickets are $15 each and can be bought in advance or at the door.

Board member for the CDC and Cohasset resident Lisa Pratt and her mother JoAnn Fichtner, also of Cohasset, have been working to coordinate the show.

"We were looking for something to do as we watched the disasters unfold from Hurricane Katrina and subsequently Hurricane Rita," said Pratt. She said when her mother initially suggested holding a benefit show, she didn't know if it would be possible in a short timeframe, but those contacted to participate quickly got on board and things have been continually moving forward.

Pratt said it has taken roughly five weeks to bring the show together, with many of the cast members taking time from their busy lives to independently study their pieces. "I feel very honored to be a part of it," Pratt said, adding she can't wait for the curtain to go up.

"This will be a phenomenal evening of entertainment."
— Lisa Pratt, Cohasset Dramatic Club

"The talent pool is like none other I've worked with," said Pratt, adding the cast of the show is comprised of many talented people from many towns, including Rockland, Milton, Weymouth, Hingham, Scituate, Norwell, Hull, Marshfield, and of course Cohasset. She said typically, there are two or three "stars" to most CDC shows, and they are all being pooled together for this one night. "Almost no one said no," said Pratt, adding when people heard why the benefit was being held, they couldn't wait to become a part of it.

There will be roughly 23 performances given throughout the night. Numbers will be performed from many musicals, old and new, including "Wicked," "State Fair," "Beauty and the Beast," "The Scarlet Pimpernel," "Snoopy," "Rent," "Cinderella," "Fiddler on the Roof," "Nunsense," and more. Acts will be performed in small ensembles, duets and some solos, and there will be something for everyone.

"This will be a phenomenal evening of entertainment," said Pratt.

The CDC has set a goal to raise $3,000, which will come from ticket sales, raffle tickets, and concession sales after costs incurred. To further help the cause, the company Pratt's husband Jeff works for — Globe Union Industrial Corp. — has agreed to make a matching donation to the Red Cross.

To purchase tickets in advance for "The Best of Broadway," showing Saturday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, please call (617) 697-2115. Tickets are $15 and will also be available at the door. Proceeds will go to the Red Cross to help with hurricane relief efforts.

'Best of Broadway' hurricane benefit

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

OH BOY!

A bouncing baby boy has joined a wonderful family. Alison C. and Scott W. Estabrooks of West Roxbury are the proud parents of a baby boy, Austin John, who arrived on Sept. 1, 2005. Ready with extra hugs and lots of babysitting are Austin's grandparents, Laura and John Doherty, formerly of Cohasset now of Duxbury, and Ellen and William Estabrooks of Goffstown, N.H. Congratulations to all.

CREATURES WELCOME

Kathy Arthur lives next door in Scituate and is a volunteer and foster home provider for the St. Croix Connection Puppy Rescue that brings in young dogs and puppies from the island of St. Croix. Many of the animals are placed locally.

The St. Croix Connection Puppy Rescue and St. Stephen's Church, where Kathy is a member, are sponsoring a Blessing of the Animals. The blessing will occur at the 10 a.m. service on Sunday, Oct. 9.

Cats, dogs, turtles, hamsters and more will be attending the service with their owners for the blessing. It should be a special event. All creatures are welcome!

"The Rev. Cliff Cutler, our pastor has done this before, and says they had a cat wandering through the organ pipes last time which made the event even more memorable," she says.

Kathy says she and Smokey – who was a street dog in St. Croix – hope you there!

Smokey was a street dog in St. Croix who now lives a happy life in Scituate.

TENNIS STAR

Elizabeth Stone of Cohasset helped the Middlebury College women's tennis team open its 2005 season with convincing wins over Skidmore and Bates. The Panthers cruised to 12 straight-set wins in singles action, while giving up just 13 doubles points.

Elizabeth, a first-year player, won both her singles matches to help the Panthers' win. Well done!

AP SCHOLAR

The College Board has recognized Paul Cotter from St. Sebastian's School as an AP Scholar with Distinction. Paul earned this recognition based on his AP Exam performance during the 2004-2005 academic year. Paul, who graduated last June, is the son of Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter of Cohasset. Way to go Paul!

FIVE-YEAR REUNION

The Cohasset High School Class of 2000 is holding its five-year reunion on Friday, Nov. 25, 2005(Thanksgiving weekend) and would love for all classmates to attend. This is a time to reunite, enjoy good friends, good food and memories of your high school years.

The event is being held at the George H. Mealy Post 118, American Legion at 98 Summer Street in Cohasset. Please email cohasset.classof2000@gmail.com with any questions and RSVP's. Make sure to spread the word to all classmates and former classmates.

AT ST. LAWRENCE

St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. welcomes Suzanne M. Lewis as a member of the Class of 2009. Suzanne will participate in the university's first-year program, an introduction to the liberal arts curriculum taught in residence halls by faculty teams.

Clear writing and speaking skills are stressed, and careful advising is provided for all freshmen. Suzanne is a Thayer Academy graduate. Have a super year Suzanne.

FUN ACTIVITIES

The Cohasset Recreation Department has openings available in a variety of classes. After-school sports, music, science and nature and drama are just some of the Fall offerings. For more information, call 781-383-4109 or go to www.onecreativeplace.net

DIGITAL PHOTOGRAPHY

Award-winning photographer Cindy Vallino will present a workshop perfect for anyone who owns a digital camera, and wants to learn more about it. This workshop will help students to better understand the digital camera, make photos look their best, get great looking prints, and explore creative uses for digital photos. The class meets at the Art Center, Saturday, Nov. 5 from 10:30 a.m.–1 p.m. and is designed for beginners and anyone interested in digital photography. Young adults are also welcome. Participants are encouraged to bring their cameras and sample photos. The cost is $60 ($50 for members of the Art Center).

That is the news for this week. All info should be to me no later than Tuesdays by 5.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Britt Arnold Snider

Snider - Dwyer

Kelleen Ann Dwyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Michael Dwyer of Cohasset, and Britt Arnold Snider, son of The Hon. and Mrs. L. Britt Snider of McLean, Va., were married June 11, 2005. The Rev. John R. Mulvehill, pastor, officiated the nuptial Mass at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. A reception followed on the family's beach with a sunset dinner and dancing on the grounds of the bride's family home.

The bride is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy in Hingham. and the Catholic University of America in Washington, DC. Prior to marriage, she was Director of Deferred Compensation in the Office of the Treasurer of Massachusetts. She is currently enrolled in the Master of Business Administration program at American University, Washington, DC.

The groom, formerly with Brown Brothers Harriman in New York, is an Associate in Real Estate Investment Banking at Friedman Billings Ramsey in Arlington, Va. He is a graduate of St. Albans School and Amherst College and received his Master of Business Administration from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The bride's mother is a Realtor with Coldwell Banker, and her father is President of Alliance Funding, Inc., in Cohasset. The groom's mother is Antitrust Consultant at the law firm of Weil, Gotshal and Manges. His father served, among other roles, as General Counsel of the Senate Intelligence Committee and was appointed by President Clinton as Inspector General of the Central Intelligence Agency, from which he retired in 2000. He is currently an adjunct professor at Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

Following a honeymoon in Hawaii, the bride and groom reside in Washington, DC.

Please send in a membership form found at the Scituate/Cohasset libraries, South Shore Community Center, or at www.scnewcomers.com. For membership questions, please call Jen Harris at 544-3910.

Fire department open house is Oct. 15

October is National Fire Prevention Month, and Papa Gino's, in conjunction with the Home Safety Council, is teaming up with local fire departments to help educate the community on fire prevention and potential fires and hopefully save lives.

Sparky, the fire safety mascot, will interact with the children.

For the past 12 years, New England Fire Departments and Papa Gino's have helped more than 1 million people by supplying educational materials and free pizza at fire safety open houses. The Cohasset Fire Department is holding an Open House at Cohasset Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St., Saturday, Oct.15, from 1 - 4 p.m.

Some of the visuals include firefighters demonstrating the way to escape a smoke-filled room, fire prevention tips and training and Sparky, the fire safety mascot, interacting with the children.

For more information about the Fire Prevention Open Houses in your area, call Marianne Sabella at 508-435-2020. For additional information about this open house, contact Captain James Runey at the Cohasset Fire Department.

IT'S HAPPENING

Colonial medicine subject of meeting

Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual meeting and fall dinner Sunday, Oct. 23, from 5:30 to 9 p.m. at the Cohasset Harbor Resort. Featured speakers will be Dan and Judith Grillo with a "Colonial Medicine." program. The Grillo's have participated in revolutionary re-enactment for the past 18 years, Dan having portrayed both a common soldier, and an officer in the militia.

For the Oct. 23 meeting presentation, Dan portrays an American Revolutionary militia surgeon and Judy, a housewife-herbalist. Through demonstration and lecture, the Grillo's present medical theories of the era and the medicinal herbs used in healing. They also look at methods of tooth extraction and transferring teeth from one person to another; smallpox inoculation; the use of leeches; preparation of herbs; and midwifery. Dan has a collection of 18th century instruments, some original and some reproduction, that he incorporates into the program.

The buffet dinner includes herb roasted chicken with garlic herb au jus, and a penne pasta with plum tomato sauce and cheese, as entrées, with Apple Crisp and Vanilla ice cream for dessert. Cash bar service is included. The Cost for members is $31; non-members, $36. For reservations, mail name, address, phone, and number of those attending to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. Make check payable to The Cohasset Historical Society. For additional information or to make reservations by phone, call 781-383-1434.

Buttonwood Books to host author Bill Brett

Buttonwood Books & Toys welcomes Hingham resident and veteran Boston Globe photographer, Bill Brett on Tuesday, Oct. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Hingham Library.

Mr. Brett will host a slide presentation that will include pictures from his book, "Boston: All One Family" with text by Carol Beggy. "Boston: All One Family" is a wonderful collection of 240 black and white portraits of Boston's community leaders. The selected individuals are people whose personal or professional contribution have left a mark on the city of Boston. Included in this photographic panorama are a number of south shore residents.

Bill Brett started his news career selling the Boston Globe on the street corners of his native Dorchester. He first worked at the Globe as an eighteen-year old part-time photographer. In 1977 he was named chief photographer, and in 1999 director of photography. He retired from the Globe in 2001 but continues to contribute his work to the paper. His weekly "Party Lines" column was the inspiration for this book.

This is a free event and the public is welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or visit www.buttonwood-books.com to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Herbalist Lisa Tavakoli

Presentation on herbs and healing

Herbalist Lisa Tavakoli, of Hallowed Herbs, will give a presentation on the Healing Effects of Herbs Wednesday, Oct 11, 12:30 to 1:15p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Tavakoli is a graduate of the Open Doors School of Energy Healing and the Rhode Island Center for Herbal and Ecological Studies. She will discuss the rising popularity of herbs and their use in healing. Audience will be given an opportunity for tasting, smelling, touching and experiencing herbs while listening and enjoying a soothing interactive atmosphere. The event is free and open to all ages.

'The Patch' is back

Beginning Oct. 8 through Halloween, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, the prolific pumpkin patch at Wheelwright Park on No. Main St. in Cohasset, better known as "The Patch," will again abound with pumpkins and all the trimmings. Sale proceeds benefit Cohasset Appalachia Service Project which will be making home repairs in impoverished areas of Kentucky this coming June, 2006.

Help create Pockets of Hope

An emotional appeal for help from Prof. Stuart Baron, Director of the School of Art at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, inspired artists, students and members of the South Shore Art Center to create a collaborative community art project dedicated to raising funds that will deliver art supplies to the evacuees who are being housed and educated in the city of Baton Rouge.

On Wednesday, Oct. 12 from, 3:30-5:30, everyone in the community is invited to join quilters at the Art Center and work on personalizing a pocket to be added to the community quilt. Participants can make their mark in a number of ways. Contributors can bring a 12"X12" swatch of favorite fabric or clip a pocket from a piece of clothing or choose from the pockets that will be on hand at the Art Center. A varied array of pockets will be available as well as materials for decoration. The pockets will then become part of the quilt, and participants are invited to fill the pockets with contributions and personal messages.

For more information about the exhibition and the Pockets of Hope project call 781-383-2787 or email mckenney@ssac.org

LIBRARY CORNER

Local author makes book donation to library — The Paul Pratt Memorial Library announces the recent donation to its collection of Lincoln Bloomfield's latest book "Accidental Encounters with History: and some lessons learned by the author."

In his new book, Bloomfield draws on his experiences in the State Department, the White House and MIT to write about governance through bureaucracies and international politics. Bloomfield, a political science professor at MIT is author of 11 books and numerous articles and news commentaries.

Bloomfield gave a lecture this past June at the library on "The Middle East and the U.S."

Read-a-Thon winner – Cohasset winner of the Boston Children's Museum Read-a-Thon was Olivia Leong. Olivia and her family were invited to celebrate her accomplishment at the Boston Children's Museum. The library extends its hearty congratulations to Olivia and her family.

Books for Katrina – The Children's Room recently donated 35 new books to the children displaced by the hurricane living at Camp Edwards. Books were donated weekly by family and friends of the library. Each donated book included bookplates saying, "A gift to you from your friends at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset, MA," and "This book belongs to…" The purpose of the book collection was to help these children reclaim ownership and control over their lives. The library extends its appreciation to Curves of Cohasset who took the responsibility for the town-wide book collection, provided the drop off location, and delivered all the donations to Camp Edwards.

'Float the Boats' fashion show, lunch

The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) is in the midst of an aggressive fundraising initiative. The two "sliding seat fours" that the group has rented for the last six years are being recalled by their owner at the end of this season.

CMI's goal is to fund raise $30,000 for the purchase of two of its own sliding seat fours. At this time, the group is just about half way there and a "Luncheon and Fashion Show" is being planned to keep the fundraising momentum going. Please plan to join CMI on Tuesday Nov. 8 from 11:30a.m.-2p.m. at the Square Cafe in Hingham. A lunch will be served and "The Sports Closet" of Cohasset is presenting a sportswear and work-out attire fashion show. Tickets are $75 per person ($50 of which is tax deductible) and may be obtained by calling Susan Galligan (781-383-0765) or at Buttonwood Books.

CMI offers Middle and High School rowing programs and an extensive adult program. Help keep ocean rowing alive on Cohasset's waters and join CMI and its' friends and supporters for an afternoon in support of the CMI rowing program.

Photos provide window into history of Children's Hospital

Hingham doctor organized book editors' group

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Mark Rockoff, M.D., resides in a white colonial homestead on Pleasant Street formerly known as the Orchard House, built in 1808 by John Fearing. Isabel Hyams, who bought the home in the early 1900s, turned it into a camp for disadvantaged youths from the South End of Boston, treating them to such activities as trips to Nantasket Beach and picnics at Hingham Harbor.

Mark Rockoff, MD, Hingham resident, and one of the main authors of "Children's Hospital Boston."

Rockoff's study room occupies the same space that was once a very primitive, colonial-era kitchen for one of the two teenaged Fearing sons in the early 1800s. The study houses an eye-opening collection of antique pediatric-care hospital equipment from both England and America, plus original hardcover medical journals, dating back to the 18th, 19th and early 20th centuries, assembled by the doctor over what is now a near 30-year career.

Such interests have made Rockoff — an avid historian as well as Associate Anesthesiologist-in-Chief at Children's Hospital Boston — the ideal candidate to lead the exciting new book publishing project begun just over a year ago in the hospital's Archives Program. The result is "Children's Hospital Boston," the newly released photo-history volume from the Portsmouth, N.H.-based Arcadia Publishing company.

The book is one of the latest titles of Arcadia's Images of America series, which since 1993 has released numerous similar photo-chronology tomes documenting the history of a town or region from the earliest days of photography to the end of the 20th century.

"Most people throughout the United States don't know how old and distinguished an institution the hospital really is."
— Mark Rockoff, M.D., Children's Hospital

Rockoff, who is also Professor of Anesthesia at Harvard Medical School, organized the book editors' committee that compiled "Children's Hospital Boston." The committee included the book's other main author, the Hospital's Associate Physician-in-Chief Dr. Frederick Lovejoy, plus a team comprised of a medical writer, graphic designer, archivist, publicity and marketing consultant and associate general counsel, from both within Children's Hospital and from outside.

"Arcadia's Images of America series is mainly interested in photographic history," Rockoff explained. "And the company produces the series from a formula, where the authors submit photos and the company provides a blank design and layout format for the book. From there, the whole book was assembled by us according to their format."

Like those who produced most of the volumes in Arcadia's well-acclaimed series, the Children's Hospital Boston team did a comprehensive, impeccably researched job in chronicling the history and development of the institution, described on its cover as one of the oldest, most distinguished pediatric medical centers in the world.

The visual tour charts the hospital's story from "modest beginnings" in a single brick house on Rutland Avenue in 1869, then the move to a larger building on Rutland and Washington streets, followed by a relocation to the still-larger Huntington Avenue facility by the turn of the century, and finally to what would become Children's Hospital's permanent, now much expanded home on Longwood Avenue in 1914.

Along the way, there are some remarkable milestones and highlights. Some of the earliest photos detail the progress of ward environments allowing for fresh air and natural sunlight, and on-site farms for specially-bred, disease-free cows for then newly discovered treatment of patients with childhood tuberculosis.

Children's Hospital's part in other historic medical breakthroughs, such as the cultivation of the poliovirus in the early eras, and the creation of angiogenesis research in more modern times, is also well-captured in vivid, as-it-happened photo imagery.

One of the book's images, taken in 1903, depicts the original Huntington Avenue Grounds homefield (pre-Fenway Park) of the original Boston Beaneaters baseball club (pre-Red Sox). The grounds were visible from the upper story windows of Children's Hospital's Huntington Avenue facility. The photo shows that incredibly in those baseball days, fans by the hundreds (maybe thousands?) were free to roam about as they pleased throughout the outfield with games in session.

"My main motivation for the book project was to preserve the history of Children's Hospital Boston and to make it more widely known," Rockoff said. "Most people throughout the United States don't know how old and distinguished an institution the hospital really is."

Rockoff added he and his editors team spent many hours sifting through some thousands of vintage photos, plus early book illustrations, letters maps and documents to finally settle on the 250-odd images that illuminate the book.

"The real challenge of the book was going through all the volumes of material to find what we felt were just the right photos that told the most important history of the hospital and captured just the right moments," Rockoff said. "Also, using the right, most finely written and readable caption text to go with each photo and image."

Born in Jersey City, N.J., Rockoff grew up in Bayonne and later Linden in the Garden State, graduating from Linden High School in 1964. He then earned a bachelor of science from MIT and later an M.D. from Johns Hopkins Medical School in Baltimore. Rockoff began a four-year residency at Massachusetts General Hospital in 1973, then worked in San Diego before returning to Boston to begin a long tenure at Children's Hospital. He's lived in Hingham since 1983.

Open-air treatment, c. 1927. The Convalescent Home featured 20- by 40-foot wooden buildings and sliding doors kept open even during the winter to let in as much fresh air as possible for "nervous patients." In addition, children were regularly wheeled outdoors in go-carts to benefit from the sunlight. These buildings were heated by constantly stoked coal-burning stoves.

Community problem

We applaud the school department for hosting a parent forum Tuesday to air concerns about the recent spate of incidents at the middle-high school that have included threats and vandalism.

Communication can help alleviate fears and put rumors to rest. It's always best to get the straight scoop directly from those "in the know" and not rely on hearsay.

Teenage bad behavior is nothing new in Cohasset. Although Cohasset's Project Safeguard – which provides parents and young people with the information they need to deal productively with myriad social pressures – is doing a great job, in years past there seemed to have been wider community involvement in helping to raise awareness about these issues.

There used to be a "drug and alcohol" committee that looked not only at Cohasset but what other towns were doing to combat behaviors that put our kids at risk.

The town also used to host a "drug and alcohol-free" weekend during which many adults agreed to abstain from alcohol. There were family activities planned over the weekend to increase awareness and to bond as a community.

Some area towns are participating in a program dubbed, "Community of Concern," whose mission is to educate parents and build partnerships to coordinate efforts to keep children free from alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.

It's no secret vandalism and other criminal behavior often have roots in alcohol or drug use.

We attended a "Community of Concern" forum at Hingham High last year following the alcohol-related death of a student in a car accident.

There was a no-holds-barred presentation from the principal and talks by police officers and officials from the district attorney's office, as well as community members. Then participants broke into small groups to brainstorm about ideas to combat negative teen behaviors.

No program holds all the answers, but they can encourage all ages to come together for what is truly a community problem.

Regarding the recent middle-high school incidents, school and police officials have urged students to come forward if they have information about who the vandals are.

However, we learn from a young age that being a "tattletale" has a negative connotation. So we're not surprised if students are reluctant to speak up even with assurances they would remain anonymous.

But the "dinner table" conversation at home should focus about how these vandals and those who have made the threats are hurting the entire school and the community.

Their behavior is harmful beyond the actual acts themselves. Not only is it disruptive but it hurts the reputation of the both the school system, student body and the town-at-large.

As a community, we need to work together to create an atmosphere where this behavior won't be tolerated by anyone. If the perpetrators find out it's not cool and there are real consequences – they might change their ways. Otherwise, these types of acts will only get worse.

As Police Chief James Hussey says, ""This is not a police problem or a school problem, it is all of our problem."

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Phase II of Cook project urged

TO THE EDITOR:

Editor's note: Mrs. McMorris provided the Mariner with a copy of her letter to selectmen.

What happened to the Cook project? Just two years ago senior housing advocates in town were eagerly anticipating the development of our long awaited project. It was to be a joint venture that combined town land with the Cook parcel, providing affordable housing and rental units that are still sorely lacking in Cohasset. Seniors who have been without housing options would have choices within a mixed income community, close to shopping, banks and the pharmacy.

As we know, wastewater disposal became an issue and the choice was made to downsize the project. So what happened to the joint venture? the town land? the apartments – affordable and market? And what happened to the profit?

A prior Board of Selectmen joined with the Board of Elder Affairs and the Senior Housing Committee in hailing the original project because it addressed a long-standing need in the community. The benefits to the public and the Town justified our involvement and our investment. We made promises to the Trustees, their representatives and most importantly to the residents of Cohasset. Based upon these representations the Board of Selectmen was empowered by vote of the Town meeting to do certain things. The Board was not given carte blanche to develop any project they wished.

Thus, your current Cook dilemma, compounded by the threat of litigation, a looming closing date, and most importantly a moral, ethical and legal obligation to deliver the project that is expected. Fortunately, the Board has chosen to work with a development team that includes George McGoldrick, who has consistently demonstrated his personal commitment to the community and to public service.

The remedy is Cook project, Phase II. The concept of phasing the development originates with Fred Koed and was well received at a candidates' senior luncheon this spring. Preserving an easement to the town parcel is an essential first step in the process of getting this back on track. Next, the Special town meeting in December should be asked to amend the Central sewer district by adding the town parcel. The Selectmen can then issue an RFP for the sale and development of 24 – 30 apartments on the land; thereby restoring a key component of the promised project.

Please do not insult us by suggesting that seniors wanting apartments would be "better off" living in a newly proposed arrangement above stores and a restaurant in the village, where they can observe cars coming and going at the town parking lot and the gas station, and people buying their lottery tickets at Tedeschis. That is not "smart" growth, just another way of treating Cohasset seniors like second-class citizens.

In closing, I would ask the Board to bring forward the necessary articles to make this affordable housing project right.

One-way, No-way!

(This letter was in Selectmen's correspondence)

TO THE EDITOR:

My name is James F. Lydon Jr. My parents moved to Cohasset in 1974, I went through the Cohasset Schools from Osgood to high school class of 1984 and my parents still live on Atlantic Avenue.

For all of my childhood years I spent riding my bike up and down Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue, I never had a problem about riding a bike or walking.

I am now proud to say that I have recently purchased a house at 23 Forest Ave.

I'm sorry to say that I think this one-way street proposal by Mr. Clark Brewer is nuts just for the mere fact people pay a great deal of money for these homes and to have their roads made one way is not fair. Have there been any bike accidents with cars or walkers run over? I do not like this proposal. I ride a bike all over Cohasset now that I have moved back, and also jog and walk. I have two children, a boy 11, and a girl 5, and feel they are safe on Cohasset streets, riding their bikes or walking.

No shared roadways

(This letter was in selectmen's correspondence.)

TO THE EDITOR:

I have lived here for 32 years. Since the time the traffic has changed dramatically. We have motorcyclists, bikers, and walkers. They sometimes begin their trips down Atlantic Avenue at 5 p.m., four bikers abreast of each other! "Loudly" talking to each other.

They leave gator bottles on my lawn.

Enough is enough. No shared roadways.

Legislation will help consumers heat homes

Responding to this winter's anticipated double-digit price hikes for home heating oil and natural gas, State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D – Hingham, announced a comprehensive $80 million package aimed at promoting energy efficiency and helping Massachusetts consumers defray skyrocketing heating costs.

The package implements a one year, $800 income tax deduction for home heating expenses incurred by individuals who make less than $50,000 a year and families with annual incomes up to $75,000. Additionally, a credit of up to $600 would be applied to the purchase of such energy-saving products as high-efficiency furnaces, home insulation, new window installation and other approved residential items that use less gas and oil. The combined one-time cost to the state is $57 million.

The initiative nearly triples annual state aid to the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program from $7.5 million to $20 million. LIHEAP combines federal and state funds to help pay home heating bills for 133,000 low-income state residents. Households with incomes up to 200 percent of the federal poverty level would receive maximum benefits of $545 for electric or gas heat, and a maximum of $675 for oil, propane or kerosene heat.

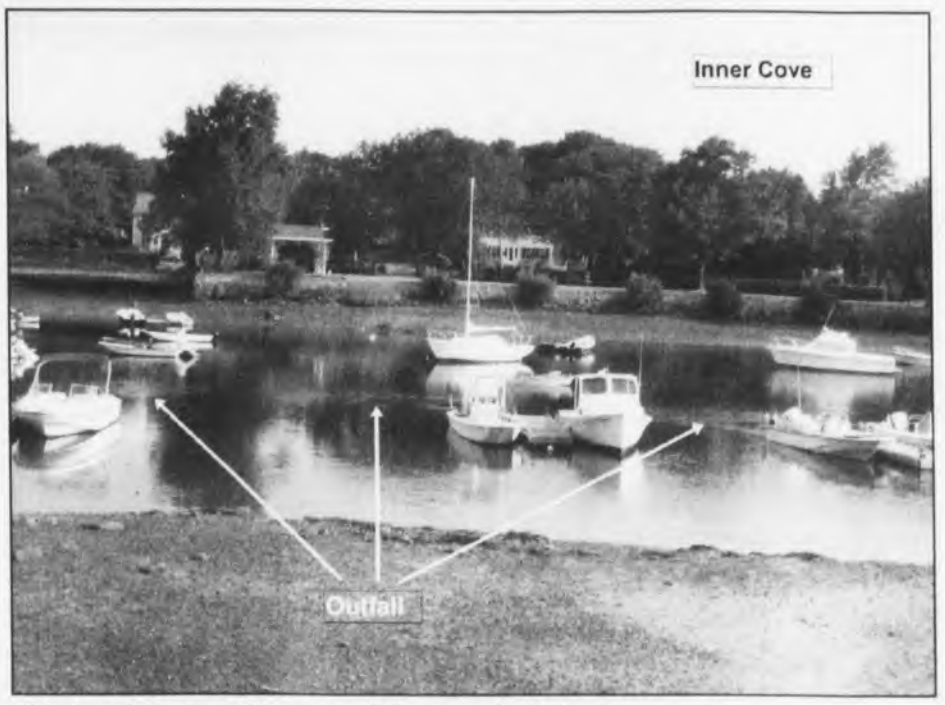
Reclaiming treated water could help harbor health

COMMENTARY

JIM DRYSDALE

Water quality in Cohasset Harbor is improving as seen in the variety and numbers of young fish and the growth of introduced shellfish. Bacterial levels are generally low except after storms and at a few hot spots.



The Inner Cove is an interesting exception. Analyses from the Center for Student Coastal Research show that this area often contains unhealthy levels of fecal bacteria even in dry periods. In the past, much of this was probably due to incompletely treated sewage flowing into the Inner Cove from the outfall in James Brook.

Some could be used for watering and fertilizing nearby gardens and playing fields or for car washes.

However, thanks to a sophisticated membrane filtration system coupled with UV irradiation, the effluent from the new plant contains essentially no bacteria. Run-off from failing septics certainly contributes but this gets diluted and cannot account on its own for some of the high counts. Perhaps other factors in the sewage effluent are indirectly responsible.

Sewage contains three components that can adversely affect the harbor— bacteria, nitrogen and fresh water. The treated effluent presently amounts to about 200,000 gallons a day and is discharged through three diffusers near floats at Fisherman's dock (see photo). Although it contains no bacteria, it provides nitrogenous compounds that allow bacteria to grow and multiply. These compounds are usually present at levels of about 5 milligrams of nitrogen per liter. Although this doesn't seem much, it adds up to the equivalent of about 100 lbs. fertilizer being dumped into the Inner Cove every day.

Other nutrients come from lawn fertilizer, catch basins and fish waste. With high summer temperatures this broth can promote bacterial and algae growth creating turbid and unhealthy waters. At low tides, the large influx of fresh water into this shallow area reduces salinity and may contribute to lobster mortality there. Planned increases to over 400,000 gallons a day with more hook-ups will worsen the situation.

This photo depicts were the sewer outfall pipes are located in the inner harbor.

The harbor would be healthier without this discharge, particularly in summer. It's also a waste of good water, fertilizer and money. At present rates 400,000 gallons of water /day would cost more than $1 million a year. Some could be used for watering and fertilizing nearby gardens and playing fields or for car washes. Conceivably, it might be used to replenish underground supplies if first passed through soil to remove nutrients and other contaminants.

In addition to reclaiming some of this water, another discharge site should be considered. Since an open ocean outfall would be expensive, returning it again to Jacobs Meadow might make sense. This once beautiful salt marsh has now been overgrown with phragmites due to the lack of sea water because of problems with the tide gate. This gate is now functioning again and regulates sea water intake to prevent flooding. The marsh might soon be restored and used to buffer the damaging effects of both the fresh water and nutrients. If discharged at its former site on rising tides, the fresh water would be mixed with a large volume of sea water before entering the harbor. In addition, many of its nutrients would be absorbed by the marsh thereby reducing the growth of bacteria already in the harbor.

What's in a modern name?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If I were running a day care center in New Orleans or thereabouts three or four years down the road I'd be getting my classrooms ready for an influx of little girls named Katrina.

Think I'm kidding? "Nevaeh," or "heaven" spelled backward, was the 103rd most popular name for tots born in 2004...

Something tells me a sizable percentage of the young ladies born around Sept. 1 when the wind was blowing more than 74 miles an hour and the water was six or seven feet deep on Bourbon Street are going to be stuck with that name.

I haven't been faced with the task of naming a small child for nigh onto 40 years at a time when John and Mary were still acceptable, if rather pedestrian, and if you named the kid "Nevaeh" they'd wonder what you had to drink before you got to the hospital.

Think I'm kidding? "Nevaeh," or "heaven" spelled backward, was the 103rd most popular name for tots born in 2004, according to ssa.gov, the Social Security web site. But I digress . . .

Believe me, naming a new born for a disastrous event like a hurricane or a person in the news is much preferable to fighting with the relatives and the in-laws who can't agree on whether the kid should be named for Hezekiah, the rich uncle he'll never see.

A few years ago, as a member of a party of children and adults who never grew up, I visited the Roger Williams Zoo in Providence. One of the kids was a little girl of about 3 named "Madison." The only Madison I knew was a president of the United States. What did I know?

The only Madison that meant anything to anybody in the late 20th century was a movie mermaid who picked her name off a billboard. Now I learn that Madison was the third most popular name for a girl child in 2004 and Mary had long since dropped out of the top 10.

Those who keep track of such things predict that Paris will hit the top 20 as a girl's name when the 2005 list is finalized. That's the name of the star of TV's "The Simple Life," who plays a leading role in a home movie that is shown only on the Internet.

I wonder how many kids in 1995 were named Orenthal James? That's O.J. Simpson, you know. But again I digress . .

For the record, according to Social Security, the most popular boys' names in 1880 in order were John, William, James, Charles and George, and the girls had to bear the lifetime burden of Mary, Anna, Emma, Elizabeth and Minnie.

In 2004 they were Jacob, Michael, Joshua, Matthew and Ethan; and Emily, Emma, Madison, Olivia and Hannah.

Our state of Massachusetts strayed from the herd in 2004, but not by much. The most popular boys' names in the Bay State were Michael, Matthew, Ryan, Nicholas and Andrew; the girls were Emma, Emily, Olivia, Isabella and Abigail.

And the most popular boys' name in Arizona was Jose.

HEALTH NOTES

New viruses present modern challenges

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Perhaps, you have wondered what people were talking about when they spoke about viruses. According to present knowledge, a virus is a submicroscopic parasite that must infect a host cell in order to make copies of itself. The genetic information — the viral genome — is encoded by DNA or nucleic acid.

According to the American Heritage dictionary, vintage about 1976, (in other words, in less complicated times), a virus is any of various submicroscopic pathogens consisting of a core of a single nucleic acid surrounded by a protein coat, having the ability to replicate within a living cell.

A protein is better understood by us as the heavy solid stuff from which most living material is made. Nucleic acid contains the genome which is described by the same dictionary as a complete set of chromosomes. Now, a chromosome is the internal DNA map or instruction manual which comes with every living piece of matter. Each virus encodes its own collection of viral proteins, that enable replication. Studying the virus structure can reveal clues to its many biological functions and lead to specific drug designs based on interfering with the virus replication process.

So, the above paragraph describes a part of the battleground for the fight against AIDS, Avian Flu, the Spanish Flu which killed over 40 million people in 1918, Eastern Equine Encephalitis and all of the flu strains in recent times. In addition, we can include the common cold a rhino(meaning nose related) virus as well as about 3,700 other viruses of 600 classified types which scientists are now studying and of which about 90 types affect human beings.

...the "global village" approach to world trade and travel a "critical mass" have been reached creating an ideal environment for the proliferation and mutation of disease.

Two recent books give a picture of the virus situation: Richard Preston has woven epidemiological fact with the terrifying true story of how a strain of the Ebola virus came to the United States. "The Hot Zone" can be read strictly for its entertainment value, focusing on the specific event of a potentially lethal outbreak of Ebola virus.

Laurie Garrett has written a definitive tome on emerging diseases and viruses: "The Coming Plague". According to Garrett, "Long gone are the 'happy days' of the 50s and 60s, when modern medicine believed it had the beastly microbes well under control."

Although great strides were made against diseases of polio and smallpox, it appears that the optimism of the medical community has been greatly diminished because of the emergence of new ones such as hantavirus, AIDS and others. In a time of extreme overcrowding in major cities, massive refugee migrations, and the emergence of the "global village" approach to world trade and travel a "critical mass" has been reached that has created an ideal environment for the proliferation and mutation of disease.

William McNeill, historian from the University of Chicago, opined that each catastrophic epidemic event in human history was the ironic result of humanity's step forward. According to McNeill, "It is worth keeping in mind that the more we win, the more we drive infections to the margins of human experience, the more we clear a path for possible catastrophic infection. We'll never escape the limits of the ecosystem...".

However, it's not yet time to give up and hunt for a desert island. It is time to have commonsense about the threat of illness and plan for your health needs.

Soon, as described by Judy Fitzsimmons in her interview in the Mariner, we will be announcing a Clinic for the Flu virus. This may or may not be accompanied by a frenzied series of press releases and hyperbole as occurred last year. Regardless of what's said in the popular media, Cohasset will have about the right number of shots for our citizens as we did last year. And we will do everything necessary to have the shots delivered to those who need them.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

The power of language in troubled times

COMMENTARY

MARY JANE HANRON

These are troubled times for America. Unprecedented challenges abound across this great nation. Some are the product of unspeakable evil, misguided intentions and selfish motives. Others quite simply, are relentless and unforgiving forces of nature.

From these tragic and difficult circumstances arise incredible acts of heroism, tender gestures of kindness and images of unwavering strength and faith. It is impossible for this country of compassion to watch television scenes of destruction without feeling sad or to read of suffering without shedding tears. Every story of fear or tragedy evokes a desire for guidance or a need to pray for the salvation of souls.

As the nation watches, listens and reads another misfortune unfolds around us. Though gradual and subtle, it is a seemingly innocuous deterioration with devastating ramifications. The slow but steady demise of the English language is to be mourned in a manner similar to the catastrophic situations it so aptly describes.

Some may say these are merely words. It is action that matters. This is true; however words inspire deeds, motivate individuals, narrate history and create memories. Proper use of vocabulary can sooth souls and solidify faith.

...words inspire deeds, motivate individuals, narrate history and create memories. Proper usé of vocabulary can sooth souls and solidify faith.

As this beautiful language dies a slow death, it does so at the hands and mouths of those who are educated, intelligent and yet sadly unaware of the errors of their ways. Today, even professionals "invent" words rather than use the existing ones appropriately.

Last week, an account of selectmen's recommendations referred to the problem of "signalizing" an intersection. An anchor on a respected national cable news station explained that she was "efforting" to obtain a connection with a correspondent.

The final motivation for this commentary came a few days ago when a friend's fourth grader was sent home with an assignment to "observate." Apparently his teacher was unaware that people "observe" or "make observations." Fortunately, the young student's parents, both of whom received a classic education explained the proper words to him.

Of course some words have infiltrated the dictionary because they are spoken so frequently even though there are perfectly acceptable terms with identical meaning that have existed for decades. Is there a situation in which the "pseudo" word, "signage" must be used because it conveys a different meaning from the word, "signs?" Are there times when "functionality" has a definition different from "function?"

In the scheme of things today, concern about the deterioration of language may seem petty. But language and expression sustain us in difficult times. Many turn to books of faith for reassurance and solace. Centuries old, these pages of thoughtful narration are timeless. This nation was formed by men who found eloquent and powerful words to describe the principles by which the new republic would abide. This language remains as inspirational and true today as it was when it first was written.

Leaders speak to us in memorable ways providing information, comfort and determination. We speak to each other to share feelings, ideas, hopes and fears. Language holds the capacity to bring people together, to stir emotions and the sense of responsibility needed to help a neighbor, love a relative, or support a cause.

These are troubled times. As we face them together as families, neighborhoods, towns and a nation, let us use the gift of words. The power of deeply expressive language provides a first step toward opportunities to heal, to comfort and to grow.

May we cherish the English language, use it well and honor its importance in the history and the future of our country.

Police provide update on school bomb scare

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is a small town where news travels fast, and the police department is banking on that fact to help bring the investigation of the Sept. 26 bomb scare at the middle-high school to a close.

Police Chief James Hussey spoke to a small crowd of parents and school administrators Tuesday, Oct. 4 at a forum held in the middle-high school library. The forum was called to provide more information for parents from the school and police departments, as well as give parents the opportunity to provide input. The bomb scare is the fourth in a string of incidents which have brought police to the middle-high school in the past five months.

"This is not a police problem or a school problem, it is all of our problem," said Hussey.

Last Monday, Sept. 26 at approximately 1:30 a.m., Cohasset police responded to an alarm at the middle-high school to find a torn screen on the first floor in the middle school section of the building. Hussey said when the alarm sounded, officers were able to respond to the scene in roughly 45 seconds because they were on patrol at the intersection of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A when the call came in.

Hussey said responding officers discovered messages written inside the school which indicated there might be a bomb in the building. A note depicting the same message was also found on the door at the main entrance.

Hussey explained during bomb scare situations, the police conduct a sweep of the building and look for anything which is "out of place." When the police went through the middle-high school, they found a suspicious package which did not look like it belonged, and in turn, the Boston Bomb Squad was called down to investigate. The package was x-rayed and was found to be a calculator in a carrying case.

The building was also thoroughly searched by administrators when they arrived at the scene and there were no other suspicious items found. Parents were notified of the incident early Monday morning via a Connect-Ed pre-recorded telephone message, and were told it was safe to send their children to school. Middle-high school principal Joel Antolini said aside from the police presence at the school until roughly 1:30 p.m., the day was normal with roughly 95 to 96 percent of students in attendance.

"We've all been disrespected," said Hussey, as a result of the incident, adding the police department is working hard to find out who is responsible, but it will take the help of the entire community.

The community is also being asked to help with the investigations of three prior incidents. On May 11, students were evacuated after a bullet and threatening note were found outside the school just before 6 a.m.

On June 14, graffiti was discovered on walkways and on the athletic department golf cart. The messages left indicated the likely culprits were members of the class of 2005.

On June 28, the last day of school, vandals struck again. Windows were smashed and several exterior walls were painted with profanity and obscene illustrations. Shrubs were pulled up from the ground and strewn about by the entrance to the main office. The golf cart was targeted again, but this time it was turned upside down in front of the school's garage doors.

The police collected evidence at all four crime scenes. The note from the bomb scare will go through a handwriting analysis. Hussey said in addition to a technical analysis, teachers have been asked whether any of their students have similar penmanship. Hussey said technicians working with the note also worked with the note left during the May 11 incident. "The technical people will tell us if the writing is similar," Hussey said, to help determine whether the same person was involved in both incidents.

Fingerprints were lifted Monday and the police department is working on finding a match, or matches. The prints will be run through a database, however, only the fingerprints of those with previous criminal records are on file. Hussey said therefore, if the person or people who commit any of the crimes at the school have not been charged before, their prints will not be on file. Hussey said at this point, the police department is not ruling anyone out, including those who are not students.

Since last Monday's incident, the police have followed up on leads and some potential suspects have been brought to the station to have their fingerprints taken. Hussey said often, taking the prints allows suspects to be ruled out and clears their names.

Hussey said he understands the incident is still causing anxiety for both parents and students, which is why the police department needs all the help it can get to solve the case.

"We have some (students) that are very uncomfortable even a week later," said Hussey, noting the youngest students in the building are in the sixth grade and roughly 11 or 12 years old.

Although the police department will continue to work with what it has, any tips that can be given are greatly encouraged, no matter how small they may seem. The police department has set up an anonymous tip line where messages can be left regarding any of the incidents. There is no caller ID function on the phone, and the line is answered by a voice mail system.

Hussey said it is important for students at the schools to remember to keep their eyes and ears open for any behaviors which seem suspicious and might indicate involvement in any of the incidents. If any students have information, they may also speak to someone at the schools who can relay the information to the police anonymously as well.

An anonymous tip line has been instated at the police department. Callers may reach the tip line by dialing (781) 383-1055 and entering extension 1050 during the auto attendant message. The tip line is a voice mailbox that is answered only by the voice mail system and does not contain any additional features that would identify the caller such as caller ID. Anyone with information on the threatening note and bullet incident, two vandalism incidents, or the bomb scare, are encouraged to call.

Parents flock to forum on school safety at CMHS

whether currently the administration feels the buildings are adequately secure.

"Has a security audit been done?" she asked. Williams said she wanted to be sure videotapes are in good working order and doors are being locked even during the day to ensure student safety.

High school assistant principal Michael Gill said while the administration is comfortable with the level of security currently in place at all three schools and is confident that the security systems are working, there is always room for improvement. "We're not done yet," he said.

Williams said it is also important for parents to know who is ultimately in charge of security at the schools. "Who is our champion of security?" she asked.

Walsh said at every school, the issue of safety ultimately rests on principal's shoulders.

But some parents said they believe the schools should be doing more than installing surveillance equipment and locking doors.

One parent said after the incident with the bullet and note — where children were required to evacuate the building — she returned to school the next day to find all the students entering the building with their backpacks full, but none was checked. Considering the severity of the threat from the day, she asked an officer on duty at the school why the bags weren't being checked for weapons. She was told checking the bags would be a violation the students' civil rights.

The parent said she didn't understand why when she goes to a baseball game, her bag is always checked, but a police officer at the school can't check a student's bag.

Hussey explained police officers do not do routine security checks on bags because "If we find something, we can lock you up," whereas a security officer could only deny entrance or confiscate the item. "Police can't check your personal belongings," said Hussey, which includes school lockers, without probable cause.

Walsh pointed out the school has every right to search bags or lockers without police involvement. She added some school districts have metal detectors for that purpose. However, Gill pointed out metal detectors aren't always the answer, as they cannot detect explosives if they are made of plastic.

Susan Butler, a parent, asked whether all students could be required to have their fingerprints taken.

Hussey said at this point, only those students who are thought to be connected to the incident are being brought to the station for fingerprinting. However, "If people want to voluntarily bring their child in, I'm sure we wouldn't turn them away."

Katherine Goldhammer, another parent, said she is a "worst-case scenario" kind of person, and she worries the bomb scare incident is something that could be an escalation of behavior. "I think checking backpacks at the door and school-wide fingerprinting is a good idea," she said.

PSO president and parent Sarah Porter asked why children were put into a "lockdown" situation and then evacuated after the note and bullet were found, but not for the bomb scare.

High school principal Joel Antolini explained because ammunition was found with the note, it made for a much more serious situation. There was nothing dangerous found during the bomb scare, and because the incident happened so early in the morning, the police had much more time to secure the area and determine it was safe. After searching the middle-high school, the police checked the other two school buildings and determined there was nothing that would prohibit any child in Cohasset from going to school that day.

Protocol

One parent said she would like to see the evacuation protocol looked into some more. She said during the note/bullet incident, she went to the school and picked her child up because she felt keeping the children in a central location could put them at risk. She said if there is a next time, she has instructed her child to "just get on a bus and get out of school."

Walsh said, however, the police department is always on hand when there is a lockdown situation to ensure the students are safe. During the note/bullet incident, students were not being evacuated because they were in danger, but because the school department wanted to be able to open the building up completely to the police to allow them to work undisturbed. "We wanted the building clear," she said.

Antolini added for a parent to instruct his or her child to get on a bus other than their own may cause more trouble. "If all parents did it, there would be chaos," he said.

Gill said there are emergency plans in place, and in some cases, "Your child is safer in the building than outside." He said the police department is always contacted before children congregate in any area, and the premises is searched first. "If we send students to the football field, the police will look there too," he said.

One parent asked what parents should instruct their children to do during an emergency to keep themselves safe.

"Follow the direction of the administration," said Hussey.

The parent asked what children should do if there is none, such as if the teacher has gone to the restroom. "They ask these questions because they are little and they don't know what to do," she said.

The parent was assured there are emergency plans in place for teachers to follow which are included in the school's teacher handbooks.

Diane Perkinson, another parent, said the incidents which have taken place at the middle-high school are a real worry to the community, and people are hoping it doesn't happen at the other schools. She suggested leaving more lights on at night at the schools.

Melissa Grasz said she worries that if every time a threat is made, it turns out to be nothing, her son and other students might not treat things as seriously if one day the situation does become a real emergency.

Hussey said that is why it is very important for parents to talk to their children and explain that this is "very important business."

Walsh added even though the gut reaction to a threat might indicate there is no real danger, "We treat everything as if it is until we hear differently."

"Unfortunately, this happens in the real world," Hussey said, and the schools are a small microcosm of society.

Parent, Mary McGoldrick, suggested because the problem is a community-wide problem, perhaps there should be a community-wide meeting held to discuss the issues. "We need to get out the message we won't tolerate this," she said.

Another parent also noted because the meeting was held at 9:30 a.m., it was very difficult for working parents to attend and a follow-up meeting should be held in the evening.

Antolini said there was a lot of thought put into the meeting time and place. The school administration settled on the morning meeting to allow parents to be in the building while school was in session, to see that things are running smoothly and the incident has not affected the work that is being done, he said.

Hussey said he will be using the media to get the no-tolerance message out to the community, and assumes the parents who attended the forum will speak to their friends and neighbors. He said it is extremely important for people to play a role in solving the problem. "This is not about protecting Johnny Jones because he really is a good kid."

Hussey said it is important for parents to know where their children are at night, and anyone who knows of any students, who were out after midnight last Sunday, should inform the police.

School committee member and parent Adrienne MacCarthy pointed out some students may not feel comfortable coming forward with information, even if they are told they can remain anonymous. "They may worry if they turn someone in, and it gets out, they'll be ostracized. It's such a small school community that it's a real leap of faith," she said.

Hussey assured parents any information provided would be kept strictly confidential.

An anonymous tip line has been instated at the police department. Callers may reach the tip line by dialing (781) 383-1055 and entering extension 1050 during the auto attendant message. The tip line is a voice mailbox that is answered only by the voice mail system and does not contain any additional features that would identify the caller such as caller ID.

Timeline of events

May 11: students are evacuated after a bullet and threatening note are found outside the middle-high school just before 6 a.m.

June 14: graffiti is discovered on walkways and on the athletic department golf cart at the middle-high school. The messages left indicate the likely culprits are members of the class of 2005.

June 28: the last day of school, vandals strike again at the middle-high school. Windows are smashed and several exterior walls are painted with profanity and obscene illustrations. Shrubs are pulled up from the ground and strews about by the entrance to the main office. The golf cart is targeted again, but this time, it is turned upside down in front of the school's garage doors.

Sept. 26: Cohasset police respond to an alarm at the middle high school at approximately 1:30 a.m. Responding officers find a torn screen on the first floor of the middle school section of the building. Further investigation leads officers to find notes inside the building which indicate there is a bomb in the school. A note on the front door depicts the same message. The Boston Bomb Squad is called to investigate a suspicious package.

Annual Town Meeting schedule takes shape

Town Manager Bill Griffin has prepared a tentative schedule leading up to the 2006 Annual Town Meeting.

"While I understand the Annual Town Meeting is eight months away, we do need to commence the budget preparation process in about eight weeks," he wrote in a memo to selectmen.

Griffin's proposed schedule is as follows:

Oct. 24, 2005: Fiscal summit to be held.

Oct. 28, 2005: Budget forms issued to department heads.

Nov. 23, 2005: Budget forms due to Town Manager.

Nov. 28 to Dec. 9, 2005: Town Manager holds budget review sessions.

MONDAY DEC. 5, 2005: Special Town Meeting

Dec. 30, 2005: Town Manager issues budget message.

Jan. 3, 2006: Budget message presented at public meeting.

Jan. 9 to Feb. 3, 2006: Selectmen and advisory committee budget sessions.

Jan. 13, 2006: Deadline for submission of Town Meeting Articles.

Feb. 6 to March 16, 2006: Selectmen and advisory committee article review.

March 17, 2006: Town Meeting booklet sent to printer.

March 24, 2006: Town Meeting booklet mailed to citizens.

SATURDAY APRIL 1, 2006: Annual Town Meeting.

Griffin said the dates are not set in stone and he would be checking to make sure the moderator is available for the dates of the meetings, that all deadlines are being met, and no conflicts with holidays would take place. A final schedule will be presented to the board of selectmen in the near future.

McMorris: rental units are a must

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If former selectman Ronnie McMorris has her way, there will be a "phase two" for the Cook project.

While it may be too late to change plans to allow Deer Hill Partners — headed up by Cohasset resident George McGoldrick — to build a combination of market rate and affordable ownership housing on the Sohier Street site, McMorris would like to see rental units built on an adjacent portion of town-owned land and connected to town sewer.

McMorris came before selectmen Tuesday and read a letter she had written to the board. She said it was always the town's intention to build rental housing on the Cook site. She said many cannot believe the board has chosen to go with a project with only ownership housing. While she said the town has chosen an accomplished developer in McGoldrick, it has always been the intention of the town to provide rental housing for seniors in their 70s and 80s on the Cook site.

McMorris requested the board take the initiative and bring forward the necessary articles at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting to allow rental housing to be built on the town-owned land. The process would include securing an easement from Deer Hill Partners to access the land, as well as permission to add the town parcel to the Central sewer district.

"The point is, there are no apartments. That was the identifying need which led us to discuss working with the Cook trustees" in the first place, she said.

Taking a look back in time, voters at the November 2003 Annual Town Meeting approved the purchase of 22-acres of Cook land for $4.5 million, to be marketed to developers with the town's adjacent 8.7 acres, with the intention of selling the parcels together for a profit. Selectman Michael Sullivan presented the article, which outlined the project would likely have 42 rental units, 28 of which would be affordable. It was expected the project would have a total of roughly 85 units. A minimum bid price of $5.2 million was set.

When wastewater problems arose on the site, it was determined the project must be scaled back in order to move forward, to bring flows down to a level that could be accommodated on site. A town sewer connection was ruled out as an option. While Northland Residential had been awarded the original bid, the significant downsizing of the project required it go back out to bid to satisfy Massachusetts procurement laws. The second time around, Deer Hill Partners, which had come in second during the first bidding process, was awarded the bid. The company plans to build 55-units of housing on the site.

Due to the reduction in scope of the project, the board of selectmen voted to remove the town's parcel of land from the deal. McMorris would like to see roughly 24 to 30 apartments built on those 8.7 acres.

Selectman Sullivan said while the concept makes sense, trying to bring the matter forward to Town Meeting in December may be too soon. "It may make more sense to get it (phase one) further along," he said. Currently, the town is working to finalize the Land Disposition Agreement — a document similar to a purchase and sale — with Deer Hill Partners. Runner-up Cohasset Associates has threatened to sue the town if the board of selectmen doesn't rescind its vote to award Deer Hill Partners the project, which has complicated matters.

However, selectman Gary Vanderweil said he does not want to see the town's land built at all. "I'd like to keep it as greenspace," he said.

McMorris said when Town Meeting voted to purchase the Cook land, it was under the impression there would be apartments built and that the town land would be included in the transaction to allow it to make a profit. The town will spend $4.5 million to purchase the Cook land, and Deer Hill Partners is paying $4.9 million to the town. The town has incurred at least $200,000 in non-refundable costs related to the project. McMorris said selling the town's portion to a developer who would build apartments on the site would remedy the situation the town is currently in.

McMorris reiterated, "apartments for Cohasset seniors is the driving force behind discussions with the Cook trustees."

Vanderweil said he believed the reason behind building senior housing on the Cook site was to provide empty-nester housing which would be a less expensive alternative to living at Cedarmere.

However, McMorris said after 10 years of working to get senior housing built in town, "I believe I understand what the driving force was behind it," she said.

Selectman Rob Spofford, who was the lone vote in favor of runner-up Cohasset Associates — which would have built 65 units of mixed ownership and rental housing — said in his opinion, the issue of whether to build apartments or not "is dividing this community." He said the board should take McMorris' suggestion and bring the issue to the town, to let voters decide whether or not they would like to see apartments built on the town's land "What harm does it do to put it back to the community? My sense is, if we don't do it, somebody else will anyway," he said. Citizens can put an article on the Warrant if they can collect 100 signatures.

However, Vanderweil said he doesn't believe there are enough residents in the town who want to see apartments built.

"You and I may be talking to different people," said Spofford.

"I have yet to speak to anyone who believed there wouldn't be apartments," echoed McMorris.

Joe Nedrow, formerly of the senior housing committee, said the town-owned land was approved to be the site of senior housing at the November 2003 Town Meeting which began the Cook negotiations process. He said he doesn't understand how it could just be taken off the table.

The board met again Wednesday for the purpose of going into executive session to discuss other Cook matters. In open session, after having 24-hours to think about it, it unanimously voted against bringing the article forward in December. Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said at this point, the board doesn't have the track record to ask that of the town, seeing as phase one hasn't even begun.

But that doesn't mean the issue is dead, as citizens may choose to band together to put two citizens' petitions on the Warrant which would ask for the right to build the apartments and hook them up to town sewer. Articles are due by Oct. 12.

The letter written by Ronnie McMorris can be read in its entirety in the Letters to the Editor on page 12.

Cohasset Associates continues to protest

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset Associates believes it has every right to protest the award of the Cook project to Deer Hill Partners.

The developer sent a Notice of Protest to the board of selectmen Aug. 29, which was responded to by Special Counsel Myrna Putziger from Rubin and Rudman, LLP.

While Putziger told Cohasset Associates' attorney Charles Humphreys the protest "is without merit," Humphreys disagrees and responded in a letter dated Oct. 4.

Cohasset Associates believes by awarding Deer Hill Partners the bid to build the Cook project, the board of selectmen has directly violated the Request for Proposals that dictates what the town would like to see built on the site. The company says the RFP and the Town Meeting vote — that allowed the town to move forward to negotiate building on the Cook property — both require rental units, which the Deer Hill Partners project does not propose.

Putziger had responded that neither the RFP nor the Town Meeting vote required rental units because the land was only required to be developed for senior housing in accordance with the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay District bylaw. The bylaw does not require rental units.

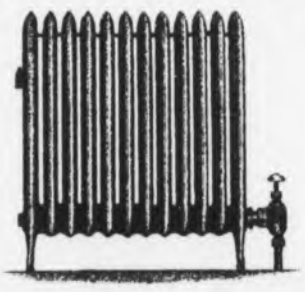
However, Humphreys says while he acknowledges the Town Meeting vote did not specifically establish all the criteria and proposal submission requirements, the detailed development guidelines and other requirements set forth in the RFP were to be developed by the selectmen, consistent with the representations made by the selectmen and their consultants.

"The board of selectmen represented that it would create affordable apartments, not condominiums," he stated in the recent letter to Putziger. "Those representations were carried forward in the graphics presented at Town Meeting. This obviously raises a substantial legal question as well as the issue of good faith particularly when taken in the context of the selectmen's decision not to use an advisory committee in the selection process."

Humphreys also said the successful bidder is required to sign the Land Disposition Agreement attached to the proposal and negotiations of the LDA are not an option.

"I am not aware that the tentatively designated developer specifically identified and proposed a change in the LDA to eliminate rental units," Humphreys states, but points out the LDA specifies the developer shall enter into an affordable housing agreement and the number of dwelling units, which are to be rented as affordable units, shall be identified. He says the LDA states "it was a requirement of the RFP that affordable units in the condominium units be kept affordable in perpetuity."

Humphreys also says the agreement defines "affordable units" as "residential dwelling units in the multi-family residential unit that are to be rented to eligible households."



"...The Town stated that an important criteria was the number of affordable units. Since by definition, affordable units must be rental units, the board of selectmen has ignored the substantive bidding requirement placed on all bidders to the great disadvantage of those bidders who adhered to the bidding requirements," he stated.

The board of selectmen met with Putziger in executive session Wednesday to discuss how it will respond.

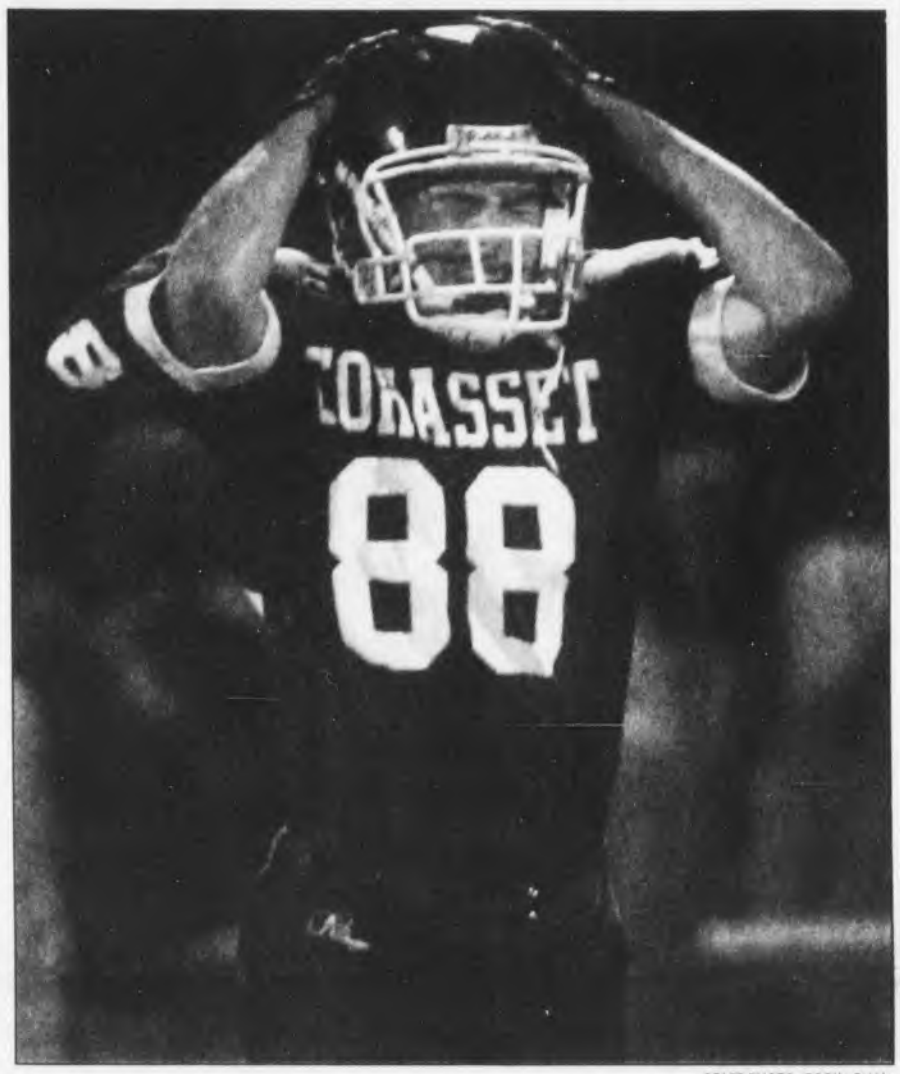
Rough Sailing

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

You've heard the old sports cliché, "Play to win: don't play not to lose."

The Scituate football team played to win last Friday night.



On their first possession of the second half against Cohasset, the Sailors had enough confidence in their offense to go for it on three fourth downs - two in their own half of the field. They made all three, leading to a drive that lasted nine minutes and effectively iced a 7-0 win for the visitors.

The stands were packed for this one. With the visiting bleachers closed, Cohasset and Scituate fans rubbed elbows in the home stands. Many were forced to stand, and parking was at a premium, as some were forced to park in the street and on the other side of the high school.

The fans - which included players from every level of the Scituate-Cohasset youth football program - witnessed a rugged, defensive battle that would be won or lost in the trenches. As it turned out, the big guys for Scituate were just a little better on this evening.

The Sailors were able to grind out 144 yards on the ground, but more importantly, they held the ball for 16 out of a possible 20 minutes in the second half. Although none of that time of possession resulted

Golf team clinches tournament berth

When the Cohasset golf team made a list of goals in the beginning of the season, right at the top were: 1) win the South Shore League and 2) make the state tournament.

Well, they can put a nice big check next to number 2, as Cohasset came up with a big win over Mashpee on Tuesday, giving them the seven wins they needed to qualify.

In the win at New Sudbury Country Club (Mashpee's home course), Charlie Czerkawski won medalist honors with low score of 40. Czerkawski won 5.5-3.5 over his opponent, giving Cohasset valuable points out of the fifth starter spot.

Playing at number-3, Zach Murray won 7-2, while finishing the day with a 41. Also lending an important hand in the win was Chris Bryan and Mike Devlin. Bryan won 6-3 out of the No. 4 spot, while Devlin - playing out of the No. 6 spot - won 6.5-2.5, shooting a career best 43.

Co-Captain Kevin Barber said afterward he has a lot of confidence in his teammates.

"Chris Bryan has been one of the best players on the team, as well as Zach Murray," he said.

Coach Torin Sweeney noted that Devlin's round was "huge" for the team. Sweeney continued on to say, "Beating Mashpee was crucial, as they're in the driver seat for the league title, but we beat them twice."

Sweeney also said he was impressed with the team's overall performance.

"For the last four (Devlin, Bryan, Czerkawski, Murray) to win their matches was big, especially when they hadn't seen that course before," he said.

With the win, Cohasset clinched a spot in the state tournament, but both Sweeney and Barber placed the South Shore League title as the most important objective right now. The team has two league matches left against Carver (Oct. 11) and Abington (Oct. 13).

"Abington's home course, Strawberry Valley, is tough, and Carver is playing well, winning

Improve to 5-3 with victory over Mashpee

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Despite having a small squad, the Cohasset boys soccer team finds itself in good position to again make the state tournament.

Last Friday's 4-2 win at Mashpee improved the Skippers' record to 5-3, as - with 10 matches still to go - they are more than halfway to the nine wins necessary to qualify.

Cohasset has had only 15 athletes at their disposal in recent games, forcing everyone to play extra minutes. The team has been playing well, however, and one of the reasons is a new look on defense.

Starting with last week's 3-1 win over Norwell, head coach Rob Leary has been playing four in the back line. The quartet plays in a diamond formation, with Sam MacDonald playing the stopper role. Leary said that set-up has been advantageous, as it allows MacDonald to move forward more.

The Brady brothers, Trevor and Danny, have been playing well at the wing back position, and Evan Deutsch has moved into a sweeper role. Leary said the formation worked well against the Clippers, and he has been sticking with it since.

The offense continues to be paced by Aidan Buick and Andrew Clarke, who combined for three of the four goals in the win over Mashpee. The offense was there despite an injury to winger Chris Ofsthun, who missed a good portion of the match with an ankle injury.

The team was boosted, however, by the return of midfielder Sam Roth, who missed the Norwell game due to illness. Keeper Prescott Busk also made

Girls suffer disappointing loss

By Mark Goodman

Mashpee has long been a thorn in the side of the Cohasset girls soccer team, and last Friday's match was no different.

The Skippers (4-3 overall, 3-2 South Shore League) had their chances against the visiting Falcons, particularly in the first half. But they couldn't take advantage on enough of them, and wound up with a 2-1 loss.

Head coach Deb Beal said her team started out playing well, but after a while started playing down to the level of an opponent that, quite honestly, is not as good.

"I'm not taking anything away from Mashpee at all, they played a good game. I know that we can play better," Beal said. "The ball movement was not where it should be. Mashpee outplayed us to 50-50 balls. We were a bit timid and I don't know why."

Cohasset got on the board first, when Emily Coggins made some nice moves to work herself into shooting range and put it away. The Skippers had momentum after that goal, and got the chances to score more goals. Torey Hart had a few decent opportunities, but Mashpee keeper Elizabeth Stickley did well to stop them.

As the game wore on, Mashpee began playing with more intensity, culminating in an equalizer with 18 minutes left in the game. At that point, Beal said her team "fell back on its heels" a little bit, and wound up allowing a late goal to account for the 2-1 final.

The forward line for Cohasset played well, helping carry the run of play and keeping up the pressure in Mashpee's third of the pitch. Where the team struggled, Beal said, was in transition.

The coach praised a couple girls who were filling in for injured teammates. The team was without midfielder Maggie McGoldrick and defender Katie Bolger. Kristin Monaco stepped in for McGoldrick, with Caren Garber and Haley Haracz filling in for Bolger.

"I applaud them in their efforts; they were thrown into a position that they don't regularly play and made the best of the opportunity," Beal said.

The Skippers suffered an injury during the game as well, as keeper Melissa Crowley-Buck hurt her knee while challenging a Falcons attacker. The senior will have her knee checked out today, and in the meantime, Shalea Daly will take over as the starting goalie.

"I think she has been working hard and is ready to help us out," Beal said of Daly. "I know that Melissa will be directing her, because it is impossible for Melissa to sit still and watch. I hope the sideline is ready for her!"

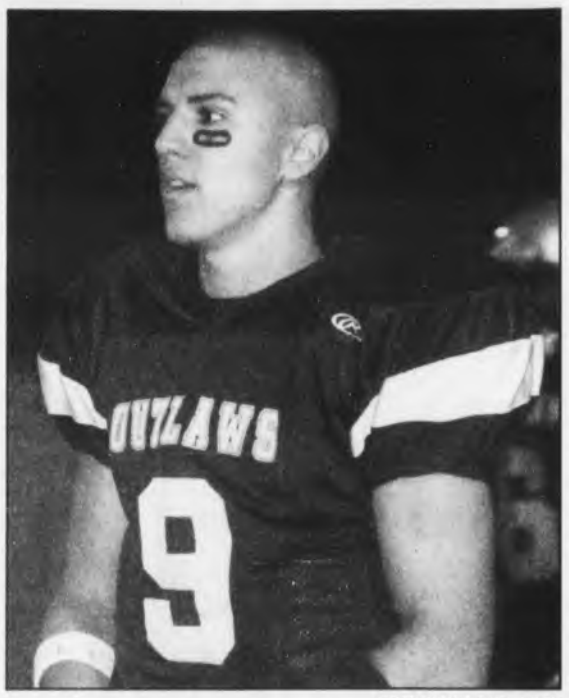
The coach was not, however, about to use injuries as a reason for the Mashpee result.

"I can make excuses for the loss, but we all know we were not functioning as a unit that afternoon and we will work to find a solution," Beal said.

In Tuesday's practice, the girls took a break from the usual routine and played 5v5 for about an hour. Beal said the team was communicating and scoring during the session, and is hopeful that will carry over into games.

Cohasset was scheduled to take on Holbrook on the road Wednesday afternoon, but the game was postponed due to the recent EEE scare in Holbrook. That game has been re-scheduled for Oct. 25.

The Skippers were scheduled to travel to Abington yesterday, and will host Carver on Tuesday at 4 p.m.



"A win at Abington will be a good opportunity for us to shake up the league a little," Beal said. "Norwell is the top dog, but if they suffer a league loss to, say, Abington, and we pick up one, you never know."

The girls finish next week with the always fun trip down to the Cape to take on Harwich next Friday. Cohasset defeated the Rough Riders, 7-1, on Sept. 22 at Alumni Field.

Outlaws have breakout season

Semi-pro football team shooting for league title

South Shore Outlaws free safety Jim Yaitaines during Saturday night's game with the Worcester Wildcats.

Two years ago at this time, members of the South Shore Outlaws had just finished up their inaugural season. It didn't go so well, finishing with a record of 0-9.

Fast forward to 2005. The Outlaws have three full regular seasons in the books and the times have changed. The once winless team heads into the New England Football League playoffs with a 10-0 record, already clinching the AA Division title.

The Outlaws have come alive.

"It's pretty awesome," said captain and free safety Brian Rezendes, one of a small handful of players who started with the team in 2003. "We try to do our best and leave it on the field. The only difference this year is we're winning."

In two weeks, the Outlaws begin post-season play. They received a first-round bye after winning their division. They play at home – Plymouth South High School – on Saturday, Oct. 15, in a semifinal matchup.

"I expect to see our best football coming up," head coach George White said. "I expect the guys to come out and play their A game. I expect us to take this. I think we've got the team to do it."

When the playoffs begin, the Outlaws will make their second trip to the post-season. They snuck in last season with a .500 record.

"It came down to the second-to-last game last year," said Rezendes, adding that the team would've done better if it had a healthy lineup. "We had a lot of guys beat up who had to sit out. We weren't prepared and we weren't healthy. (Now) we know that we have a bye and home-field advantage."

Rolling through the 2005 season resulted from of an incredible offensive output coupled with a stingy defense that came up big during critical moments of every game.

"With the early success, we were not sure how we'd do," White said. "Early on in the first four games, we were still playing just to win. After the sixth game, we were undefeated, and the pressure was building."

But the Outlaws didn't buckle. They kept up their torrid pace. Quarterback Jim Yaitaines locked into a zone. He earned two NEFL Player of the Week honors. The first came on Aug. 6, in a 35-26 win over the Whaling City Clippers. Yaitaines threw for 350 yards and four touchdowns. In a week nine win over the first-place Seacoast Hawks, Yaitaines won the award again, posting 380 yards and five touchdowns on a 15-for-24 performance.

"He's incredible, and he has tremendous arm," White said. "It's hard to believe he's only 20 years old."

Yaitaines joined the Outlaws in 2003 and has seen the team grow over the past three seasons.

"It was a tough ride, but this year, you just knew it was different. We came in there, and we knew what we had to do," said the 2003 Stoughton High School grad. "We're out there each week to prove a point. We know what it's like to be on the bottom. We don't want anybody in our way. We can't wait (for the playoffs)."

In addition to Yaitaines and his core of receivers — Andre Barboza, Ron Balcius, and Joun Frasier — a tough backfield duo in tailback Dave Glassman and fullback Brian Lewis, from Plymouth, have defenses begging for mercy.

"We're very confident in who we have on both sides of the ball, and that's helped out a lot," said Lewis, a 2001 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School. He also played for Nichols College. "In high school, I had that type of offense, but it was not as efficient. We can throw everything at them. One play can turn into seven plays. And Jimmy's unbelievable. He knows the playbook inside and out. It's been unbelievable."

On the other side of the ball, the defense has made plays when it's counted the most.

"With new schemes, the defense has really helped us," Rezendes said. "We're getting turnovers on hurries and knockdowns, and every time we're fourth-and-10 or fourth-and-goal, that's when we come through. But we've tried to stay modest. We don't overlook anybody."

With the confidence ready to carry them into the playoffs, White expects his team to keep up the pace.

"We play to our competition," White said. "We play our best against quality teams. I expect nothing different."

Lewis has the same feeling, and he doesn't want the season to end in two weeks.

"It's been a ride and a half," Lewis said. "We have 11 guys going out there and duking it out each week. Hopefully we keep on rolling with it."

their last three matches," Sweeney said. "But if we can shoot to our capabilities, we can win out."

As it stands in the South Shore League, Mashpee is first with a record of 5-2, with Cohasset sitting in second at 5-3, and both Harwich (4-3) and Norwell (4-4) right behind.

Cohasset v. Abington and Cape Cod Academy

Playing a tri-match on Monday because of a cancellation with Cape Cod Academy earlier in the year, Cohasset sure didn't let it get to them, winning both matches.

Murray shot a 38 playing out of the No. 3 spot, winning medalist honors on the day. Murray won both matches 6.5-2.5. Playing out of the No. 4 spot, Bryan won his Abington match 8-1, but tied the CCA No. 4, 4.5-4.5.

Czerkawski continued his fine play out of the No. 5 spot with a 45, winning both matches (6-3) against Abington and (5.5-3.5) against CCA. Following the match, Sweeney couldn't help but be impressed with Murray's performance.

"Zach has been the steadiest player, especially playing in a tough No. 3 spot," he said.

Sweeney also praised Czerkawski's fine play of late. The coach has instilled a system in his players where they know that any points are good, so even halving a hole is critical.

"As a team, we have really jelled," Sweeney said. "It's a good group."

Cohasset 42, Quincy 30

The Skippers picked up a non-league win Wednesday afternoon at Furnace Brook Golf Course in Quincy.

Barber earned medalist honors for the match, shooting a one-over-par 36 on the par-35 course. Bryan was next in line with a 39, followed by Mark Bouchard (43) and Czerkawski (45).

Freshman John Wade rounded out Cohasset's top performers, shooting a 51 and earning 8.5 valuable points for his team.

in points, it was enough to keep control of the game.

The Scituate line of Fred Hayes, Nick Mullin, Mike Lyons, Cory Perkins and Jake Nervi were able to get enough of a push off the line to allow backs Colby Hawkins, Jay Milkiewicz and Mike Prouty to get some tough yards.

Cohasset's Dan McCarthy, P.J. McCaw and David McKenna weren't missing many tackles, and did well to hold Scituate to mostly three- and four-yard gains. Those were enough, however, for Scituate to have drives of 14 and 12 plays, the latter running out the last seven minutes of the game.

While the offense played tough, it was the play of his defense that gave Scituate head coach Pete Saba the confidence to go for it on those fourth downs.

"I felt defensively we were playing so well that if we didn't make it, we would hold strong and keep Cohasset off the board," said the coach. "With that said, I thought we'd make it each time."

Sailors junior quarterback Gary Crowley helped convert the two fourth downs in Scituate's end. The first was a two-yard QB keeper over Lyons on a fourth-and-two that was just enough for the first. On a subsequent fourth-and-one from the Sailors 49, Crowley ran a play action and found junior wide receiver Sam Brigham open on the right side for an eight-yard gain. That play was made possible two snaps earlier, when on second-and-25, Crowley hit senior wideout Joe McCarthy for a critical 22-yard gain.

Crowley said afterward he was not surprised the offense stayed out on the field for all those fourth downs.

"If we can't make those plays, then we shouldn't be out there to begin with," he said. "Our line was doing a good job of pushing forward, and we wanted to use that to our advantage."

Cohasset's best opportunities to score came in the first half, as they ventured into Scituate territory twice. With backup quarterback Brian Hill taking the snaps on this night, the Skippers tried to establish the run with McCaw and tailback Shane Dorian. Similarly to Scituate, the Cohasset running attack was grinding out three or four yards at time.

Early in the second quarter, the Skippers had a third-and-3 at the Scituate 43, but a fumbled exchange in the backfield was recovered by Prouty, who played an excellent two-way game for the Sailors.

Turnovers were the story for Cohasset (1-1-2), as they fumbled it away three times in the first half. Skippers head coach Tony Rolfe said execution is something that will be discussed at this week's practices.

"We'll address it. I don't think we have to fix anything specifically," Rolfe said. "We had some people in some unfamiliar roles, and that affected us."

The Skippers coach said he was pleased with how his defense played, as they allowed just the seven points despite being on the field nearly the entire second half. Rolfe also did offer praise for Scituate's performance.

"I thought [Prouty] hurt us defensively with his blocking and running," he said. "I thought their skill kids played very, very well."

It was three big plays from one of those skill position players, Milkiewicz, that led to the only points of the game. On a drive that started at the Sailors 49 with 3:42 to go in the second quarter, the Sailors junior running back had runs of 10 and 25 yards to get Scituate into the red zone. After a penalty gave his team a first-and-20 at the Cohasset 25, Milkiewicz took a toss to left side, broke a couple tackles, and reversed field to find his way to the end zone on a beautiful run.

Milkiewicz converted the extra point, and with 1:18 to go in the first half, the scoring was done for the night.

As Rolfe pointed out, the silver lining for Cohasset is that this was not a South Shore League game, so the loss does not have an effect on the team's postseason aspirations. The Skippers will kick off their league schedule this afternoon when they host Carver at 4 p.m. (in a game originally scheduled for 7).

The Sailors begin their Patriot League schedule this weekend as well, when they travel to Kingston to take on Silver Lake tonight at 7.

Boys continue on winning note

Andrew Clarke celebrates his first half goal against Norwell last week. Clarke has been getting his share of goals lately, scoring another one in last Friday's 4-2 win over Mashpee.

FROM VICTORY, PAGE 17

a couple quality saves on point-blank opportunities for Mashpee to help preserve the win.

Looking at the second half of the season, yesterday's home game against Abington kicked off a critical and busy stretch of the year. That match with the Green Wave is a rematch of the Sept. 24 encounter which, despite an overwhelming advantage in shots and possession, Cohasset lost 3-1.

"The kids have really been looking forward to this game," Leary said.

Cohasset is next in action on Tuesday when they travel to Carver. The Skippers defeated Carver two weeks ago by a 5-0 score, but Leary is expecting a more difficult challenge on Tuesday. He said the narrow Carver field will negate Cohasset's speed to some extent, and that the Crusaders should in general be an improved team since the first game.

The Skippers will get a true test next Friday when they host South Shore League leader Harwich in a 3:30 p.m. game. The Rough Riders' only league blemish so far this season is a tie to Norwell; Cohasset lost, 2-1, down in Harwich earlier in the season.

The Harwich game is the first of a three match in four day stretch for the Skippers, who host Scituate on the 15th and travel to Cardinal Spellman on the 17th.

SPORTS NOTES

Soccer Boosters pancake breakfast

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters will be holding their annual Pancake Breakfast on Sunday, Oct. 16 at the Deer Hill Elementary School from 8 a.m. to noon.

The breakfast is the group's major fundraiser for the year and the proceeds benefit the high school soccer program. The boosters provide the warm-up suits for the varsity teams and the scholarships for the graduating seniors.

The breakfast includes pancakes, sausages, bagels, donuts, juice, coffee and tea. The cost is $5 per person or $20 per family. The student-athletes will be selling tickets at various high school sporting events and youth soccer on Saturdays, or you can arrive on Sunday and purchase at the door. There will be a raffle drawing for all ticket purchasers that will be drawn at the breakfast; you need not be present to win.

The boys and girls teams will be there serving and greeting our visitors. There will also be a fundraising car wash that morning. Come join us for breakfast and have your car washed.

Travel basketball registration

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will conduct registration for grades 5-8 travel basketball teams for boys and girls on Saturday, Oct. 15, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for this program is $75 per player and checks should be payable to CBBC.

The intent for the 2005-06 season is to further develop the travel basketball program by expanding both the number of teams in each age group, coupled with a longer season. Coaches are needed and may sign up at registration for coaching slots.

In order to accomplish this, an earlier than usual registration is necessary. Registration details regarding grades 1 and up, Saturday Recreation Basketball program will be coming soon. The date of registering will be Saturday, Nov. 5, and at that time there will be a Multi-Sports program registration.

Details regarding the Nov. 5 registration will be available via local news media and coming home via school in the near future.

Baseball club looking for players

Henry's Baseball Club in Waltham is looking for players between the ages of 17 and 40 to play in its current fall ball league.

Games are played on Sunday's at 11 a.m. The club plays year-round, with a winter indoor league and spring competition also.

The club is also looking for coaches, helpers and volunteers. For more information or to sign up, call Henry at (781)891-0621.

Seadogs tryouts

The first in a series of clinic/tryout sessions for the nationally renown Seadogs/AAU Travel Team Baseball Program's 2006 season will be conducted Sept. 10-11 at fields in Braintree, Norwood and East Bridgewater.

The Seadogs will field seven teams in 2006:10-and-under through and including 16-and-under. Players are selected from a series of clinic/tryouts held throughout this fall. The cut-off day to determine proper age group for 2006 teams is July 31, 2006.

The 2005 Seadogs enjoyed their most successful season, highlighted by the 12-and-Under team's Silver Medal performance in the AAU National Championships.

2006 Seadogs Clinic/Tryouts Schedule

U10 - Oct. 29-30, 8-10:30 a.m. at SSBC, Hingham.

U11 - Oct. 29-30, 8-10:30 a.m. at SSBC.

U12 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at SSBC.

U13 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m-1:30 p.m. at SSBC

U14 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at SSBC

U15 and U 16 - Oct. 29-30, 2-5 p.m. at SSBC

"We want every interested player to have a shot at making the roster, in addition to learning more about playing baseball at the clinic," SSBC director Frank Niles, Jr. said.

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships held all across the country.

The Seadogs program is intended to supplement, rather than replace, local Little League, Babe Ruth, or American Legion baseball programs.

For more information about SSBC or the Seadogs call 1-GO4-HITS/(781) 749-6466 or visit its Web site at www.ssbc.com.

BUSINESS NOTES

Good Fella's pizzeria is 'Best of Boston'

The results are in and it looks like Boston's Best Pizza is located right here in Cohasset.

Good Fella's Pizza of Cohasset recently won the prestigious award competing against 25 Boston area pizzerias. A crowd of about 1,000 people crowded the decks of the USS Salem in Quincy to sample pizza and vote for their favorite. In addition six judges sampled all the entries and awarded the 2005 title of Boston's Best Pizza to Good Fella's in Cohasset center.

Joe and Pat Armstrong opened Good Fella's back in July 2004 and have become something of a local "phenom." Famous for signature pizzas such as their award winning Taranto Pizza, with marinated grilled chicken, broccoli, tomato and roasted garlic with a bechanell sauce. These pizzas sound like something right off the menu in an exclusive Italian restaurant.

Good Fella's is located at 105A Ripley Road. The pizzeria may be a bit hard to find but it is certainly worth the trip. The number is 781-383-0020.

Cedarmere contractor begins construction

J. Read Corp., a multi-disciplined contracting firm headquartered in Hingham, has begun construction of Cedarmere, a 41-acre condominium complex located on the Hayes Estate off Beechwood St. in Cohasset.

Project developer Leggat McCall Properties LLC of Boston, bought the property from King Taylor Cohasset LLC for $17 million in April and plans to build 105 units of senior housing on the site. Twenty-five percent of the units are affordable and the complex is restricted to residents over 55 years old.

"When Leggat McCall purchased the property, we were already deeply involved in pre-construction budgeting and logistics for the project," noted John Goslin, president of J. Read Corp. "We had developed a strategy for site development clearing roadways and utilities, enabling Leggat McCall to hit the ground running when the green light was given," Goslin added.

Homes are expected to be offered for sale.

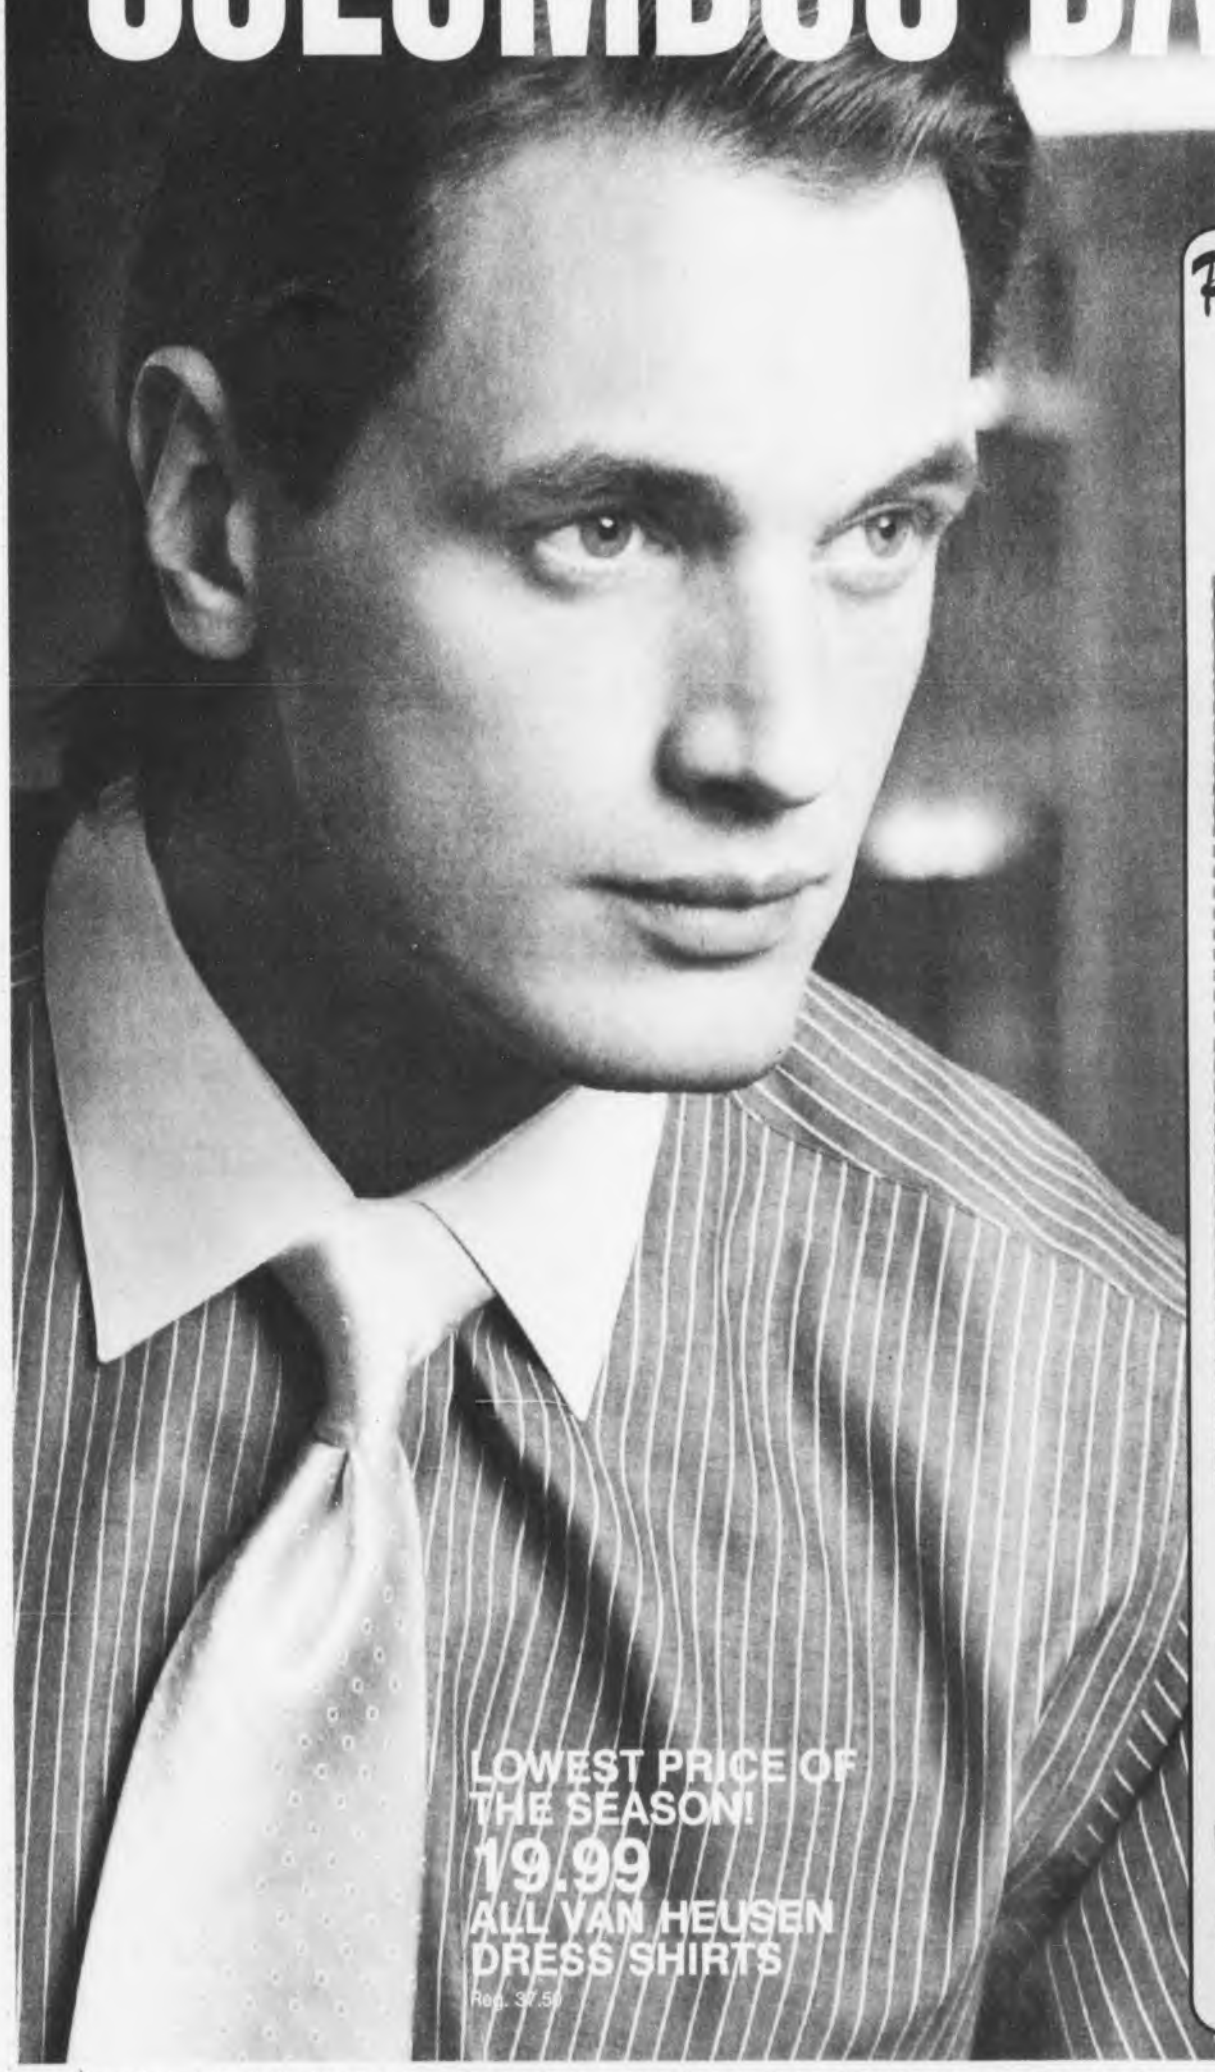
Stop & Shop helps Jimmy Fund

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company announced the Cohasset Stop & Shop store raised $26,500 as part of the 2005 Triple Winner Game. The $26,500 is part of the $4 million raised in Stop & Shop stores across New England to benefit The Jimmy Fund.

The Triple Winner Game is a scratch card promotion in which every ticket is an instant winner, offering prizes of a free product, gift certificate or cash prize up to $10,000. Throughout the summer, store associates sold $1 Triple Winner Game tickets at the checkout.

As it has in the past, the World Champion Boston Red Sox partnered with Stop & Shop to help promote the Triple Winner program.

Bermuda Shop opens



The Bermuda Shop, a boutique specializing in women's and babies' clothing and accessories, has opened at 3 Stagecoach Way in Cohasset Village. The boutique carries an individualized and sophisticated collection of women's apparel for all ages and styles. The Bermuda Shop features lines from Geiger, Karen Warren, Lilypod, Tailor New York, Fabrizio Gianni and Tie One on New York, among others.

Owned and operated by the mother-daughter team of Pamela Ryan of Essex, Conn., and Elizabeth Thompson of Pembroke. The Bermuda Shop in Cohasset is the sister store to co-owner Ryan's existing store in Mystic, Conn.

Adolescent parenting lecture series at library

Licensed school psychologist Alan Jacobson, Ph.D., will present a three-part lecture series for fall and winter on issues concerning parents and their adolescent children, at the Paul Pratt Library. The lecture series is sponsored by The Social Service League of Cohasset.

As director of Bayview Associates, Dr. Jacobson runs a large out-patient program treating adults, children, and adolescents in individual, group and family therapy settings. His experience includes consulting to area schools and community groups for the past eight years. A columnist on mental health issues for the Patriot Ledger newspaper, Jacobson developed the noted "Bully Busters" workshop program.

Talking to Kids about Sexual Activity – Thursday, Oct. 13 from 7 to 8:30 p.m., will address parents' concerns over the ever expansive world of sexual activity and information to which adolescents are exposed. Attention given to approaching young teens on the subject, and techniques and tips for handling delicate information.

Bully Busters - Managing your Child's School Environment – Friday, Nov. 4 from 10 to 11:30 a.m., will discuss the nature of bullying from all perspectives. Emphasis on assisting children in dealing with a bullying situation. Focus paid to why children bully, who bullies are, likely targets, and empowering witnesses. Attention also given to helping the bullying child.

Building Self Esteem – Winter session, will focus on the hallmarks of low self-esteem, the potential causes, and methods of bolstering a child's self esteem over the long term.

The lecture series is free and open to public. For more information call Social Service League at 781-383-0771.

Helpful tips about talking to teens

Do you need help talking with your teen? Ideas to enable them to resist peer pressure? Project Safeguard again presents "Active Parenting of Teens and Preteens" with Jan Tedeschi, facilitator. Insight into today's teen pressures and issues combined with valuable information on communicating about drug and alcohol use, teen sexuality, and violence will be covered.

The two-hour, fast moving, six-session series will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Tuesdays beginning Oct. 11. A morning and evening session will be held and parents will have the flexibility to attend the alternate session if needed. Many Cohasset parents have raved about the practical, helpful information they have learned from the series.

For further information and to sign up, call Jan Tedeschi at 781-982-7007.

Recreation signups

The Cohasset Recreation Department, via a joint effort with One Creative Place is announcing program registrations for a variety of preschool through grade eight programs currently being accepted.

Registrations may be completed via the forms coming home through school or the materials outside the recreation office, First floor, Town Hall, or you may register on line at www.onecreativeplace.net. All programs are scheduled to begin the week of Oct. 3. For more program information, call One Creative Place at 781-383-2211, or the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Prospective one-day Cedarmere residents Cathy and John Higgins of North Scituate look over the site plans for the development. There will be both market-rate and affordable units available for purchase once construction is complete.

Scituate resident John Thompson gazes at the model which depicts the soon-to-be-built Cedarmere community. The site will feature ownership condominiums for active seniors 55 and older, as well as ownership condominiums.

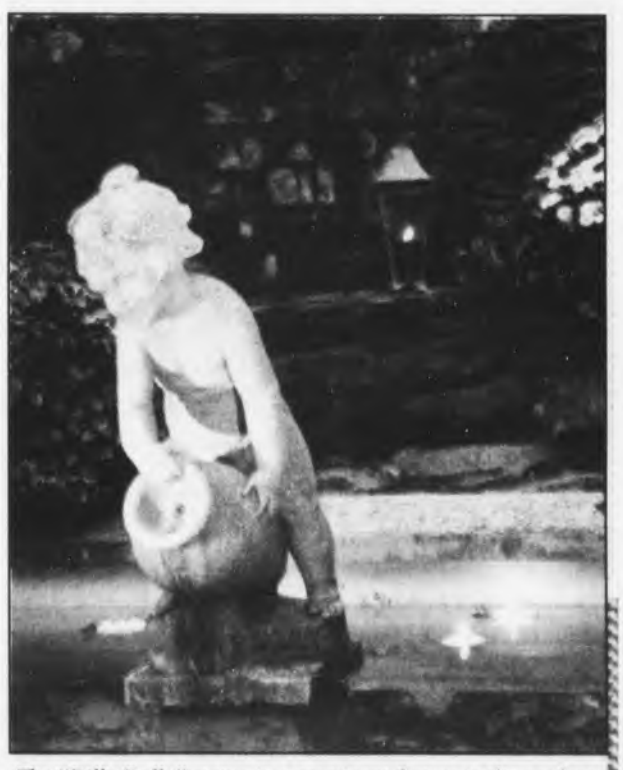
Cedarmere introduces development to the community



Photos by Laura Sinclair

Garden party attendees were given an overview of the plans for Cedarmere, which will include 105-units of age-restricted housing on the 41-acre former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street. Developers Leggat-McCall will be building the project.

Elegant refreshments greeted guests as they entered the Manor House at Cedarmere during an open house garden party Sept. 28. The Manor House will be transformed into senior housing once construction of the site gets underway.

The "Dilly Dally" statue is a prominent feature in the gardens at Cedarmere. While the surrounding area might now be bare, groundbreaking on the site will take place soon and housing will begin to take shape.

Arc, art team up for Oct. 15 event

The Arc of the South Shore will host "Art from the Heart," an art show and wine tasting fundraiser to showcase the artistic talents of children and adults with mental retardation and developmental disabilities. The heartwarming event will be held on Oct.15 at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, from 5 - 8 p.m. Attendees will be delighted by a wide array of art and fine wine, and have the opportunity to participate in a silent auction. The event runs in conjunction with "Piecing it Together: Rhoda Cohen, Radka Donnell, Sylvia Einstein, Beatriz Grayson, Nancy Halpern and Ruth B. McDowell," an exhibition of art quilts by six New England premier quilt makers, running through Oct. 23.

The co-chairs for this year's event are Donna Green, a well-known Cohasset artist, and Richard Frye, president of the Frye Agency in Braintree. Frye, a resident of Braintree and active community member, has been involved in The Arc of the South Shore since 1974, where he has served as President, Vice President and member of the Board of Directors. Green, who owns the Donna Green Studio in Cohasset, has published 14 illustrated children's books, including "The Velveteen Rabbit." Her original paintings hang in many prestigious private collections around the world, including a piece purchased by the White House during the first Bush Administration.

The Arc of the South Shore, headquartered in Weymouth, has provided advocacy, support, training and services to South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities since 1951.

The Arc of the South Shore, headquartered in Weymouth, has provided advocacy, support, training and services to South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities since 1951. The non-profit organization serves more than 1,500 individuals and families each year. The Arc of the South Shore provides services to 10 South Shore towns, including: Braintree, Quincy, Weymouth, Randolph, Milton, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate, as well as various other communities throughout greater Boston and Cape Cod.

Donna Green, local artist, is co-chairing the event.

Tickets to the "Art from the Heart" art show and wine tasting are $50 each. To purchase tickets or to make a donation to The Arc of the South Shore, please mail checks payable to The Arc of the South Shore, and mail to 371 River Street, Weymouth, MA 02191. LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

SEALED AND DELIVERED

A hearing instrument's earmold must seal the ear properly to provide the wearer with a secure fit and prevent acoustic feedback. At the same time, the earmold must be easy for the wearer to insert into the ear, as well as cosmetically appealing. An earmold is an individually fabricated ear insert that channels the sound reproduced by the hearing instrument receiver to the eardrum. Earmolds come in two basic styles, concha and canal. Because each is capable of providing an equally effective acoustic seal, it is the hearing specialist's experience and expertise at taking the ear impression properly and studying the structure of the wearer's ear that largely contribute to a successful fitting.

In order for you to receive the full benefit of your hearing aid, our relationship with you merely begins with its custom fitting. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we will also advise you on how to care for it, we'll inspect it periodically to be sure it is operating properly, and we'll provide repairs and access to batteries and other accessories you may need. In short, we are a full service hearing health care center at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, with you, our valued customer, our main concern. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a free hearing test, so we can evaluate the status of your hearing.

P.S. If an earmold does not fit properly, the wearer can be exposed to the annoying noise known as feedback.

DESTINATIONS

A taste of Europe in Quebec

Sidewalk cafe on Petit-Champlain Street

Water fall at Park de la Chute-Montmorency

Saint Louis Gate in Old Quebec

By JENNIFER ROES

QUEBEC CITY, Canada -- Europe is fantastic. It's historic, it's scenic, it's full of life. It's also a costly, trans-Atlantic flight away, and the home of the dollar-walloping euro.

Quebec City, on the other hand, is just a 6 1/2 to 7 hour drive from Boston, and has the largest Francophone civilization in North America.

Full of charming cafes and tempting shops, Quebec is a dead ringer for a quaint European town. That is, of course, except for the economic advantage the U.S. dollar holds over its Canadian counterpart.

And despite a preference for French, it is hard here to find anyone who doesn't speak pretty darn good English.

Looking for some girl time, a friend and I checked into the Dominion 1912 (rates from $144 to $261 depending on season; www.hoteldominion.com; 888-833-5253) a chic boutique hotel located just outside the walled city.

Our room was an exercise in understated elegance -- dark wood furnishings and white down comforters and pillows -- and boasted what we deemed the most comfortable beds we'd ever slept in.

Steps from the front door was a row of inviting restaurants and intriguing shops and after settling in, we settled on Le Brigantin for dinner. A pitcher of sangria -- the Spanish libation seems to be popular in this city -- was the perfect treat after a day of driving.

The next morning brought a surprisingly decadent continental breakfast at our hotel (included in the room price) -- think fresh croissants and pate -- before we headed off exploring.

This is an eminently walkable city. Even a haul up the hill to Old Quebec, the only walled city on the continent north of Mexico, wasn't all that difficult -- for those who want to save their legs there is the "funiculaire" ($1.30), a sort of elevator to the top.

In Old Quebec, the place to go for the city's history and lots of restaurant choices, it's virtually impossible to get lost -- every road will eventually bring you back to the Place d'Armes and the Chateau Frontenac, the world-famous, spire-topped hotel built on the site of the castle which housed the governors of New France for two centuries.

For a little culture, you'll want to check out one of Quebec's many museums. We hit the fine arts museum, Musee du Quebec, which offered great displays of work by prominent Quebecois artists -- though like us you may find yourself more interested in the jail cells in one wing of the museum -- the facility housed inmates during the 20th century.

The museum is in the Plains of Abraham in the Upper Town, which is also the place to get a feel for the city's night life. We checked out Le Grande Alle street. On the advice of our tour guide, we dined late-night at Voodoo Grill and asked our waiter about the scene upstairs at Maurice Nightclub. Not only did he give us two women, the skinny, he personally escorted us and showed us around when we had finished dining. The club didn't disappoint, with a good crowd (mostly 20- and 30-somethings) and a great mix of '80s, '90s and Top 40 music for dancing.

Nighttime is actually key to the Quebec experience. Even at 11 at night you'll find people on the streets -- and not just the party crowd, either. People of all ages -- even some families -- strolled and talked and people-watched and, since some shops were still open, even did some souvenir shopping.

For outdoor recreation the place to be is the Plains of Abraham (formally Battlefields Park). The 265-acre park, site of the famous battles between the English and French in 1759 and 1760, is a popular spot for walking, biking, rollerblading and myriad other activities.

For even more natural wonder, check out the Montmorency Falls, located just a 20-minute drive outside the city. These falls, though quite narrow, are at 272-feet high actually taller than Niagara Falls. Take the cable car up and walk the narrow bridges over the falls, then descend the seemingly endless wooden staircase back to ground level.

Just past the falls is the bridge to the Ile d'Orleans. The island reminded us of Martha's Vineyard, but in French. A scenic road follows the water's edge, passing small shops including a chocolaterie where we bought yummy chocolate maple spread. The island is also home to several vineyards where you can sample, and if you desire, purchase, the wares. A specialty of the area is cassis, a liqueur made from black currants. After sampling the different versions of the liqueur, we were informed that the creme de cassis was great not only as an after-dinner drink but also as a topping for a dish of ice cream. Sold.

Busy sightseeing days plus blistering hot weather (on our summertime visit) made for some very tired and achy tourists, so I refreshed at Izba Spa, on Rene Levesque Boulevard, near the Grande Alle and the Plains of Abraham. The spa's Regular Izba ($73) combines a massage, "banya" (steam room) and a "health break" with tea or juice and fresh fruit.

But don't fill up. Dining in Quebec is a treat. Just blocks from our hotel was Toast, on Rue Sault-au-Matelot inside the charming Le Priori hotel, where we enjoyed lunch on the outdoor patio -- the patios of most restaurants in Quebec are tucked away from the street, a refreshing break from the hubbub of traffic and passers-by. Toast's iternationally inspired menu was reasonable ($10-15 for a lunch entree) and the food was both tasty and artfully presented. Dishes include Nova Scotia lobster, Quebec rack of lamb, and salmon tartar.

At many restaurants, you'll find "poutine Quebecois" on the menu. Just for kicks, we decided to try the dish, french fries with cheese curd and gravy. Not something you'd want to eat every day, but certainly a unique experience in local cuisine.

Be warned -- as in Europe, the dining experience in Quebec is a leisurely one. Your check, for instance, may take some time to arrive. While this is nice when you want to relax for awhile, it can be a bit frustrating if you're eager to be on your way.

For the most part, though, we enjoyed the opportunity to slow down and experience life the European way, or Canadian equivalent thereof, with plenty of interesting history, great food and, of course, wonderfully friendly locals (goota love those Canadians).

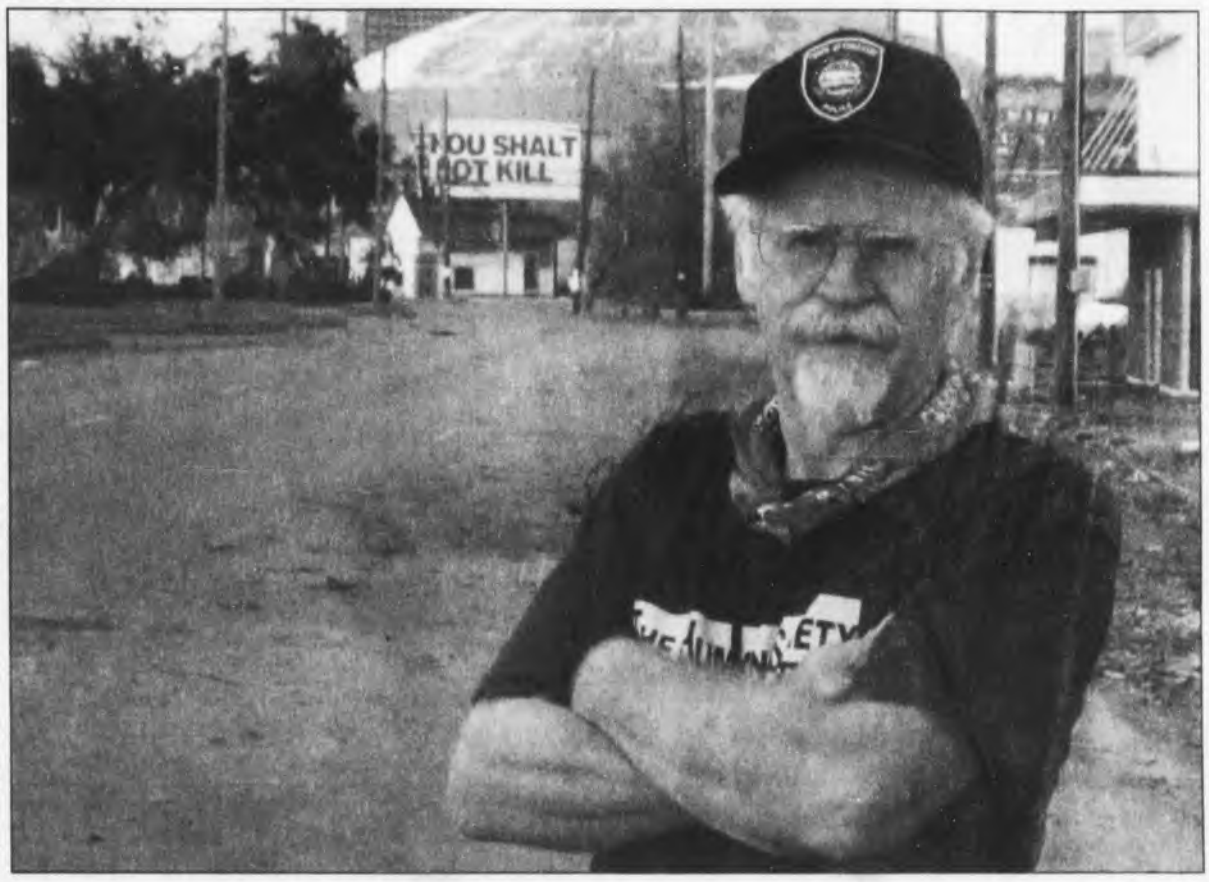
From Cohasset to New Orleans – to help the animals

ACO reflects on his journey

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Paul Murphy remembers one puppy – a small poodle-terrier mix – that was so hot and thirsty, it climbed in the tray of water and sat down.



"The little guy was behind a chain-link fence," recalls Murphy. "We passed over a kitty-litter tray filled with water. First he put his front legs in the tray to take a drink – then he jumped in and sat down with water right up to his chest."

Murphy, 66, who serves as the animal control officer for both Cohasset and Norwell, has a lot of stories to tell. Some are funny and heartwarming while others are tragic and heartbreaking.

The Hingham resident recently returned from the front lines in New Orleans where he and five other animal control officers from Dennis, Beverly and New Bedford helped to rescue and care for abandoned and injured animals in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina as part of a disaster response team under the auspices of the Humane Society of the United States.

The trip – which had the sup-

Gray & black color scheme slated for site

The historical building known as "Motif #1," located in the Mill River Boatyard on Border Street, will soon lose its rustic charm.

Renovations to the building will preserve the size and shape of the structure, but the finishing touches will include a coat of gray paint and black trim, not unlike the Olde Salt House, Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn.

A disappointed planning board — which had hoped to persuade the owner to paint the building any color but gray to allow it to

Cedarmere rentals' issue raised

Groundbreaking is temporarily on hold

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cedarmere developers had planned on pouring the foundation for one of their model units at the beginning of next week. However, that plan is currently on hold until the planning board can iron out some of the project's issues.

Planning board member Peter Pratt called a special meeting for 10 a.m. Wednesday (Oct. 12), after receiving a phone call from an abutter to the property, who was concerned about some information he had been given by the Department of Housing and Community Development relative to the project. The abutter had been told the project did not have an approved Local Initiative Project application, even though developers had filed for a building permit to begin construction.

The Cedarmere project, formerly owned by Cohasset residents David and Kelli Calhoun and their business partner Tom Ragno of Lexington, is a 55-plus housing project slated to be built on the 41-acre Hayes Estate off Beachwood Street. Plans include 105-units of senior housing of which roughly 31 will be affordable housing.

The LIP program is the mechanism by which housing developments file their affordable units in order for them to "count" toward the town's affordable housing stock. Currently,

Local dads launch clothing line

Doug Eymer and Bob Parisi are not quite ready to quit their day jobs. However, they are looking to begin a side-venture, selling unique merchandise including everything from T-shirts to baseball caps, to a local client-base.

Soon Cohasset residents could be seen wearing golf shirts, web belts, or even unique dog collars designed by Eymer and his wife Selene. Many of his designs — at least at this preliminary stage — are somewhat edgier than normal country-club attire, and feature the signature Eymer "cartoonish" skull logo.

For more than a decade, Eymer and his wife Selene owned their own design company — Eymer Design. However, in 2000, the company was purchased by PARTNERS + simons, a design firm in Boston where Doug Eymer had served for more than three years as a principal and creative director.

Eymer said he and his wife have worked with many large corporations including Blue Cross and Blue Shield and Talbots. In fact, Eymer Design was a driving force behind the launch of the Talbots Kids clothing line.

Starting out, Eymer said the company was very small and had to do a lot of self-promoting, which led them to design T-shirts, pens, sweatshirts and a variety of other "offbeat" products featuring variations of the company logo, which has continued to evolve over the years. Eymer said one of his favorites was a gray Champion sweatshirt with the logo on the front, which made it easy for people

Schools looking again at outsourcing some bus service

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The future of the school transportation program could be changing. While the town will likely keep its buses, the possibility of leasing from an outside company has not entirely been ruled out.

In an effort to save money on transportation costs, which totaled roughly $458,000 for the school department last year, the school committee has agreed to rethink the system. It voted Oct. 6 to send out bids to companies, which provide transportation services, in the hopes that having real numbers to work with will help in the decision-making process.

The committee agreed to two alternatives it would like to see pursued, which had been compiled by Supt. Denise Walsh. The first would allow the school department to continue providing a portion of the special education transportation, but leave the regular education transportation up to an outside contractor. Option one includes:

- Design a plan for annual purchase of new buses (3 buses currently have over 100,000 miles) or design a plan to lease new buses.
- Athletics and field trips would be transported in house whenever possible (for a fee).
- Bus drivers and transportation coordinator would be town/school department employees with benefits.
- Mechanic outsourced as current practice or create new position as town employee with benefits.
- Bus fees possible.

A second option would be a combination of option one and another option that would have contracted out all transportation. It includes:

- Own or lease buses to be turned over "new" every three years
- Maintenance of buses outsourced
- Contract out the operation for regular education students and some special education costs, including repairs, and using our leased or owned buses
- Athletics and field trips run by school department
- Bus drivers town employees
- Bus fees possible

While both plans include the option to lease buses, mechanic Martin Hale who currently keeps Cohasset's transportation system running, advised the school district keep its buses. "Don't get rid of them, you own them," he said.

Hale added while the bids would have the option to replace buses every three years, that is not always necessary. "It's how you maintain them. Turning something over is not always best," he said.

Hale said the schools currently own a 1994 bus which serves as the "backup" bus for the district. That is the oldest bus in the fleet, and is the one the school department is considering replacing next. "I wouldn't replace it. It has a brand new motor and it runs like a top," he said. While he said it may not look as nice as some of the newer buses, "It's very reliable and it's paid for."

"Don't get rid of them, you own them."
— Martin Hale, mechanic

Hale said the body of a bus typically deteriorates before the engine goes, which is why they must be taken off the road. However, before that happens, he said as far as replacing the mechanical components, "I can go forever, as long as the parts are available."

Hale said he has become very familiar with the town's buses and has brought the school's transportation program from a place where it was failing state inspections to a place where the buses are passing with flying colors. In addition, he is a Cohasset resident and is readily available when things go wrong.

Hale suggested the school department keep him on as the transportation department's mechanic, but turn his currently contracted position into a town employee position with benefits. He said as a town employee, the school department would be able to receive parts he orders at a discounted rate, as he would be eligible to make purchases at a discounted state price.

Transportation coordinator Kelly Dickson said the mechanic for the town of Scituate's school transportation program is a town employee and she has heard from town officials that it is working out well.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams said it is hard to know which is the best route to take without actually having the numbers, but that all options will be looked into.

"To me, it's not which I like better, it's which is most effective," she said.

Dickson said if the school committee is considering using a bus company for its buses, she hopes it would consider making a recommendation that the company use Cohasset employees so they do not lose their jobs in the transition. "It really effects morale," she said, when employees aren't sure whether their jobs are on the line.

Walsh said the school department can make a strong recommendation that the company keep the Cohasset drivers, but "We can't mandate they use our drivers."

Member Alfred Slanetz said he believes there could be an advantage to having a local team of drivers rather than employees of a bus company, as the current drivers know the roads, know the routes, and know the kids. He said in addition, if the town decides to lease its buses from another town, that could mean a snow storm could leave the buses stranded, even if the roads in Cohasset are fine.

Member Rick Flynn said in years past, the school committee has looked at the possibility of contracting with an outside bus company while using their own buses. However, the problem with finding a company to contract with is that Cohasset is so far off the beaten path that only one or two companies were even options. In addition, because the bus companies did not own the buses, they were not kept in as good condition as they might otherwise have been.

Member Adrienne MacCarthy asked roughly how many students currently ride the bus. Dickson said while the numbers vary from day to day, many buses are consistently carrying children at full capacity, while others are running at around 80 percent full. "That is at all three schools," she said.

Williams said it was her understanding there are very few students riding the bus at the high school level.

"They don't, but we have the sixth grade up here now," replied Dickson.

The school committee agreed to put the two options out to bid with alternates. It will be at least one month before bid documents arrive from interested companies. At that time, the school committee will review information submitted and make a decision. No matter what the decision, Walsh said bus fees are "almost a given," to help boost the transportation bottom line.

Cameras in school buses?

Vandalism is running rampant in town, with incidents of graffiti showing up on outside walls at the high school, on traffic cones, and transportation coordinator Kelly Dickson said school buses are being affected as well. However, it is not the outside, but the inside that is taking a beating.

"I've suggested installing cameras to help stop the damage inside," said Dickson, adding the most prevalent problem is students poking holes in seats with their pencils.

"Having vandalism happen while we're driving is sad," she said.

The school committee said it would look into what would need to be done to install cameras in school buses.

Motif #1 to blend in with harbor-scape

stand out from the other buildings in the harbor — approved site plans to allow renovations to move forward Wednesday, Oct. 5.

"We're going to hear about this big time," said planning board member Mike Westcott, adding it would have been nice if owner, local businessman Peter Roy of Margin Street, would have considered doing some kind of treatment to the wood to give it a weathered look, rather than have it blend in with the other buildings in the area. With the history the building has in town — as it dates back to the 1800s, and was also featured in the 1987 film "The Witches of Eastwick" — the planning board believes it added to the character of the town as it was.

"It is a landmark building. It would have been nice if it could have maintained that natural look," said chairman Al Moore, adding the board had hoped that if someone had left town for a few years and come back, they might look at the building and never have known the difference — aside from it's ability to now stand up straight.

However, Roy's attorney Charles Humphreys said as the owner of the property, Roy has every right to paint the building whatever color he chooses. Under a site plan review, aesthetics do not come into play.

Moore said he understood, and that theoretically, the board could approve the site plan for the building and two years from now, the owner could decide to paint it pink and there would be nothing the board could do.

Project Manager Charlie Ford said with a smile, "It's going to have to be gray, that's his (Roy's) thing." While Ford said they might be able to ask Roy to stain the building gray, in the end, if he doesn't like it, he can just paint over it, he said.

Ford pointed out that originally, the building was actually painted red, but over the years with the deterioration that took place, the paint faded to the point where it was no longer visible.

Westcott said it is a shame that now, the whole harbor area is becoming homogenized. Member Peter Pratt echoed that statement and said part of what makes Cohasset the town that it is, is it's "quirky" nature.

Humphreys said there has been much time taken to restore the building and much effort to keep it the same as it was. He pointed out part of the building's charm, "was in its dilapidation," but without restoring it, it would have fallen into the harbor and would have been lost forever.

However, Westcott said if historical preservation was really at the forefront, the building would not be outfitted with skylights as is currently planned.

Humphreys explained the skylights will help not only with lighting, but will provide sun light to help heat the space. The added light will also make the space more inviting for those who use it, he said.

Pratt said from the standpoint of energy conservation, he understands the rationale for the skylights.

The renovations to Motif #1 have been somewhat controversial aside from choosing paint colors. In the spring of 2004, the planning board had denied plans for reconstruction put forth by Humphreys on behalf of another client, Mill River Boatyard LLC, led by local businessman Donald Staszko, who at that point planned to purchase the Mill River site from Peter Roy. Staszko had planned to rebuild all three buildings on the site virtually the same way they stood.

However, that May, the planning board voted 3-0 against approval of the site plan, stating it thought the applicant had not provided enough information regarding the site's intended use, along with a failure to meet the parking requirement set forth in the town's bylaw and a failure to meet public safety requirements. Due to its location on the water, the site has very specific criteria in terms of use.

When work on the most recent reconstruction began, the planning board thought it should have been contacted prior to construction, and it was not. There was also a difference in interpretation of the bylaw, and the planning board thought a site plan review was necessary. The planning board therefore issued a cease-and-desist for the project until a site plan review could be conducted. The owner complied and construction was only completed enough to ensure the safety of the building. The new building was approved with the understanding it will continue to be used for marine storage.

'Birds of the Gulf' featured in Oct. 19 talk

In an illustrated presentation on Wednesday, Oct. 19, David Clapp, noted ornithologist and director of the Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Sanctuary in Marshfield, will inform his audience about the many varieties of birds that frequent the Gulf River — their seasonality and where they go when they're not with us.

Clapp's talk will be featured at the Gulf Association's Annual Meeting, which will be held at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Cohasset's Governmant Island, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The meeting is open to all interested persons, association members and non-members. Refreshments will be served.

Eric Oddleifson, Gulf Association president, will round out the program with a summary description of the Association's recent accomplishments and future plans. Also, members will vote on the association's board of directors for the coming year.

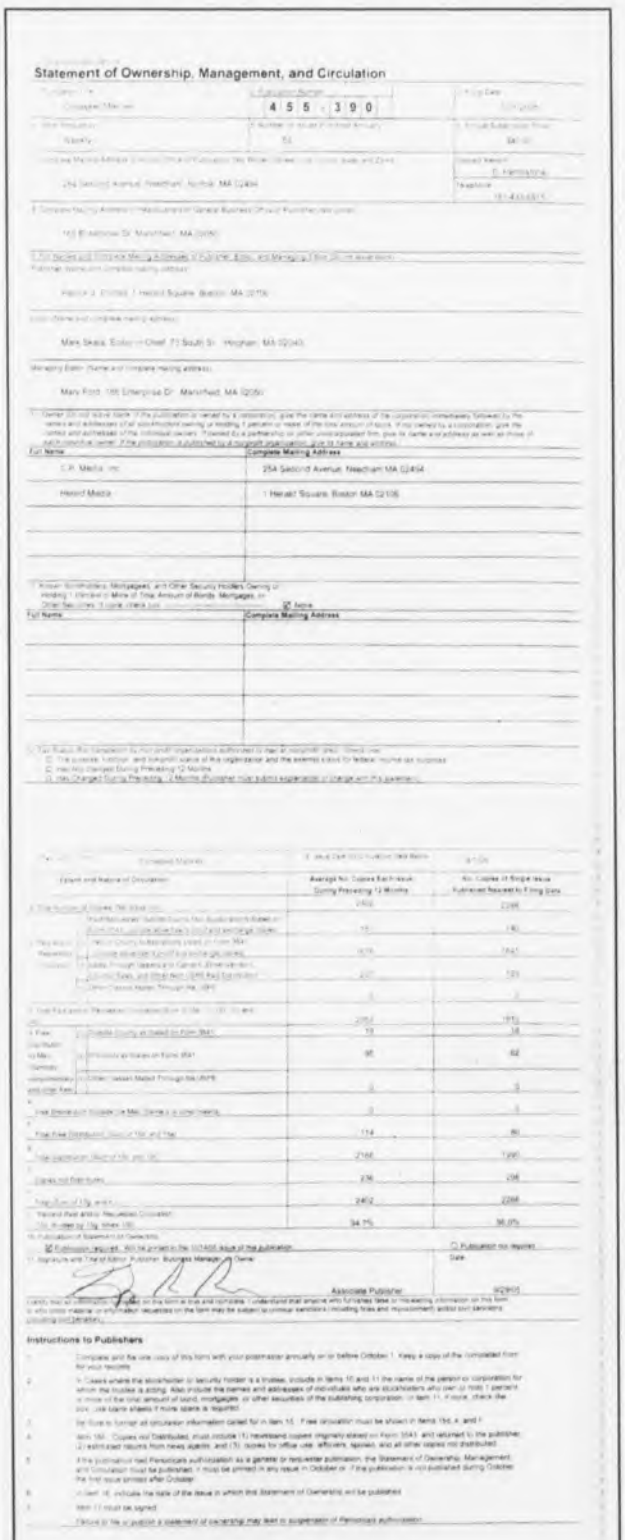
COHASSET'S WEEK

Mt. Brandon lecture at Retreat Center

The Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph are celebrating 55 years at their dwelling at 339 Jerusalem Road, and the last 30 years as a Retreat Center, open to people of all religious denominations. To honor this milestone, there will be programs focusing on the new cosmology, its evolution and mystery. On Saturday Oct. 15, Professor Chet Raymo, former columnist for the Boston Globe, will lecture on Mount Brandon, Ireland's holy mountain where on the wave-lashed edge of the Western world, Celtic myth meets Christianity. For more information, please call (781) 383-6024.



CEA requests names of local servicemen

Cohasset senior veterans would like to send notes to current servicemen. If anyone knows of a young man or woman who would like to receive a note, please contact the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs at (781) 383-9112 on or before Nov. 7.

Citizens seek assurance town-owned land near Cook Estate isn't built on

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Some residents are not happy with an idea brought forward by former selectman Ronnie McMorris to build affordable rental housing on a piece of town land located next to the Cook Estate.

To that end, a citizens' petition with 100 signatures was submitted to the town Wednesday, requesting the town's vote to place a conservation restriction on the land, therefore making it open space. Citizens' petitions are automatically placed on the Town Meeting Warrant for the consideration of voters.

The article, drafted by Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, requests a conservation restriction due to the fact that the land abuts Peppermint Brook.

"Peppermint Brook is a tributary to Lily Pond, and we seek to preserve this land as open space in order to protect the quality of Cohasset's public drinking water supply," she said.

Some residents who have lent their names to bring the article forward include Richard Brooks, John McNabb, Jim Shipsky, Peter Pratt, Richard Silvia, Rick Swanborg, Stuart Ivimey, Jim Hamilton, and Leonora Jenkins.

McMorris had suggested a "phase two" for the Cook project on the town's adjacent land at the Oct. 4 board of selectmen's meeting. She said she understood it is too late to change the plans Deer Hill Partners — which was awarded the bid to build on the site — has in place. The company has stated it will build a combination of market rate and affordable ownership housing on the Cook's 22-acres of land on Sohier Street site, but no rental housing. McMorris says it was always the intent in working with the Cooks to include some rental units.

To ensure rental housing for seniors is somehow accomplished, McMorris proposed the selectmen take the initiative to bring forward the necessary articles at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting to allow the town to sell the town's roughly 8.7 acres to a developer for the purpose of building rental housing. The process would include securing an easement from Deer Hill Partners to access the land, as well as permission to add the town parcel to the Central sewer district.

Last week, the board voted against putting an article on the warrant itself, but did not rule out the possibility of bringing the article to voters next spring when "phase one" is farther along. No other citizens' petition articles had come in to the selectmen's office prior to the 4:30 p.m., Oct. 12 deadline.

Peter Pratt raises rental issue with the Cedarmere project

Cohasset is trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state.

The former Cedarmere developers filed a LIP application with the town that was signed by selectmen as required and sent on to the state for approval. The state sent back the application saying it was not complete.

Leggat McCall Properties purchased the project from the Calhouns in April, and have been working to fill the gaps in the LIP application. Representatives from the company brought a finalized application to the planning board Wednesday, which will need selectmen approval in order to be sent to the state.

Senior Vice President for Leggat McCall Properties Bill Gause said his company was not aware sending in the LIP application was such an urgent matter. "We didn't realize it was as pressing as it has become," he said. He added it was his understanding, that in order for the project to move ahead, the town's bylaws required only that it be eligible to be counted by the state and actual eligibility from the state was not required in order to begin work. However, because the application has been given to the town, the only roadblock will be signatures from the board of selectmen, which Pratt thinks could be hard to come by.

"I think at the end of the day, the selectmen have directed the manager to file an application with a rental component," said Pratt, and rental units are not part of the project's plans.

"It never came to our attention that rentals were discussed."

— Bill Gause, Leggat McCall Properties

Pratt said he was personally under the impression there would be a rental component but was recently informed the project's affordable units will all be for sale. He said he also believes selectmen were also under the impression that there would be a rental component and they signed the original application with that in mind.

Town Manager Bill Griffin concurred with Pratt and said when the selectmen approved the original LIP application, it referred to rental units. He said when the application comes back before the board, it will "reflect a different project than they thought," and he doesn't know how the vote will go. Griffin said he would report back to the board of selectmen at its Oct. 18 meeting.

Gause explained while there may be some confusion regarding the application which was filed by the former owners, from the very beginning, his company has been planning to build for-sale affordable units. He said he was under the impression that is how the project was always represented. "It never came to our attention that rentals were discussed," he said.

Planning board chairman Al Moore said as far as he is concerned, there should not be any confusion over the application because he doesn't ever remember discussion focusing around rental units. He said an affordable component was always included per order of the bylaw. "but I never recall anything that said it had to be rentals."

He added he understands that there is now some concern in the community because plans for the Cook Estate senior housing project, slated to be built off Sohier Street, do not have a rental component but Cedarmere has already been given a special permit. "We've already approved this permit and we're not about to go back and change the rules," Moore said.

Member Stuart Ivimey agreed and said ,"The permit has been issued. The time to challenge that permit has long since passed."

However, Griffin said the selectmen may not see things the same way, and they must sign the new LIP application in order for it to move on to the state. He said the last time the application was filed, "It said rental with a handwritten 'for sale.' It was clearly sent in as rentals," said Griffin. "There is no doubt the plan had rentals."

Bob Engler, who serves as the housing consultant for Leggat McCall, said ownership housing will be a better choice for the development. He said in his 30-plus years of experience, when there is high-end ownership housing and rental housing in the same development, "It sets up exactly what you don't want — a two-tiered citizenship."

Engler said it is very difficult to have rental units present and not have them come with a stigmatism, which is one of the reasons Cedarmere developers would like to stay away from including rental units.

The board decided it was best to continue the discussion to its Oct. 19 meeting, but voted 3-1 in favor of recommending the building inspector not issue a building permit until after that meeting takes place. Griffin will be discussing the matter with selectmen at their Oct. 18 meeting.

port of both the towns he works for – began with Murphy and the other area animal control officers in three vehicles travelling roughly 1,500 miles to Gonzales, La., which is about 50 miles from New Orleans.

In years past, a visit to New Orleans would likely mean a stay in an air-conditioned hotel and dinner out in a restaurant on Bourbon Street in the French Quarter.

But Murphy says not even all the TV news about the hurricane's aftermath could prepare the team for the devastation they would witness in flooded out neighborhoods.

For its 10-day stint, the team stayed near the Lamar-Dixon Expo Center in Gonzales, a large facility used for animal shows and rodeos, where the stalls could be used as holding areas for the rescued pets.

"It was 100 degrees – we were in a perpetual sweat," he recalls. "It was like being a microwave dinner, you were never dry."

There was no cool water, no ice. With 3,000 dogs barking at night, it was also noisy. He explained they lived in pup tents put up on crushed stone that held the heat; the only shower was in the horse barn. Murphy said "handi-wipes" were a godsend.

But despite the primitive living conditions and diet largely of peanut butter crackers, trail mix, and military MRE's [Meals Ready to Eat], Murphy and the other trained volunteers willingly endured the discomfort to get the job done.

A helicopter flies overhead in a flooded-out neighborhood. Paul Murphy was allowed to take the Norwell Animal Control van, at left, that is also shared with Cohasset, to the New Orleans relief effort.

Charlie, a volunteer guide, and Cheryl Malone, the animal control officer from Dennis, Mass., guide a rottweiler that they put on a mattress to safety. Many of the dogs in New Orleans were rottweilers or pit bull mixes.

Murphy explained that following a morning briefing, Humane Society teams would set out for the city with a volunteer guide who knew his way around. The teams would pass check points and sometimes be diverted from the list of homes they were supposed to check by other rescue workers from the Red Cross or National Guard alerting them to abandoned animals they'd either seen or heard crying and barking.

Murphy, whose team rescued roughly 40 animals a day, said they would respond to those unplanned requests. "An animal in need of rescue, is an animal in need of rescue – you can't say no," he says.

The teams would also distribute food and water for loose and abandoned dogs that couldn't be immediately rescued to prevent them from eating each other. Murphy said many of the dead animals showed signs of being eaten.

Although they tried not to do any additional damage, the teams had to literally break into homes to find the terrified pets that were shivering and shaking. The floors were often covered with a combination of silt, feces and urine. Using rabies or catch sticks – which are long poles with a loop — the trained volunteers would capture the animal and put it into a cage to be transported to one of several triage centers in the city. There the animal would be looked over by a veterinarian, photographed and ID'd. At the end of the day the animals were taken to the expo center in Gonzales.

At one point the Humane Society stopped the teams from bringing animals in because the expo center filled up. Some animals were then taken to Louisiana State University because the Gonzales center could not accommodate any more.

Some houses, Murphy recalls, had several cats, some had gerbils and birds, and dogs or a combination of all of those. Many of the dogs in New Orleans were pit bulls or pit bill mixes.

Murphy, who was in New Orleans from Sept. 8-17, said the teams tried to keep personnel that came along to help but were not trained in dealing with animals away from the "front lines." One untrained volunteer, for example, tried to put a blanket over a dog to comfort it. "In an instant the dog turned and bit her on the face," he recalled, noting that getting help for an injured volunteer was extremely difficult.

"There was no way to get someone out," he says. "Cell phone service was spotty at best and there was no way to communicate with the National Guard, Army or police."

Murphy says the having evacuees leave their pets behind was a huge mistake. " The sheer number of pets abandoned and roaming free created another public health problem," he says.

He says there's a lot of learn from the disaster and recommends all pet owners have a photograph of their pets, have a veterinarian install a microchip in their pet, and have a cage or carrying case on hand should an evacuation be necessary.

" I never expect to see a rescue effort of this magnitude again," says Murphy, who is grateful that the two towns he works for allowed him to make the trip.

"I can't thank them enough for allowing me to go," he says, adding it was gratifying to get the "thumbs up" from other motorists on the way down. [Murphy had the van stenciled with "Boston to New Orleans to help the Animals."] Since returning, people around town have stopped Murphy to thank him.

"If there's something good from this disaster, it is they are going to rewrite the books on rescue," he says. "There will be a lot of changes."

Flash back: Last summer, Cohasset entered into a joint agreement with Norwell to share animal control duties as a cost-saving measure. Cohasset compensates Murphy for 20 hours per week for his normal duties. While on duty, Murphy responds to calls in both Cohasset and Norwell. Norwell covers any calls in that town outside the 20 hours. In exchange for Cohasset's paying Murphy's regular salary, Norwell provides the animal control vehicle, including maintenance and insurance. Murphy took the van to New Orleans and Cohasset paid him his regular salary while he was away.

This rescued four-week-old kitten travels to Massachusetts in the Norwell van. The kitten was adopted by the animal control officer from New Bedford.

An inside look at some of the stalls in the Lamar-Dixon Expo Center in Gonzales where the rescued animals were housed.

Little League dads team up to launch new clothing line

to essentially advertise while on the go.

"We wanted to give people something they could wear on the weekends and in their free time, think of Eymer Design, but in a fun way," said Eymer.

Designing products to market themselves became a very integral part of the business. "We started becoming our own favorite client," joked Eymer. The initial designs led to a variety of different self-promotional marketing campaigns. One featured a Harley-Davidson-esque Eymer logo design, another had a summer-camp theme for businesses — as summer tends to be a slower period for marketing — asking clients to send their creative ideas off to Eymer summer camp to come to fruition. Their marketing campaign eventually evolved into "Eymergeddon," and the idea that the Eymers could be the design team for companies to the end of the world and beyond. The Eymergeddon design features a flaming cartoon-like skull, which is the base for their latest merchandise.

Today, the two are still very actively designing, under their new firm simply called Eymer. Because the two have had so much fun designing clothing in the past for their own marketing use, the new business venture seemed natural. However, the Eymers needed someone to help in pitching the items for sale, which is where fellow Cohasset resident Bill Patsos came in.

"We're really great designers, but we're not good about beating down doors," said Eymer. However, Patsos, an attorney with an insurance sales background, was the perfect fit.

Doug Eymer, right, works with business partner Bill Patsos to fine-tune a baseball cap design featuring a flaming skull with lacrosse sticks. Their new business venture is in full swing as the caps and other merchandise featuring the Eymer company logo will be coming out in the next few weeks.

Patsos and Eymer met during little league games, as both their 10-year-old sons, Foster Eymer and Teddy Patsos play baseball together. The boys hit it off right away, and in turn, Eymer and Patsos began getting to know each other well. Over the course of the past few years, the men have also served as coaches for their sons' team, which led them to begin talking about joining together as business partners.

"We're both big Red Sox fans," said Eymer, adding just before this season's American League Division Series playoffs seemed like the perfect deadline to set for themselves, in terms of producing a product they would be able to market and sell. The first set of T-shirts designed featured a logo with the letter "Y" then a knot made out of string, then the number two, shown by a hand holding up two fingers. The logo implies "why not two," referring to the possibility of the Red Sox making it to the World Series for a second time in a row.

"We did some test marketing and wore the shirts to a game," said Eymer, adding they sparked many conversations from fellow fans who wanted to know what the symbols meant. "It caught on," he said, adding the first batch of printing yielded 100 T-shirts, which were quickly sold out, followed by a second round of printing for another 100. Eymer said his merchandise is printed up by Rockland Athletics Supplies.

But it wasn't just the marketing at the game that sold the shirts, it was through the groundwork Patsos did as well as the help of another Cohasset dad, Dr. Paul Schubert who is a cardiologist. "He took some to his office and to the hospital and sold a great number," Eymer said.

A second shirt was designed for the playoff as well and featured the "Laundry Series," a pun on the Red Sox/White Sox playoff games. The shirt has a baseball player with one red sock on and one white sock on, which states "We know which one will come out in the wash."

To evade copyright infringement, there is nothing that actually uses the Red Sox name, it is only implied. However, it seems there has been some support from the team already. Eymer said he and Patsos were able to make contact with the Red Sox team nutritionist who brought some of the shirts into the dugout and the locker room. "The manager wore one," said Eymer, which he said was really great in terms of marketing. He said the company is trying to expand on that contact to get in touch with Curt Schilling, and eventually, Eymer said they hope to partner together to sell merchandise and donate the proceeds to the ALS Association, which Schilling does much work for. ALS, which stands for amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, is often referred to as Lou Gehrig's disease.

"It's nice to be able to create a funky product, but be able to give back," said Eymer.

In addition to the baseball themed T-shirts, Eymer said other products are in the works featuring the Eymergeddon flaming skull logo. He said a baseball hat featuring the flaming skull and two lacrosse sticks is in production, as well as a web belt, which is a cotton belt with a black ribbon featuring the flaming skulls. Eymer said the design is a twist on the traditional whales and anchors typically found on web belts.

Eymer has also lent some edge to traditional golf-wear as he has placed his flaming skull logo on golf shirts geared more toward adults. "It's a little bit edgy," he said. Eymer has surfing shirts with the logo as well. There are also products for girls with the skull and flowers.

The new business venture for Eymer and Patsos has truly become a family affair as Foster Eymer and Teddy Patsos have both worn the T-shirts to school, and even took orders which they brought home to their parents. Foster's 7-year-old brother Taggart has been coming up for T-shirt ideas on his own as well.

"There are very few creative types in Cohasset," said Eymer, as a good number of the town's residents are bankers or are in other similar trades. "It's been nice to meet other creative people through this."

For more information on Eymer Design and its products please visit the Eymer Design Web site at www.eymer.com, or call Doug Eymer at his home office at (781) 383-8844.

Volunteers sought to support Cohasset seniors

Cohasset Elder Affairs seeks volunteers to serve meals, drive seniors to appointments, make home visits, and assist with CEA activities. Volunteer drivers have use of CEA vans. Kitchen workers serve meals in the community center dining room. People are also needed to visit seniors who are homebound or are restricted from leaving the house.

Director of volunteers Martha Horsefield reminds that "Sometimes just a phone call is all it takes, to brighten a senior's day." Many volunteers donate as little as one or two hours a month. To sign up and help our community or for more information call Martha at 781-383-9112.

DONATIONS HELP

Hi Cohasset! Yuck, this week has been cold and rainy but is nothing compared to what so many others around the country are dealing with. Please keep in mind the issues that so many are dealing with on an ongoing basis and keep donations coming when possible.

Steve Ritts has been hard at work in the south helping with Katrina relief and any donations that you would like to make to Steve and his work can be made out and sent to the "Second Congregational Church" with Steve Ritts in the memo, 43 Highland Ave, Cohasset MA 02025.

ANNUAL MEETING

The South Shore Art Center announces its annual meeting to take place Wednesday, Oct. 19, at 7 p.m. in the Bancroft Gallery at the Center. All members are invited to the annual meeting to hear reports of the officers and committees as well as to vote on bylaw revisions and nominations for Directors and Advisors.

In addition, Amy Robertson of Cohasset and David Avery of Marshfield will be given Volunteer of the Year awards for their creative contributions and hours of volunteer work at the Center.

Hingham artist and teacher Ann Conte will be presented with the Shirley F. Neer Chair in Children's Art. This award, given annually by the SSAC, is presented in recognition of the recipient's "expertise and dedication in teaching art to young children.

For more information call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org

FIRST ROAD RACE

Keegan, Ashley, Tucker, and Paul Antico would like to congratulate Muffy Antico for completing the B.A.A. "Emerald Necklace" half marathon this past Sunday, Oct. 9. Despite this being her first race, Muffy finished in the top 13 percent of women in her age group and in the top 23 percent of the more than 3000 men and women who participated in this event. Her hard work and dedication to her training regimen was an inspiration to us and clearly paid off on Sunday. Next stop: Boston in April?

Fall kick-off party — The Fall kick-off party for the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers club to welcome new members and catch up with returning members is coming up quickly. Join others for drinks and hors d'oeuvres from 7-10pm on Saturday Oct. 15 at the home of John and Kelly Hendricks of Scituate. Everyone is welcome and encouraged to bring a guest. If you're "thinking" of joining the club this is a perfect opportunity to witness the fun and friendships it inspires! Please RSVP as soon as possible and indicate if you will be brining an appetizer or dessert.

As always, please remember to help support the Scituate & Cohasset Food Pantries by brining a household item (paper towels, toilet paper, etc) or a health and beauty aid (shampoo, soap, toothpaste, etc) that will be collected at the party. It's a small purchase that will go a long way for someone else!

Question and answer — Join other newcomer's on Oct. 20 for a "question & answer" session with Jen and Tom Bleakney, experienced childcare professionals and owners of "The Kid's Place". You are not the only one who can use child rearing advice! Areas being addressed are raising kids, tantrums, timeouts, and more. Bring your questions! Please RSVP as soon as possible - spots are filling quickly. RSVP information can be found on the website in the newsletter section.

For membership questions or general club info, log on to www.scnewcomers.com or call/email Jen Harris at jkharris24@hotmail.com or 544-3910.

Holiday craft fair — The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club will hold a holiday craft fair on Saturday, Nov 12, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, Cohasset. Crafters and vendors are being sought to display and sell their items. Call Michelle Loughlin at 383-8308 or email mloughlin521@hotmail.com, to reserve a space.

Join the club - The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomer's Club is accepting applications for the 2005-2006 season. Remember, you don't have to be new! Catch up with old friends and make new ones in a year filled with parties and events. Send in a membership form found at the Scituate/Cohasset libraries, South Shore Community Center, Purple Dinosaur and Seaside playgrounds. You can also visit www.scnewcomers.com and download a application or call Jen Harris at 781-544-3910 or jkharris24@hotmail.com.

Fire department open house is Oct. 15

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Saving Motif #1

A lot of people aren't going to be happy that Peter Roy of Margin Street is going to paint (or stain) Cohasset's Motif #1 with the same palate of colors he has used for Atlantica, the Olde Salt House, and the Cohasset Harbor Inn (formerly Kimball's).

For those who may not know what property we're talking about, the "Eastwick Building" (which acquired that name after it was used in the 1987 feature film "Witches of Eastwick" largely filmed in Cohasset) sits above the rapids by the Border Street bridge. Many an artist has been known to paint the building from a vantage point on the rocky ledge across the mouth of the Gulf River on Government Island not far from the harbormaster's office.

We suppose in a perfect world, Roy would spend untold hundreds of thousands of dollars to completely renovate and restore the Mill River Marine Boatyard and its dilapidated buildings to their original state out of the goodness of his heart.

By the way of background, Roy purchased the site that included a hodgepodge of structures from Stoughton businessman William Hanney in 1999, who had fought for years to turn the majority of the site into residences.

But luckily for Cohasset, Hanney's hands were tied by state regulations governing waterfront use and access.

So, Roy — who lives on the harbor — stepped in. He has spent the past six years trying to improve the site but again hit roadblock after roadblock due to regulations including parking requirements and the town's own zoning bylaws prohibiting any "change of use" in the waterfront business district. Roy had proposed two condominiums at the site to make it financially viable.

Back in 2003 envisioning a town park at the site, Roy approached the Community Preservation Committee about the potential of the town using community preservation funds to buy the site for $750,000 or the assessed value, which ever is higher. The lobster pound would have been carved out of the parcel and would have been privately owned with the stipulation the exterior was spruced up.

He also offered to help pay to tear down and remove some of the other structures. (Everyone's goal was always to save the Eastwick Building).

However, an independent assessor at the time determined the value of the entire parcel to be only $300,000.

Then in 2004, Roy hoped to sell the site to a private developer, Mill River Boatyard LLC, but again strict regulations stymied that project.

So here we are. We want to be perfectly clear that we applaud the planning board for its diligence and oversight over Roy's plans to improve the former boatyard site and save the Eastwick Building. We also appreciate that the board is disappointed about the color scheme.

"It is a landmark building. It would have been nice if it could have maintained that natural look," chairman Al Moore said.

We agree. But with that being said, we can't blame Roy for wanting to put his own stamp on his property. If that means Motif #1 is painted gray and black, so be it. We know Roy cares deeply about his hometown and the harbor – his properties are all well maintained and attractive.

As Roy's attorney, Charles Humphreys points out, much time and money has been spent to keep the building the same as it was. He pointed out the building's charm was in its "dilapidation" but without restoring it, it would have collapsed into the tidal waters below and been lost forever.

Museum passes at library

Looking for something to do? Why not check out one of the library's museum passes. Passes are funded by the Friends of the Library and are available to Cohasset residents. If you are heading into Boston, try Boston By Foot, the Children's Museum or the Museum of Science. For local museums, try the Maritime and Irish Mossing Museum or Plimoth Plantation. There are 11 different museums in all. Stop by the library in person or reserve passes in advance by calling 781-383-1348 or book online at www.cohassetlibrary.org (Click Using the Library, then Museum Passes.).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Help is needed here at home

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing regarding the recent catastrophe in Louisiana and the arrival of many victims to the Cape.

Massachusetts, thank you for your decency, patronage, and selflessness to the victims of the hurricane.

To the victims, I am truly sorry. Please understand that I am a very sympathetic human being and I care very much (if not too much) about the whole human race, the good, the bad, and the indifferent, however, there is one tiny issue that concerns me.

Massachusetts is the most expensive state in the country to live in and for us "locals" it can be difficult, if not impossible at times, just to afford to stay in my own home state. How could or would anyone set up an emergency relocation program (government paid for, mind you) in the most expensive state in the USA, while the government pays for them "free of charge."

I realize they have nothing and really what are they supposed to do? Yes, it helps the Massachusetts economy to have them here, but, as a lifelong taxpaying resident of this wonderful state, it devastates me to have people move up here and handed armloads of government funds, as I struggle with a severely disabled husband and two children fighting (literally for my life) to survive on money that was paid to Social Security for such an emergency.

We have been waiting a long time for the government, too long, for them to follow through with its obligations and responsibilities and start the approval process and start the much needed funds. It has been two and a half years since he's been able to work, with his ailments, etc. I am not able to work either, therefore in a few weeks time we may become destitute.

We have received TAFDC since fall 2003, when his disabilities became too debilitating. In the state of Massachusetts (the most expensive state in America, I remind you) emergency welfare provides a total of $618 for a family of four a month. That's a whopping $154 a week to survive on, plus Food Stamps. We are fighting for our lives everyday trying to push through all the beaurocratic red-tape just to survive on Social Security and Social Security Disability.

The government agencies need to remember that people go through their own personal catastrophes everyday, ones who are beyond ill, physically, mentally, and emotionally. We are put through months, even years of their beaurocratic "b.s.," just to try to exist. We need assistance just as much as the masses from Louisiana. Just because there are only the four of us doesn't mean we need the government assistance any less.

Their's was Hurricane Katrina, which lasted 3 days. Ours is Hurricane Social Security/President Bush and has lasted, so far, two years too long. Don't just leave us little people behind, we are the victims, as well. We've been here long before the hurricane victims and will still be here, well after they are gone. We hope. We have rights, too. (I think).

Rental units for seniors

TO THE EDITOR:

How come some selectmen don't understand that there is significant demand for rental senior housing? It's pretty crabbed thinking to deny it on the grounds that it's cheaper in the long run to own instead of rent. While usually true, seniors have some other considerations, such as:

• Many seniors are on limited fixed incomes and possess no significant assets other than the equity in their homes. They may need to use some of the proceeds from its sale for ever-increasing living expense, to pay off debts, to aid struggling children, to help a grandchild complete college, to replace a worn out automobile. Those who are financially blessed may have difficulty comprehending the dilemmas of those not so blessed, but these are real reasons, of real people, why rentals are the preferred choice of many seniors.

• Many seniors, even if financially comfortable, no longer want the burdens of maintaining a dwelling, including the administrative burdens of hiring and monitoring others to do it. A condo apartment or townhouse may be the answer for some, but others want to avoid the hassles of selling the unit when comes the time to move on to, say, assisted-living. True, some senior residences ease the burden of reselling by agreeing in advance to buy back the unit, but the terms of the buy-back are financially more favorable to the buyer than to the senior seller. The concerns of a few seniors may be exacerbated by a sense of failing abilities to deal with future hassles, and a feeling that renting is the easier route.

A preference for renting is not synonymous with wanting special treatment, nor are seniors no longer an asset of the town. Much of the volunteer work that enhances the town is performed by our retired citizens, especially by those with a long-time habit of public service. All of us, except the unlucky, eventually will be seniors, with concerns and conclusions not fully anticipated when younger.

Most developers naturally prefer to take their profit short-term from selling units rather than long-term income from rental units, but it would be naïve to interpret that preference to mean that there is no demand for rentals. Decisions should be based on what the users need, not on what the seller wants to sell.

Perhaps the Selectmen's' lack of comprehension was fueled in part by the common prejudice that renters are lesser beings than owners, and may have influenced the selection of the Cook estate developer instead of the developer whose proposal included some rentals (which would have been consistent with the original goals of the senior housing committee).

It remains to be seen if that decision will be revised, but in any case the need for rental units should be recognized in future decisions.

Train work picking up speed

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The pace of the Greenbush project in Cohasset is accelerating. On Tuesday we learned that the MBTA is starting construction on the rail bed between Pleasant Street and Spring Street. This will be to prepare the rail bed for the tracks and improve drainage. They will not be working on Pleasant Street at this time, but, there will be a lot of other action nearby. During this construction there will be no parking to the Town Parking Lot side of Henry's Root Beer so that trucks can freely access the right of way.

There will be a brief road closure at Smith Place, behind the Carousel Antique Shop, in about two weeks which will last for up to three days. The reason for the closure is that this area will be used as a temporary fabrication area to weld 80-foot-long pieces of rail together into much longer pieces. Normally when a crossing is constructed, the rails at the crossing are put into place, even though the rails on either side of the crossing have not been installed yet. When the Beechwood Street crossing re-opens you will be able to see that this has been the case at this location.

The design of three of Cohasset's railroad crossings are such that a single 80-foot-long section of rail is too short. Longer sections of rail are needed. For example, Sohier Street requires 360 feet of continuous rail to construct the crossing. Similarly, the Lower King Street crossing will require 200 feet and Pleasant Street, 210 feet.

When the welding is complete, the new long sections of rail will be dragged to the north and stored on the right of way between Smith Place and Sohier Street. Then, Smith Place will reopen until construction at this site starts in earnest. While Smith Place is closed for this operation, parking on the MBTA property at Smith Place will be prohibited.

Welded rail

While we are talking about rails, you might be interested to know how the other rail pieces that make up the railroad tracks between crossings will be made. Keep in mind, that the whole Greenbush line will be continuously welded rail. This means that there will be no clickty clack sounds from the train. For the right of way from Scituate through Hingham, the rail will be fabricated in Scituate. The same 80-foot-long pieces that we talked about above will be welded into very long 1,200-foot continuous sections. Then they will be dragged from Scituate to Cohasset and ultimately to Hingham as the rail bed is constructed and they are put into place, moving south to north.

At Lower King Street a ditch has been dug to access the Verizon phone cables at the new crossing. Workmen will be working here to relocate the cables before construction can start on the crossing itself. Jersey barriers have been placed along side of the ditch as a safety measure. This work can take anywhere from one to four weeks depending on the complexity of the phone cable rearrangement.

Wetlands

As you drive down Route 3A toward Hingham take a look at the old Barnes Landscaping supply business. There are construction workers there working on a very unusual construction project. They are building wetlands. For each square foot of wetland that the MBTA has destroyed to rebuild the railway, the MBTA has committed to build two square feet of new wetland. Most of this replication will be in this area. In addition to being ecologically sensitive, these new wetlands will have another favorable benefit to the Town. As they absorb rainfall they will reduce the water that flows into James Brook and thus provide a bit more insurance against flooding in the center village.

Further to the north, the Graham Waste Building (AKA the Wintergarden) between Aveni Cleaners and the cemetery is being demolished. Only a steel skeleton remained, as of last weekend. Perhaps by the time you read this there may only be a cement slab, or even less. From this pile of rubble will rise the new Cohasset Station and it's 400-plus car parking lot.

HEALTH NOTES

Is it a good idea to relax our drinking water standards?

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The following, taken from the Journal of the Mass Association of Health Boards is reproduced because it is important to recognize that with "progress" — the advance of civilization, as ever more people use the planet's precious resources, there is pressure to relax health standards which may have unknown effects on its inhabitants.

"A recent article in a local paper criticized an EPA proposal to allow the discharge of sewage to waterways without biological treatment, where raw sewage and treated sewage would be "blended". But the same problem has existed in Massachusetts since 2000, when DEP started allowing treated sewage, called 'Reclaimed Water', to discharge into the ground in the recharge area of drinking water supplies.

"Sewage is normally treated through settling to remove solids (primary treatment) and then treated biologically to remove organic compounds (secondary treatment). The second step requires air (oxygen) and by supplying oxygen, the treatment breaks down complex organic compounds to simpler forms. During this step, the pathogens are killed through oxidation and predation. The same two steps occur in septic systems; the first in the septic tank and the second in the 'biomat' in the leach field. More recently, another layer of treatment, tertiary treatment, has been required to reduce the nitrogen content of wastewater. Nitrogen reduction relies on other bacteria that reduce nitrates to gaseous nitrogen in an oxygen-neutral environment in the presence of a source of carbon. Carbon sources include raw sewage, methanol, sugar and many other compounds.

"EPA'S Drinking Water Standards limit nitrogen in potable water to 10 mg/l. This is because high levels of nitrogen will inhibit the absorption of oxygen in blood. This is a problem for infants under 6 months of age or for certain elderly persons, both of whom have a low level of acid in their stomachs. Also, nitrogen is the limiting nutrient in salt and brackish water and excess nitrogen will promote plant growth in such waters.

The DEP 'Interim Guidelines' of 2000 allow non-potable uses, such as toilet flushing, landscaping, irrigation, etc. as well as discharge, into a drinking water source.

"The DEP 'Interim Guidelines' of 2000 allow non-potable uses, such as toilet flushing, landscaping, irrigation, etc. as well as discharge, into a drinking water source. Although people could be exposed to this water when it is used on a golf course, the major concern is the use of such water to replenish drinking water supplies. Prior to 1999, DEP did not allow treatment plants to discharge into the ground in Zone 2 of a public water supply aquifer. The DEP 'Interim Guidelines' have changed that restriction so any sewage plant with tertiary treatment to reduce nitrogen to below 10 mg/l can discharge to such a drinking water source. This water also has to meet other standards for pollutants in drinking water as defined in the Safe Drinking Water Act.

"The proponents of this approach would argue that this approach protects public health since it is complying with the Federal Drinking Water Standards. But, these standards were developed for natural waters, not for reclaimed water.

"Reclaimed water contains numerous chemical compounds never found in natural waters, compounds which are not removed during biological treatment. Such compounds include nitrosoamines, endocrine disrupters and their breakdown products, prescription and nonprescription drugs, veterinary and human antibiotics, home care products, industrial and household wastewater products, sex and steroidal hormones and so on. Already, many of these constituents have been measured in a variety of effluents at concentrations that are known to cause environmental impacts and have been implicated as mutagens and carcinogens. None of these compounds are even tested for on a routine basis. Unlike a failure of biological treatment, which is likely to result in acute effects such as diarrhea soon after ingestion, these compounds cause long term, chronic effects. These constituents are not considered in the design of plants for biological treatment of wastewater and the technology that might remove these compounds is not affordable.

"In view of these uncertainties, the DEP 'Interim Guidelines' on reclaimed water for potable use are extremely short sighted and dangerous. A better way to protect drinking water, a method that has stood the test of time, is through land use controls and limits on density."

In Cohasset we have the ability to maintain drinking water standards which exceed State guidelines and thanks to a very active Water Commission and help of citizen volunteers like those on the Water Resource Protection Committee and others, the town is beginning to recognize the dangers of compromising our various water resources by relaxing planning restrictions. You can help by telling Town officials of your concerns about relaxing our zoning and planning standards.

Educating the public about insecticides

HARBOR HEALTH

KAREN QUIGLEY

Dr. Bayer met with the Harbor Health Committee as part of the Institute's CORE (Conservation, Outreach, Research and Education for the future of the lobster industry) campaign.

Dr. Bayer stressed the importance of educating the public as to the hazards of using insecticides on our lawns and open areas. Insecticides, which are deadly to lobsters and other crustaceans, are washed into the stormwater drain system during rain events and subsequently deposited into the harbor. Spraying of an insecticide was responsible for wiping out the entire lobster industry in Long Island.

LIBRARY CORNER

MamaSteph is back! — MamaSteph will be performing music and movement for young children in the Meeting Room Monday, Oct.17, 24, and 31 from 10:30-11 a.m. Children must be accompanied by a caregiver. This program is open to all communities. No registration required. This program is funded by an LSTA grant awarded by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

"Letters About Literature" — "Letters About Literature" is a writing contest for students in grades four through 12. To enter "Letters About Literature," select a book that excited you, then write a personal letter to the author and explain why and how this book affected you. The contest has three competition levels: Level 1: grades four-six, Level 2: grades seven-eight, and Level 3: grades nine-12. Entry forms and guidelines are available in both the Children's Room and the Young Adults' Room and can be obtained online at www.massbook.org. This is a program of the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with primary sponsorship from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum and additional support from Houghton Mifflin Co. and the Massachusetts Library Association. Submission deadline is Dec. 1, 2005

FOR ADULTS

Knitting group — Come join the library's new knitting group, Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 in the library's Historical Room. This is a fun group for all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring your knitting project and join like-minded friends at the library! For more information call Mary Coughlin at 781 383-1348.

Artist exhibit — Maureen Brookfield, a Marshfield artist, will display her works at the library through Oct. 30. Brookfield, an award-winning artist, will exhibit her watercolors.

Independent film series — The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will be showing the independent film, "The Middle of the World," Thursday Oct. 20 at 7 p.m. Free admission and refreshments. The library is located at 35 Ripley Road. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Book group — Join the group for coffee and discussion of Audrey Niffenegger's novel, "The Time Traveler's Wife," Thursday, Oct. 27, at 10 a.m. Register by calling Gayle Walsh at 781-383-1348, Ext. 120.

Sunday hours — In addition to its regular hours, the library is now open Sundays, 2-5pm.

Homebound delivery service — If you love to read but are unable to come to the library due to an illness or disability, the library offers a home delivery service. For those interested, a volunteer from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit you at your residence to discuss your reading preferences and take your requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to you and picked up and returned to the library on a regular schedule. If you, or anyone you know, might be interested in this program, call the library at 781-383-1348.

Computer help — Do you need help using the library's computers? Would you like to learn how to search the online catalog or reference databases? Sign up for a one-on-one tutorial with the Reference Librarian, Gayle Walsh, by calling 781-383-1348.

Confirming SC justices

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Over the past few weeks, I have become an expert on the process of selecting a justice for the U.S. Supreme Court.

What that means, of course, is that I don't have the foggiest idea of how they do it.

As I recall, in the days of Doug Ginsberg, all they had to do before they fitted you for the black robe was ask if you had ever smoked marijuana.

Right now, I swear you could torch a toke on the Capital steps in the presence of the entire membership of the Senate Judiciary Committee and nobody would even bat an eye.

I also recall the day that Clarence Thomas had to fight his way past a rented video tape of a movie that was never considered for an Oscar called "Long Dong Silver" to win his seat on the Big Bench.

Right now, I have a feeling that the committee would sit down and watch the show beside him and maybe even "oooh and aaah" at critical points in the action and the dialogue.

The buzzword these days, as the confirmation ordeal of Harriet Miers approaches, seems to be "crony," as in one without merit who was appointed to the job by one who is friends with the appointee.

Think Jane Swift and Matt Amarillo.

Internet bloggers, noting that Miers is 60, unmarried and dates (platonically, it is assumed) only Texas Judge Nathan Hecht, are abuzz with a word beginning with "L" that dares not speak its name.

Some of them probably speculated on that about Elizabeth Taylor, too, when she was between marriages.

When he nominated her to succeed Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, President Bush said she "shares my philosophy that judges should strictly interpret the laws and the Constitution and not legislate from the bench."

Everything was fine among the conservatives in the Bush camp until Senate Democrat-in-chief Harry Reid opened his big mouth.

"I'm very happy to have someone like her," said the guy who fought to the bitter end the nomination of Chief Justice John Roberts.

There's nothing that raises the red flag faster in front of conservative Republicans than to have a liberal Democrat say something nice about one of them. That one immediately falls under suspicion.

Vice President Dick Cheney had to be wheeled out of his secret hiding place and his temperature taken to reassure talk show host Rush Limbaugh that Western Civilization was still intact.

"You'll be proud of Harriet's record, Rush, trust me," he pleaded.

All that remains now is another month of prodding and poking at the nominee by the Senate Judiciary Committee and another month of bobbing and weaving on the part of Miers.

Then, after the TV cameras have gone back to the hunt for missing white girls, Miers will be confirmed and the sun will come up in the east the next morning.

After all, conservatives Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas have been on the Supreme Court for a decade or two and we haven't been set back to the 19th century.

Not yet, anyway.

LNG facility takes center stage

Bruce Berman, director of the Save the Harbor, Save the Bay initiative spends a full hour with co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin on Our Town discussing the proposed LNG (liquefied natural gas) facility proposed to be sited on Outer Brewster Island. Legislation is expected to the remove Outer Brewster from the National Park system.

Our Town also features roving reporter Rich Ofsthun visits with Cohasset residents of the four-legged variety at the Blessing of the Animals at St. Stephen's Church.

This edition will air Monday (Oct. 17) at 9p.m., Tuesday at 9:30p.m. A new show will air Thursday at 8:30p.m., all on Comcast channel 10. Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!

SPED MCAS scores need improvement

Grade 8 has some challenges

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

MCAS scores have been released, and overall, students in Cohasset are well prepared. However, in terms of Adequate Yearly Progress — which dictates the performance standards expected for students — Cohasset's special education students are not progressing as they should.

Adequate progress was not made in English language arts for special education students at Deer Hill, or in mathematics for special education students at the middle-high school. If a school is identified two years in a row as not meeting its AYP, the state may step in.

"I'm really concerned about the SPED (special education) subgroup," said school committee chairman Jamie Williams. She asked whether the limited progress could be the result of the decrease in special education aides at the schools as nine were laid off last year. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh replied, "Absolutely not."

The state issues an Adequate Yearly Progress, or AYP report as part of the requirements of the No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Act of 2001. According to the Department of Education, the Act was signed into law by President Bush in January 2002, and was designed with the goal of ensuring every child in the United States is proficient in English and math by the year 2014, which is demonstrated by passing the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, or MCAS test. A science proficiency component will be added to the MCAS test beginning with students in the graduating class of 2010.

Under NCLB, school districts receive annual "report cards," which outline progress being made toward 100 percent proficiency. The Massachusetts School and District Accountability System was designed to gauge that progress, and compiles the report every year. In Massachusetts, report cards are divided into six sections, one of which is a state Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) Report.

Director of Curriculum and Professional Development Nancy Mrzyglod presented the findings of this year's AYP report to the school committee Oct. 6.

"They are based solely on MCAS results," said Mrzyglod of the AYP reports. MCAS results for both typically developing students and special education students are included in the assessment.

To receive an affirmative AYP determination, there are many requirements which must be met, including student participation requirements, and an additional attendance or graduation requirement, among other things. A school may also make its AYP by reducing the number of non-proficient students by 10 percent via the Safe Harbor provision. "Some kids can't accelerate at the rate expected," Mrzyglod explained, and that option allows for more leniency but Cohasset did not comply even under the Safe Harbor standards.

Scores are broken down into eight sub-groups including: limited English proficiency, special education, low income, African American/ Black, Asian or Pacific island, Hispanic, Native American, and white. Mrzyglod explained students may fall into more than one sub-group category.

To help remedy the situation, Mrzyglod said an action plan is in the process of being put into place. An in-depth analysis to help identify the root causes for poor performance will be conducted and student performance goals will be set. In addition, the effectiveness of current practices will be assessed and focused professional development will be offered for teachers. Moving forward, the impact of the improvement strategies will also be monitored to ensure adequate progress is being made.

Typically developing students

There are some areas to watch for "typically developing" (regular education) students as well. Although overall, students are testing well, there are key areas where improvement has not been seen.

Cohasset competes against its own scores every year, and this year was a tough one for grade eight. Although last year, 35 students scored in the advanced range, this year that number dropped to 23. Last year, 40 students scored in the proficient category, but that number dropped to 33. The needs improvement number climbed from 21 to 24, and while 4 received a warning, or failing mark last year, this year that number was up to 20.

Grade eight science and technology also had disappointing results as last year there were four advanced scores, and that has dropped to two. Last year, 59 students were proficient, and this year, only 36. The needs improvement scores have increased from 32 last year to 44 this year, and those in the warning range have climbed from five to 18.

Where are the strengths and weaknesses of Cohasset students taking the MCAS test?

English language arts

Grade three
Strongest area: fiction (draw a conclusion).
Weakest areas: understanding text (identify the main idea) and English structure.
Grade four
Strongest area: fiction (draw a conclusion).
Weakest areas: understanding text (identify facts), composition (topic development and conventions) and open responses.
Grade seven
Strongest area: composition (topic development and conventions).
Weakest areas: non-fiction (interpret text to draw conclusion) and open responses.
Grade 10
Strongest area: composition (topic development and conventions).
Weakest area: literature (interpret meaning).

Math

Grade four
Strongest area: number sense.
Weakest areas: patterns, relations & algebra, geometry and open responses.
Grade six
Strongest area: patterns, relations & algebra.
Weakest areas: geometry, measurement and open responses.
Grade eight
Strongest area: data analysis, statistics & probability.
Weakest areas: number sense, patterns, relations & algebra and open responses.
Grade 10
Strongest area: patterns, relations & algebra.
Weakest area: measurement.

Science

Grade five
Strongest area: physical science.
Weakest areas: life science and open responses.
Grade eight
Strongest area: life science (biology).
Weakest areas: physics, technology/engineering, and open responses.

Police issue scam alert

The Cohasset Police Department is warning local business owners of a scam that has been going on for years. The scam is typically played out by a subject calling your business claiming to be your UPS driver. The caller then states his brother works for a large retail store like Best Buy or Sears and has access to an overstock of electronic equipment, usually plasma screen televisions, that he is trying to sell at a discount price.

The subject may know your name and some things about your business, to make it appear legitimate.

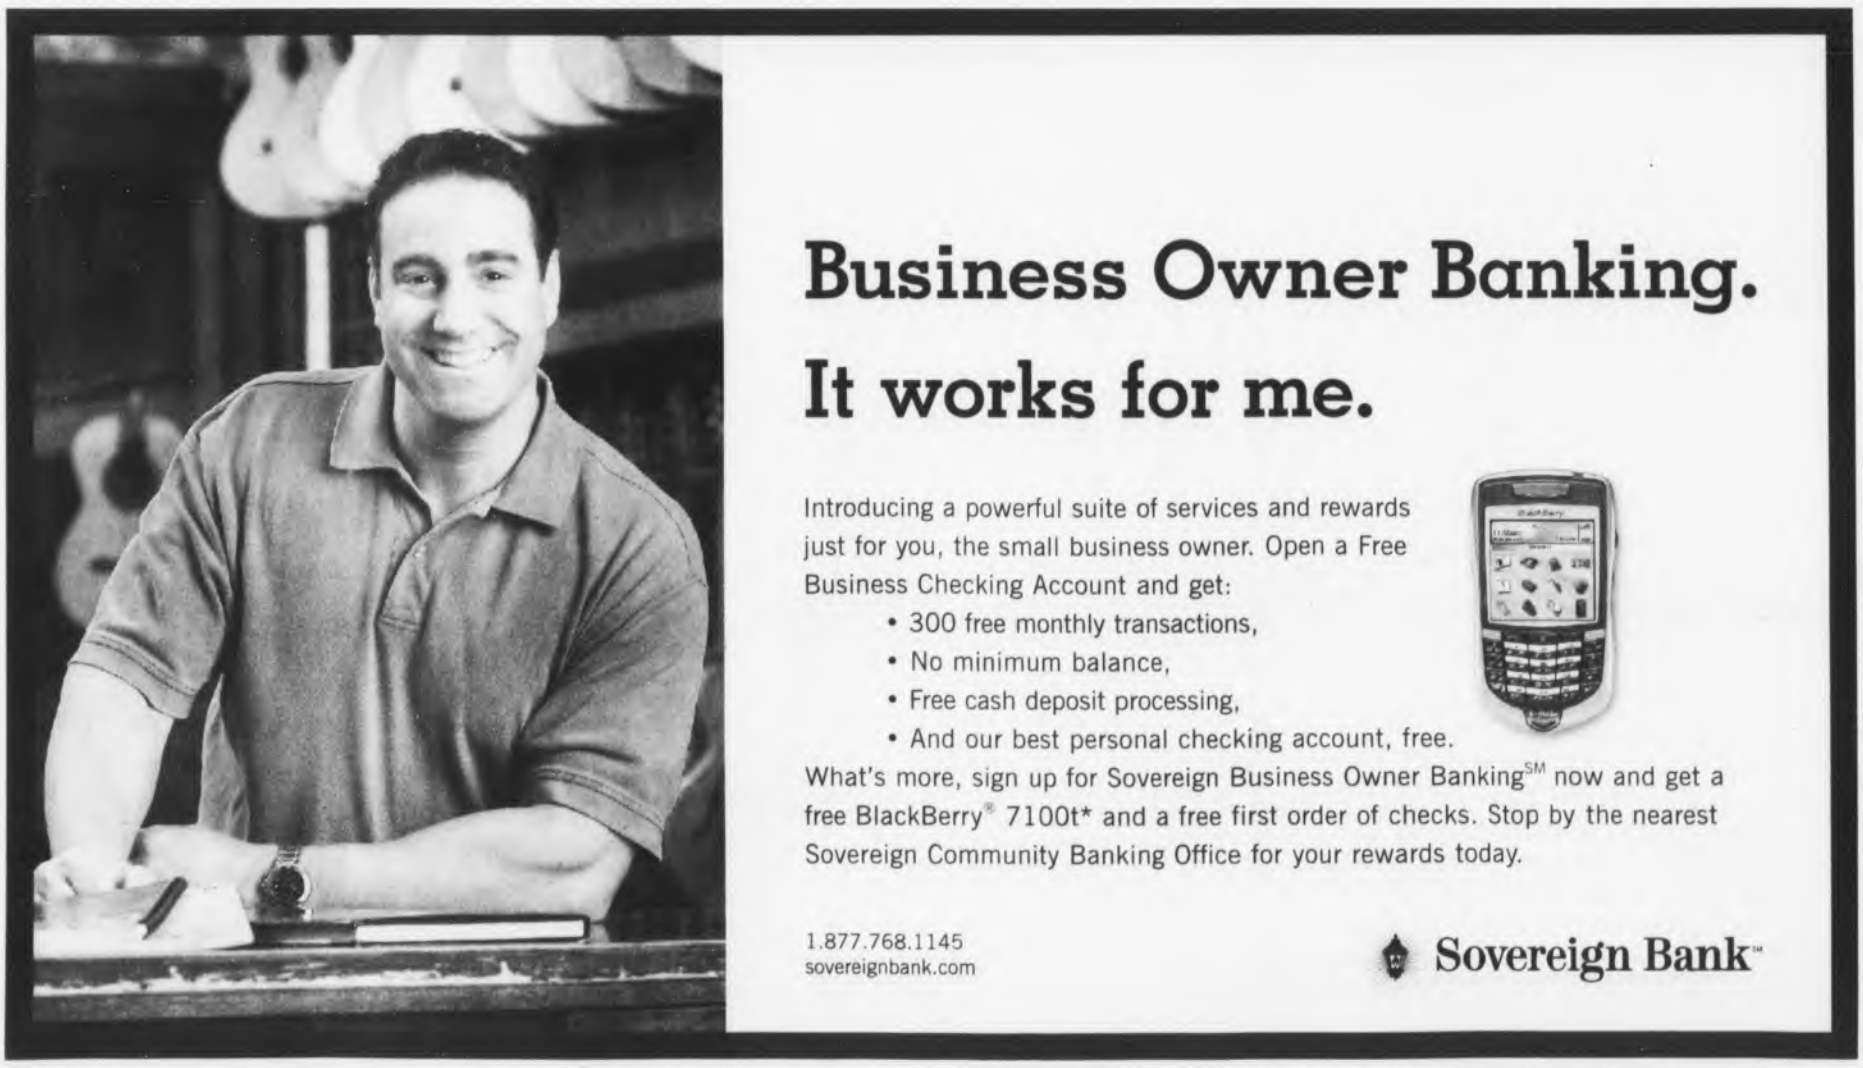
The subject may know your name and some things about your business, to make it appear legitimate. After some quick small talk and an agreed upon price, usually thousands of dollars, you are asked to meet in a parking lot at a designated shopping center with cash only. You meet the subject and hand over the cash. The subject then hands you a phony receipt and sends you around to customer pick-up where you wait for a period of time before you realize you have been scammed. At this point the subject and your money is long gone.

Most of these scams have been committed at malls in Danvers, Saugus, Somerville, and Burlington. If you get a telephone call like this, please dial *57 and contact the Cohasset Police Department immediately.

Naval Ammo. Depot reunion is Sunday

On Sunday Oct. 16, there will be a reunion of former ammunition depot employees and military personnel. The get-together will be held at the Wompatuck State Park Visitor's Center at 2 p.m. Visitors are encouraged to bring old photos, memorabilia and comical stories about the depot.

The ammunition depot was the main source of ordnance for the North Atlantic Fleet during World War II. It operated from 1904 to 1962.



Alzheimer's support group meets Oct. 26

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. will feature Carolyn Housman, LICSW, on "Communicating with and for the Patient" on Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the Hingham Senior Center, 224 Central St.

Housman is a specialist in elder care and care-partnering issues. She is currently associated with South Shore Mental Health and has a private practice. She was formerly director of the Alzheimer program for the Hingham Affiliated Community visiting Nurses/Partners Home Care.

She will discuss how to best speak for the patient with physicians, nursing home personnel, and day health centers, as well as communicating the patient's needs to family and friends. As the caregiver is often intermediary between patient and others, knowing what questions to ask and what information should be shared is most important. A question and answer time will conclude her program.

This meeting is free and open to the public. For more information call Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426 or JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 10

Selectmen show lack of concern for seniors

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week a majority of the Selectmen decided that they can ignore both the work and the votes of residents, and develop the Cook/Town project according to their own private plans. Those plans place a higher value on preserving open space than on preserving rentals for Cohasset seniors. Those rentals were the raison d'etre, the heart and soul of the Cook/Town project .The goal of the project was always to address a long identified need for additional housing options for senior citizens who want to stay in town, by using town land to create mixed income rentals for independent senior living. Voters overwhelmingly endorsed that project!

We now find that the town land that we dedicated for senior housing purposes at Town Meeting; land that was appraised in 2003 at $1,325,000, if developed with the Cook property, (and at $595,000 standing alone) isn't accessible because the Board didn't preserve our right of access. Without an unrestricted easement to that town land, this valuable parcel will no longer be available for senior housing. Selectmen Koed and Vanderweil now suggest that we have a town meeting do-over vote, because they don't want to develop the parcel. Why have they argued that it is environmentally correct to develop 3-plus acres on the Fairoaks side of Sohier Street, but not 4-plus acres on the other side?

Sadly, the majority of this Board of Selectmen has demonstrated their lack of concern for older residents with modest financial resources. Perhaps if they could afford a full-page ad in the newspaper touting their cause, the Board would listen more carefully.

Cohasset needs mixed income rentals for its seniors; we worked for it, we voted for it and we invested a substantial sum in that project. The Selectmen need to secure an easement to the town land consistent with that goal and in the spring we can focus on Phase II - Rentals and get this project back on track.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Selectmen public comment period

Selectman Gary Vanderweil suggested that members of the public, who have an issue will take more than the few minutes provided during the public comment period, call the selectmen's office to be placed on the agenda.

"If you have a comment, critique, or suggestion, do it, but for everything else, get on the agenda," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said in towns where he has previously worked, it has been the practice of boards not to respond to comments that require discussion, as the board should be given ample time to prepare, rather than answer questions on the spot.

The board agreed with Vanderweil and said that is the way public comment will be run from now on.

To be put on a future selectmen's meeting agenda, call the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Palmer on CPC

The board of selectmen has appointed Nathaniel Palmer to the Community Preservation Committee as the representative from the Cohasset Historical Commission. Palmer will fill the opening left by Paula Morse who has moved out of town.

Economic development committee changes

Planning board member Mike Westcott will serve as the ex-officio member of the economic development committee instead of chairman Al Moore who had previously been appointed. The board of selectmen has also appointed four residents to serve on the committee, including Chuck Hurd, 18 Jerusalem Road Drive; Thom Powers, 25 Powers Lane; Gabriel Gomez, 59 Highland Ave.; and Peter Brown, 38 Atlantic Ave.

In related news, Westcott said the committee had its first meeting Tuesday, Oct. 4 and there were several topics identified that it will be looking into including: obstacles to growth; opportunities to maximize what remains to be built and what already exists on Rte 3A; marketing and jobs, including businesses the town could attract; reaching out to the local chamber of commerce; and talking to the town of Lexington which has many "smart growth" initiatives in place.

The economic development Committee will meet for 12 weeks, and at the conclusion will present its findings to the board of selectmen which is still accepting applications for the committee.. Residents who are interested in planning commercial growth for the town should contact the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105, or send a letter of intent and a résumé to Town Hall at 41 Highland Ave.

Town has first option to buy 30-acres off South Main Street

Private group explains goals

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Land Foundation has entered into a purchase and sale agreement to buy 30 acres of land between South Main Street and Rte. 3A. However, due to land restrictions in effect on the property, the town has first dibs.

The property, owned by Osborne Ingram of Beechwood Street, has a 10-year forest management plan, certified by the state forester, which will protect the land from development, commencing in fiscal 2006. As a result, deputy assessor Mary Quill said in a letter to Ingram, that under Massachusetts General Laws, "The town has an option to purchase any classified land whenever the owner plans to sell or convert the land to a residential, commercial, or industrial use. If the owner plans to sell the land, the town has the right to match a bona fide offer to purchase it."

To help the selectmen in their decision-making process — as they must decide whether to bring the option of purchasing the land to Town Meeting — as well as open the lines of communication, Foundation members Dick Avery of Surry Drive and Jack Keniley of Black Rock Road came before the board Oct. 4 to outline what the Foundation's tentative plans are for the land and answer any questions.

Avery explained the Foundation is made up of a broad spectrum of residents with a wide variety of expertise, including legal, development, fund-raising, and construction. He said with the variety of talents available, it has been able to take a comprehensive long-range view at the possibilities in town for setting aside land for the future.

Current trustees of the Foundation include Avery and Keniley, Tom Callahan of Hillside Drive, Murray Campbell of Jerusalem Road, Frank Neer of Jerusalem Road Drive, Glenn Pratt of King Street, Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street, Rick Swanborg of Nichols Road, Gary Vanderweil of Jerusalem Road, David Weltman of Gammons Road, and Michael Westcott of River Road. Vanderweil, a selectmen, did not recuse himself during discussion, but did not add to the conversation.

The Cohasset Land Foundation is made up of a broad spectrum of residents with a wide variety of expertise, including legal, development, fund-raising, and construction.

Avery said the Foundation's goals are based on guidelines currently in place for the land foundation in the town of Lincoln, Mass., which essentially purchases land from residents, offers a fair market price, then sells off roughly 10 to 20 percent, while keeping the rest as open space. He said the land sold is "just enough" to cover the cost of the purchase, but not enough to make a profit.

Avery said the Foundation has a 12-month option to purchase the land from Ingram, and if it does, most would be preserved as open space. To obtain economic viability, about 20 percent would be devoted to commercial and/or residential development.

Selectman Michael Sullivan asked where the money comes from to purchase the land. Avery explained the Foundation will borrow funds from a bank and will likely bring letters from people who say they will back up the loan if necessary. He said with good planning, the Foundation can have an instantaneous transaction, which will allow it to purchase the property and sell off a small portion — therefore paying back the loan — all in the same day. He added the Ingram land will likely be passed on to the Cohasset Conservation Trust in the event it is purchased by the Foundation.

Avery said the Foundation is working on a plan for the land it will sell off and will be conducting perc tests throughout the sites to determine its options. "We'll be working in the coming months to cement the deal," he said, adding any transactions will involve the necessary town boards and will be in line with the town's Master Plan.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he would feel more comfortable if the foundation would compile a packet of information on itself, explaining who the members are and what their charter or mission is. "It sounds like you're going to be active," said Spofford, adding he would like to be well informed if the board is going to be working closely with it.

Because the foundation is not a government entity, its deliberations can be in private, which concerned Sullivan. "We have an option to purchase, but we have to sign off not knowing in full what you'll do. We may want to come to Town Meeting" to ask voters to purchase the land in December, he said.

However, Avery said the foundation may be a good mechanism for bringing the goals the town wants to see to fruition if they work together.

Selectman Chairman Fred Koed said sometimes town boards aren't quick enough to respond when property goes on the market, and the option to purchase land sometimes falls through the cracks, which might mean the Foundation could have a valuable role.

But Sullivan said this situation is different because while the town may sometimes not know when land is for sale and the Foundation will pick up on that, the board will have to sign off on its option to purchase the Ingram land and leave its fate to the foundation, potentially giving up an opportunity.

Spofford asked about the timeline the board will have to follow in regards to responding.

Deputy Assessor Quill said once Ingram sends a letter to the town notifying it of his intention to sell, the town has 120 days in which to reply. The town has not yet received such a letter.

"Let's get something in place so we can respond," Spofford said.

Sullivan reminded the board he recalled the sewer commission had at one point discussed using the land to build some kind of wastewater system for Beechwood residents. "There are limited parcels where you can put something like that," he said, adding it would be wise for the town to think of all the options it has before signing off on giving up the land.

Koed said while the town greatly needs a group like the Foundation, "We need to start in our minds thinking about what we might like to do with this (land)." He said once the town receives the notice that the land is for sale, it should form a sub-committee to look into the possibilities the town may want to consider for the future.

Selectmen curb talk about brick sidewalks in the village

Material change is out of question

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectmen say they have heard enough about brick sidewalks.

At their Oct. 4 meeting, a suggestion by developer Wayne Sawchuk to allow downtown merchants to lay brick in front of their shops was shot down, citing among other things, a previous Town Meeting vote against bricks.

"I'm having déjà-vu," said selectman Rob Spofford.

Sawchuk was a member of the Downtown Village Revitalization Review Committee, instated to help bring concerns about the village project to the forefront, and is familiar with what the village project entails. He and his business partner Robert Fesler of Dresden, Maine, have plans to build 12 apartments for seniors in the Samuel Bates House, also known as the "1811 building" which houses businesses located at 35 to 39 South Main St., including Bia Bistro.

"I'm having déjà-vu."
— Selectman Rob Spofford

As part of his renovations, Sawchuk has plans to build a pocket-park next to his building which will incorporate bricks, and revitalization plans for the town pump area outside Cohasset Hardware also include brick. He said he thought it might look nice if both sides of South Main Street could be paved with brick to make it a uniform streetscape. He also said he had spoken with some downtown merchants who said they would be willing to pay to have the brick installed. "What do you think?" Sawchuk asked.

The board was not receptive to Sawchuk's idea, as brick sidewalks are a topic that has been beaten to death in Cohasset. The thought of going down that path again did not sit well with selectmen.

The town is currently in the process of delving into a $1.8 million Village Revitalization Project which has been in the works for upwards of seven years and is being paid for through grants and private donations, not local property taxes. The town has roughly $1,169,000 left to spend, since redesigns have eaten up a good portion of the funds available.

Streetscape improvements have been sidetracked over the years due to disagreement over how much and exactly what should be done to revitalize the village area. Redesigns of the plans have not only cost the town money, they have cost the town time and deadlines have been set by the state for the town to either use the grants or lose them. Town Manager Bill Griffin was able to obtain an extension on the state PWED (Public Works Economic Development) grant until June 30, 2006.

The project hit a bump in the road last winter when it was put out to bid but only one company responded. The sole bid was too high so the project was put out to bid a second time. Three bids were submitted the second time around and Northern Construction's was the lowest at $1,421,321, and was therefore chosen. One other company submitted a similar $1.4 million bid, and a third company bid around $1.9 million, which was more money than the town has to spend on improvements.

At the time the bid was awarded, Northern Construction was expected to begin work the second week of September, but the water department agreed to make some improvements in the village earlier than expected, to avoid having to pave the road over twice. Therefore, Northern Construction is expected to begin its work within the next two weeks. Griffin said the project will likely begin with drainage improvements this fall, then the project will be closed up for the winter and resume in the spring.

A large part of the problem in finalizing the project was a disagreement regarding the material the town should use for the sidewalks. In fact, it took hours of discussion and finally a vote at the 2003 Annual Town Meeting for the town to finally decide once and for all it wanted concrete sidewalks and not brick. Talk of changing the sidewalks to concrete pavers instead of poured concrete surfaced once again in August 2004, but that idea was thwarted and the public's choice for poured concrete came out on top.

Spofford said the town has discussed the town's sidewalks very thoroughly and residents have voted for their preference and that vote was not for brick.

But Sawchuk rebutted, "Did they vote for concrete? Yes...well we're putting in asphalt!" Due to a lack of funding, poured concrete — which the town supported at Town Meeting — has been ruled out as a sidewalk option.

Griffin reminded Sawchuk and the board he has already signed a contract for the roughly $1.4 million project and changing the sidewalks to brick "would be a major deviation." He said there is no alternate for brick in the contract.

"I can't believe we're even having this discussion," said Spofford.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who had originally been a strong proponent for brick sidewalks said while at one point he did favor it, now, he does not think it's appropriate.

"At this stage, it's no longer an option," he said.

Field hockey looking for wins

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

"We just need to find that 'A' game mentality again and apply it to the skills we know and keep working hard."
CHS coach Deb Bostwick

October's unusually high winds and heavy rains have not dampened the enthusiasm of the Cohasset field hockey team.

After starting the season with three losses and one tie, the Lady Skippers turned in two very impressive victories.

Are the Lady Skippers gaining traction on the wet playing fields? For now, all we can do is cheer the players on, hang tight, and watch the Skippers seal their own fate.

Sept. 26th marked a momentum shift in the right direction. Alumni Field provided the setting for a whopping 10-1 victory over Hull. Almost everyone got into the scoring and assist action: Brooke Allen, Katie James, Erin Liddell, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Caitlin Hurley, and Virginia Spofford to name a few. Vanessa Plante, Devin Smith, Jessica Wheelwright, Laura Campedelli, and Molly Gallagher also contributed to this confidence building showdown.

The winning ways carried over to the next day when the Skippers shut out the Lady Rams on Marshfield's home turf. A few details make this victory particularly interesting.

First, the Lady Rams hold second place in the Old Colony League. So the Lady Skippers proved they can win against tough competition from bigger schools. Second, the Skippers' 5-0 win marked the first Cohasset shutout ever against Marshfield.

Finally, on a very personal level, this victory hit home with Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick.

At the end of the game, Marshfield head coach Carol Anderson complimented Bostwick for the great game. Years earlier, Bostwick played for Marshfield High and Anderson had coached her in field hockey.

"At Marshfield, everyone did their job well," said Spofford. "We knew we had to come out strong against a team as big as Marshfield. We played well individually and as a team, though. When a team has both of these factors working, it's tough to beat them."

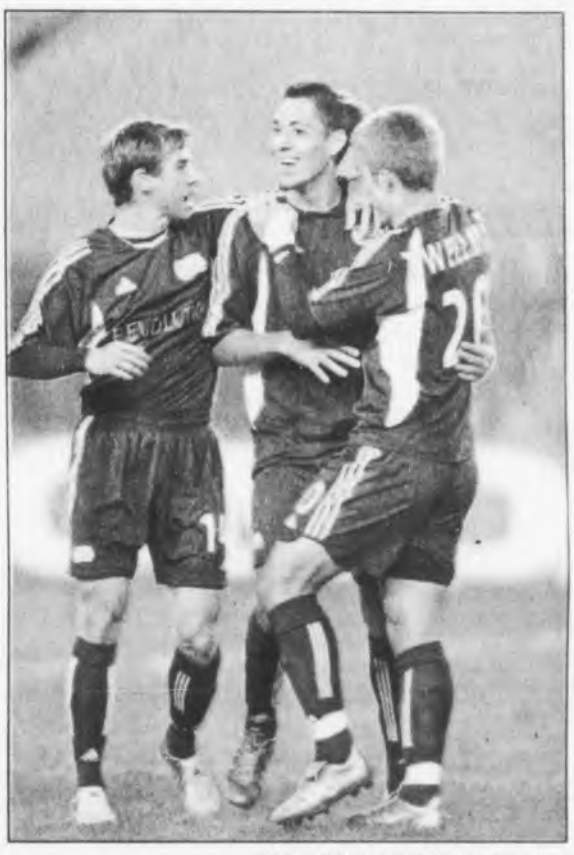
A Revolutionary visit

Pro soccer stars to conduct clinic in Scituate this Sunday

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM



Any young, aspiring South Shore soccer player who has ever dreamed of scoring goals like Taylor Twellman or making diving saves like Matt Reis will have their chance to learn from the pros themselves.

Twellman and Reis are two of the six New England Revolution players who will conduct a soccer clinic for youth players Sunday (Oct. 16) at Central Field on Branch Street. Joining them will be Clint Dempsey, Steve Ralston, Pat Noonan and Marshall Leonard.

The clinic, sponsored by investment firm RBC Dain Rauscher in coordination with the Scituate Soccer Club, is open to boys and girls and will focus on the fundamentals of the game. The players will also answer questions, sign autographs and pose for photos.

The event is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. It is free and does not require any pre-regis-

Beginning with today's home match against South Shore League-leading Harwich (3:30 kickoff), Cohasset's Aidan Buick (right) and his teammates begin a stretch of four games in five days that will go a long way in determining their postseason hopes. The boys host Scituate tomorrow at 2 p.m. as part of Homecoming weekend (for a complete Homecoming sports schedule, see page 18), then travel to Cardinal Spellman on Monday for a 6 p.m. match in Brockton. The run ends Tuesday with a 3:30 home match against Hull.

Skippers fend off late Carver comeback

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Holding a 21-0 lead entering the fourth quarter against Carver last Friday, Cohasset felt confident enough in victory to put in the second string.

Eight minutes and two Crusaders touchdowns later, however, and the starting offensive unit was scrambling to put their helmets on to get back in the game.

The first string was able to finish the job though, running off the last three minutes of the clock to preserve a 21-14 victory. The win improved Cohasset's record to 2-1-2; it was their first South Shore League contest.

A Carver 81-yard touchdown pass from Steven Bedard to Brandon Holbrook made it 21-14 with 3:13 on the clock. On the ensuing kickoff, Cohasset junior Fletcher Smallzel ran a 17-yard return to the Skippers' 37.

Two plays later it was third-and-7, and the Crusaders called timeout with 2:18 remaining. Skippers junior quarterback Anthony DiPaolo came up with a huge play, running around the right side of the line and, with a late burst of speed, got past the first down marker for a 10-yard pickup and a critical first down.

Senior tailback Shane Dorian finished it off from there, running the ball four times for 35 yards as the clock wound down. Included in that stretch was a 17-yard run through a big hole created by junior center Nick Cambi and senior right guard Nick Arment.

Dorian finished with 101 yards on 15 carries for the afternoon.

The Skippers looked like they would run away with the game early on, as they found the end zone on their first three drives. On the first possession, runs from Dorian (seven yards), DiPaolo (15) and Dorian (nine) again set up a second-and-1 at the Carver

James performed exceptionally well with a hat trick. Allen assisted in two of those goals. Hurley and Spofford also fired in a goal apiece.

"This was a special win," said Bostwick about the upset. "We proved that we can keep up even with the bigger towns."

This victory boosted the Lady Skipper morale. But with a team as unpredictable as Cohasset, there had to be a catch. On Oct. 5, the Skippers' confidence worked against them as they fell to Carver, 3-0, on Alumni Field.

"Clearly, overconfidence proved an issue," said Liddell. "With the two blowout victories, we stepped onto the field taking them [Carver] lightly. Once we realized we were in over our heads, we began making mental errors."

According to Bostwick, the Skippers defense lacked strong communication for most of the game. The coach did commend, however, co-captain Katherine Whoriskey, Liddell, Michelle Madge, and Sally Meehan for their solid late-game performances.

Two days later, Cohasset journeyed down to Crusader country to face part two of the Carver challenge. Although the Skippers only bettered their previous score by one point, both coach and players agreed Cohasset performed better this time around.

With a goal by Allen from James only 1:35 into the game, the Skippers came out strong. Four minutes later, though, Carver bounced back with their own goal to leave the score knotted at 1-1 at the half.

Unfortunately, Cohasset let the Crusaders hang around for too long. Carver racked up two quick second-half goals to end the game in a 3-1 Skippers loss.

"We just need to find that 'A' game mentality again and apply it to the skills we know and keep working hard," reflected Bostwick.

With a record of 2-5-1 heading into this week, hopefully the Skippers' 'A' game will surface soon. Cohasset needs to pull together at least a 5-2-1 record in their last eight games to reach the postseason.

Due to the recent string of rainouts, Cohasset faces the rather daunting task of playing those eight games in a 12-day span. The first of those contests is tomorrow at home (as part of Homecoming weekend) against Scituate at 6 p.m. The Sailors sport a 4-6-4 record, and are also facing an uphill climb to make the tournament.

The Cohasset girls then play three games in three days next week: Monday at home against Mashpee (4 p.m.), Tuesday at home against Norwell (6 p.m.), and Wednesday at Hull (4 p.m.).

CHS Homecoming sports schedule

Following are the home events scheduled for this Homecoming weekend in Cohasset:

Friday:

Varsity boys soccer vs. Harwich, 3:30 p.m.

JV boys soccer vs. Harwich, 3:30 p.m.

Varsity football vs. Mashpee, 6 p.m.

Saturday:

Varsity boys soccer vs. Scituate, 2 p.m.

Varsity girls soccer vs. Scituate, 4 p.m.

JV field hockey vs. Scituate, 4:30 p.m.

Varsity field hockey vs. Scituate, 6 p.m.

16. Dorian ran it in from there, aided by a nice downfield block from Smallzel.

Senior kicker Robert Murley, reliable as always, booted the first of his three extra points on the day to make it 7-0.

Carver's next drive was disrupted by a key third down tackle from sophomores Kyle Pinkus and Sam DeGiacomo, both of whom burst through the line on a blitz to stop Crusaders back Wayne Glanueski for a two-yard loss.

A Smallzel 15-yard punt return gave Cohasset excellent field position at the Carver 47, and the offense went to work again. Completions from DiPaolo to senior tight end Dan McCarthy (22 yards) and junior receiver Nick Zappalo (nine yards) and a six-yard run by sophomore fullback P.J. McCaw helped offset a couple Cohasset penalties.

The Skippers scored on a 20-yard run from DiPaolo (74 yards rushing for the game), who kept the ball on an option to the left side and was helped by a block downfield from sophomore back Brian Hill. Many of Cohasset's runs in the first half were to the left side, with linemen Justin Alexander and Paul St. Pierre blocking effectively.

With 4:33 to play in the first half, Pinkus scored the Skippers' third and final touchdown on a four-yard run. McCaw was a key contributor to the six-play, 47-yard drive. He had a 17-yard catch, ran the ball twice to set up first-and-goal, and was the lead blocker on Pinkus' touchdown.

The Cohasset defense held Carver in check for most of the game, thanks in part to the play of seniors David McKenna and Zack Etkind.

Next up: Mashpee

The Skippers will be aiming to stay in the win column tonight when they host the Mashpee Falcons at 6 p.m. at Alumni Field.

Mashpee comes to town sporting a 2-2 overall record, 0-1 in the league. That league loss came last Friday at home against Norwell by a 14-7 score.

The Falcons' defense kept Norwell's strong running attack under control for most of the game, and Cohasset cannot afford to look past them. Mashpee features a big offensive line and a solid passing game that will test the Skippers secondary.

A Revolutionary visit

tration; players attending are advised to bring their own soccer ball and water bottle.

Bruce Addison, long-time coach and Scituate Soccer Club board member, said he hopes the players who attend learn more than just soccer skills.

"I think the kids can learn from these guys what they had to do to achieve the success they've had," Addison said. "They'll find out the tremendous amount of hard work it takes to get where they are."

A financial advisor for RBC Dain Rauscher, Addison worked with a well-placed connection to help organize the event. Reis' wife, Nicole, works for the same company.

Reis, along with most of his teammates that will be in Scituate this weekend, are among the top players in Major League Soccer. Addison said one of the goals of the Scituate Soccer Club was to push for high-profile players that young fans would be familiar with.

That goal was accomplished; Reis, Twellman, Dempsey, Noonan and Ralston have all recently spent time with the U.S. national team, as it prepares for next summer's World Cup in Germany.

The Revs' leading scorer and a top candidate for this year's MLS Most Valuable Player, Twellman has amassed 16 goals and seven assists in just 23 games. Kids can expect to learn some valuable lessons about the art of finishing from one of the league's best.

Dempsey and Noonan, who have combined for 17 goals this season, have combined with Twellman to form one of the MLS' top offenses this season. With six assists, Ralston has helped set up some of those scores with some good play from the right wing.

Reis has had a breakout season this year, establishing himself as one of the league's top keepers. Leonard, meanwhile, has started 22 of the Revs' 31 league matches and has been a solid contributor on the left side of New England's midfield.

Addison said event organizers are hoping to draw close to 1,000 kids to the event. Those planning to attend are advised to arrive early; parking will be available across the street at Gates Intermediate School and at the adjacent Scituate Public Library.

Players from the Scituate High School soccer teams will be on hand to provide food and drinks, with proceeds from those sales benefiting the high school soccer programs.

Coastal Stars Mite C3 win big over Duxbury

The Coastal Stars Mite C3 hockey team won a hard fought game against Duxbury 4-1 at Pilgrim Rink in Hingham.

The Stars got on the board in first when Seamus Ryan took a feed from Brodie Fuller and beat the Duxbury goal tender to the far side for a 1-0 lead.

Later in the period, the Stars went up 2-0 when the line of Mathew Smith, Harry Sheldon, Marshall Feeney, and Brian Neuls and Dan Tobin displayed some solid fore-checking culminating in a break away goal by Mathew Smith who made a nifty move deeking out the goaltender for the score.

Cole Mckenzie, in his first game in goal, shut Duxbury out in the period with several saves.

Both teams played solid defense through out the second period. The Stars got stand out defensive plays by Colin Murray, Brodie Fuller, Seamus Ryan, and Jacob Latta during the period while Harry Sheldon and Mathew Smith had several breakaway chances and shots on goal.

Duxbury cut the lead to 2-1 early in the third period, only to see the Stars put on a great offensive display for the rest of the period. Dan Tobin and Shane Comeau had good scoring chances early in the period only to be denied by some stellar Duxbury goaltending.

Then midway through the period, Jack McNeil put the Stars up 3-1 when he scored his first goal of the season after taking a feed from Richard Reid and firing a wrist shot to the far corner.

Following a fine defensive play by Austin Sullivan, Sean Feeney then made the score 4 to 1 on a one timer off the rebound of a Jack McNeil shot leading to the final margin.

Lady Skippers hoping for big second half

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

If the CHS girls soccer team can figure out how to duplicate their second half effort from Tuesday's game with Carver over an entire 80 minutes, state tournament qualification is well within its grasp.

A 6-3 loss to the visiting Crusaders dropped Cohasset's record to 4-5 at the halfway point of their season. After being down 4-1 in the first 20 minutes, the Skippers picked up their game.

This was particularly true in the second half, when they carried play throughout. Freshman Torey Hart and junior Kara Wilcox both had quality chances in the first 10 minutes of the frame, only to have them saved or just miss the target.

Hart's chance in the 45th minute came on the end of a good-looking buildup. Junior midfielder Emily Coggins had a nice long ball down the left flank to the feet of freshman striker Gabby Flibbotte, whose cross into the area found winger Maggie McGoldrick. The freshman then made a nice pass to Hart, whose shot went over the bar.

Seven minutes later, junior Haley Haracz had a good shot from just inside the box, only to have it saved by the Carver keeper. After Carver's Kate Murray scored to make it 5-2, Cohasset had two more golden opportunities in the 60th minute.

A Hart shot (set up by a great cross from McGoldrick) was saved, and the rebound went right to junior striker Christina Pinkus, whose shot was cleared off the line by a scrambling Crusaders defender. It was that kind of day for Cohasset, as a goal in the 66th by senior Molly Trahon pulled the girls back within two, but they could not get any closer.

Cohasset's Sarah Coggins (left) fends off Harwich's Melissa Stella during the Skippers' 7-1 win on Sept. 22. Cohasset will be looking to get back to .500 this afternoon when they travel down the Cape for a rematch with the Rough Riders.

Skippers head coach Deb Beal said afterward she was encouraged by what she saw in the last 40 minutes.

"We're just having bad luck, as far as finishing goes," she said. "I thought we outplayed Carver in the second half. We just came to the ball a little faster, harder and stronger."

The coach praised the play of Haracz, freshman Sarah Coggins and sophomore Anna Haggerty for contributing to the solid team effort in the second half. Defenders Katie Bolger and Colleen Richardson also made some good plays in the half to support the midfield and help keep the ball in Carver's half of the field.

Now, Cohasset needs to figure out how to take better advantage of their possession. Beal said finishing would be top priority in Wednesday's practice, and we'll find out pretty quickly how that works out, as the team is about to embark on a stretch of four games in five days.

Today, the girls travel to Harwich for a 4 p.m. game, followed by matches tomorrow at home with Scituate (4 p.m.), Monday at home against Abington (5:30) and Tuesday at Hull (5 p.m.). If the Skippers can at least split those four, they will still have a very good chance at finishing with at least the nine wins necessary to qualify for the postseason.

That would seem to be an attainable goal, as Cohasset has already defeated Harwich and Hull by a combined 11-1 score. The Skippers lost to Scituate 6-1 on Sept. 8, and lost 4-1 to Abington last Thursday. Haracz scored the Cohasset goal in that game, as the team bounced back from bad first half to play the Green Wave even, 1-1, in the second.

COASTAL STARS

Squirt C-2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team opened their 2005 season on Sunday with a rousing 3-2 win over Hingham at Pilgrim Arena.

The Stars scored first with an unassisted goal from Mats Nelson playing from center. The two teams were skating hard and Hingham was looking for their first goal. Hugh "The Wall" Healey was tested time and again, making several great saves and keeping Hingham scoreless.

The second period had wing Cameren Mastrangelo, assisted by Daniel Cronin and Brodie Jackisch, put the Stars up 2-0. With the solid defensive efforts of Jake Denton, Sam Asnault, Jackisch, Jack Conlon, and Joe Proctor, Hingham was kept scoreless until late in the second period.

Finally, Hingham answered back and the score was 2-1. The excitement escalated with the Stars mounting another strong offensive attack. Wingers Jake Moore and David Craig's constant pressure created an opening for Derek Benson to score a backhander from the corner for the Stars' third goal.

For the second time in two days, the Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team won handily, this time against the team from Hanover on Columbus Day at Pembroke's Hobomock Arena. The Stars decided that they would score early, and they would score often, starting with center Tom Pilat's opening goal, assisted by Benson.

After a second quick goal by Derek, assisted by Denton and Asnault, the defensive line joined the scoring frenzy. Moore scored goal number three, assisted by Pilat. This was followed by another goal for Benson, assisted by Pilat, for the team's fourth goal. Unassisted goals earned Pilat his hat trick.

The Stars' defensive line was not to be outdone. Conlon was assisted by Mastrangelo, then Moore, on goals seven and eight. Moore scored goal number nine, assisted by Conlon. The game's 10th and final goal was scored by Denton. Needless to say, Healey was in fine form.

The strong and persistent efforts of Nelson, and defensemen Jackisch, Craig and Cronin contributed to the action on the ice. Crisp passing and solid backchecking made this 10-2 win a real team victory.

The Stars' next game will be played on Oct. 16 at 6:30 a.m. against Duxbury at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

SPORTS NOTES

Soccer Boosters pancake breakfast

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters will be holding their annual Pancake Breakfast on Sunday, Oct. 16 at the Deer Hill Elementary School from 8 a.m. to noon.

The breakfast is the group's major fundraiser for the year and the proceeds benefit the high school soccer program. The boosters provide the warm-up suits for the varsity teams and the scholarships for the graduating seniors.

The breakfast includes pancakes, sausages, bagels, donuts, juice, coffee and tea. The cost is $5 per person or $20 per family. The student-athletes will be selling tickets at various high school sporting events and youth soccer on Saturdays, or you can arrive on Sunday and purchase at the door. There will be a raffle drawing for all ticket purchasers that will be drawn at the breakfast; you need not be present to win.

The boys and girls teams will be there serving and greeting our visitors. There will also be a fundraising car wash that morning. Come join us for breakfast and have your car washed.

CHS football on TV

Replays of the Cohasset High School football games can be seen on channel 10. Games are replayed every week at three different days and times: Wednesdays at 5:30 p.m., Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 8 p.m.

Travel basketball registration

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will conduct registration for grades 5-8 travel basketball teams for boys and girls on Saturday, Oct. 15, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for this program is $75 per player and checks should be payable to CBBC.

The intent for the 2005-06 season is to further develop the travel basketball program by expanding both the number of teams in each age group, coupled with a longer season. Coaches are needed and may sign up at registration for coaching slots.

In order to accomplish this, an earlier than usual registration is necessary. Registration details regarding grades 1 and up, Saturday Recreation Basketball program will be coming soon. The date of registering will be Saturday, Nov. 5, and at that time there will be a Multi-Sports program registration.

Details regarding the Nov. 5 registration will be available via local news media and coming home via school in the near future.

Baseball club looking for players

Henry's Baseball Club in Waltham is looking for players between the ages of 17 and 40 to play in its current fall ball league.

Games are played on Sunday's at 11 a.m. The club plays year-round, with a winter indoor league and spring competition also.

The club is also looking for coaches, helpers and volunteers. For more information or to sign up, call Henry at (781)891-0621.

Seadogs tryouts

The first in a series of clinic/tryout sessions for the nationally renown Seadogs/AAU Travel Team Baseball Program's 2006 season will be conducted Sept. 10-11 at fields in Braintree, Norwood and East Bridgewater.

The Seadogs will field seven teams in 2006:10-and-under through and including 16-and-under. Players are selected from a series of clinic/tryouts held throughout this fall. The cut-off day to determine proper age group for 2006 teams is July 31, 2006.

The 2005 Seadogs enjoyed their most successful season, highlighted by the 12-and-Under team's Silver Medal performance in the AAU National Championships.

2006 Seadogs Clinic/Tryouts Schedule

U10 - Oct. 29-30, 8-10:30 a.m. at SSBC, Hingham.

U11 - Oct. 29-30, 8-10:30 a.m. at SSBC.

U14 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at SSBC

U15 and U 16 - Oct. 29-30, 2-5 p.m. at SSBC

"We want every interested player to have a shot at making the roster, in addition to learning more about playing baseball at the clinic," SSBC director Frank Niles, Jr. said.

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships held all across the country.

The Seadogs program is intended to supplement, rather than replace, local Little League, Babe Ruth, or American Legion baseball programs.

ROTARY CLUB

Rotary District Governor Paul Welch, shown with current Cohasset Rotary Club president Brad Goodwin (left), congratulates four former Cohasset Rotary Club presidents - Damian Grozier (2002-2003), Ken Warner (2001-2002), Ken Roth (1999-2000) and Robert Groebel (2000-2001) with the "Paul Harris Fellow" award at a recent Rotary club meeting. The award also recognizes a $1,000 contribution made by the Cohasset club to the Rotary Foundation, for each of the awards, which funds many International projects like the successful "Polio Plus" program.

Rockland Trust golfers win Chamber Cup

The rescheduled Cohasset, Marshfield, Scituate Chambers of Commerce Golf Tournament went off without a hitch on Sept. 27. Over 60 golfers teed off for the 9 hole match. The winning Chamber Cup team was Rockland Trust Company's captain Joe Norton, Irene Dunn, and Dick Blake, with a score of 31.

Second place team was Damon, Topham and Company's Scott Hokanson, Tom Healy and Mark Paradise, led by team captain John Topham. Closest to the pin for women was won by Kathleen Taylor of Animal Pharm in Scituate Harbor. Closest to the pin for men was won by Ted Gledhill of Sullivan Garrity Insurance Company.

The Chambers are grateful to tee box sponsors: Animal Pharm, Damon, Topham & Company CPA, Mariner Newspapers, Pier 44, Rockland Federal Credit Union, Rockland Trust Company, Shoreline Mortgage. Thanks also to South Shore Signs for making the signs, and to prize and goodies' donors: All the Best Natural Food store of Cohasset, McSweeney & Ricci Insurance, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Road to Responsibility, Scituate Federal Savings Bank, and South Coastal Savings Bank.

Leahy named to bank board of directors

David H. Leahy, Jr., of Cohasset, is the newest member of South Shore Co-operative Bank's Board of Directors. He has been a Corporator of the Bank since 2003.

Leahy was enthusiastic about this new chapter in his partnership with South Shore Co-operative Bank. "I have always appreciated the hands-on, front line approach South Shore Co-operative Bank has with their customers," he explained.

"It's the way I choose to deal with my own customers" added Leahy, who has been president of Boston Textile, based in Quincy, since 1986. The company supplies products to commercial customers including hotels, hospitals and nursing homes.

"I believe a true commitment to being responsive to customer needs means everything in today's highly competitive banking marketplace. South Shore Co-operative Bank's ability to deliver the products and services that customers want in a highly personal and expedient way is what makes them a smarter bank. They understand the significant value that gives their customers," Leahy concluded. He and his wife have four grown sons.

Deer Hill elects Student Council

Deer Hill School recently elected members of the 2005-2006 Student Council. The Student Council, under the direction of classroom teachers Kayne Beaudry and Jennifer Clark, assist the school in a variety of activities.

Classroom representatives bring suggestions from their classmates and discuss possible ways to improve the school. Student Council members also assist at Open House, Parent-Teacher Conferences, MCAS Mania, and coordinate charity work for the school. For example, last year's Student Council raised more than $1,700 for the victims of the Tsunami.

Last year's Student Council raised more than $1,700 for the victims of the Tsunami.

One member is elected by his or her peers in each classroom and these representatives attend monthly meetings to discuss suggestions, propose new ideas, or to plan for upcoming events. Congratulations to the members of the 2005-2006 Deer Hill School Student Council.

Student Council continues to reach out

— CMS NEWS —

Student Council Elections were recently held at Cohasset Middle School. The following students were elected to the council:

Grade 8: Philip Galligan (president); Emmi St. John (vice president); Taryn Donahue (secretary);Lucy Noble (treasurer); and class representatives Keegan Flynn and Isabelle Franklin.

Grade 7: President: Sam Richardson (president); Eric Wasel (vice president); Caroline Meade (secretary); Sam Green (treasurer); and class representative Danny Aherne.

Grade 6: homeroom representatives Daniella Healy, Megan Green, Camryn Caron, Sage Stebbins, and Moira Donahue

Last year the Student Council raised awareness to the needs of others less fortunate. The council began with the Cohasset Food Pantry Drive followed by the Middle School clothing drive for Fr. Bill's Place and Rosie's Place. The end of the year they sponsored a council member in the MS Walk and donated to Heifer International. This most worthwhile organization works to help hungry people feed themselves by providing the necessary tools, education, and resources for self sufficiency.

This year the council will continue to reach out to help others both locally and internationally through similar charity work. Additionally, the council has scheduled a Halloween Dance for late October, a School Spirit Week in mid-March, and a Cohasset Sportwear Sale in April. Currently, the Student Council is helping to organize the seventh grade magazine drive to benefit the Class of 2011 as it begins making preparations for its senior year activities (only six years away!).

Arc, art team up for Oct. 15 event

The Arc of the South Shore will host "Art from the Heart," an art show and wine tasting fundraiser to showcase the artistic talents of children and adults with mental retardation and developmental disabilities. The heartwarming event will be held on Oct.15 at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, from 5 - 8 p.m. Attendees will be delighted by a wide array of art and fine wine, and have the opportunity to participate in a silent auction. The event runs in conjunction with "Piecing it Together: Rhoda Cohen, Radka Donnell, Sylvia Einstein, Beatriz Grayson, Nancy Halpern and Ruth B. McDowell," an exhibition of art quilts by six New England premier quilt makers, running through Oct. 23.

The co-chairs for this year's event are Donna Green, a well-known Cohasset artist, and Richard Frye, president of the Frye Agency in Braintree. Frye, a resident of Braintree and active community member, has been involved in The Arc of the South Shore since 1974, where he has served as President, Vice President and member of the Board of Directors. Green, who owns the Donna Green Studio in Cohasset, has published 14 illustrated children's books, including "The Velveteen Rabbit." Her original paintings hang in many prestigious private collections around the world, including a piece purchased by the White House during the first Bush Administration.

The Arc of the South Shore, headquartered in Weymouth, has provided advocacy, support, training and services to South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities since 1951. The non-profit organization serves more than 1,500 individuals and families each year. The Arc of the South Shore provides services to 10 South Shore towns, including: Braintree, Quincy, Weymouth, Randolph, Milton, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate, as well as various other communities throughout greater Boston and Cape Cod.

Tickets to the "Art from the Heart" art show and wine tasting are $50 each. To purchase tickets or to make a donation to The Arc of the South Shore, please mail checks payable to The Arc of the South Shore, and mail to 371 River Street, Weymouth, MA 02191. For more information, call Mary Ann Walsh at 781-413-2230 or email mawalsh@arc-southshore.org. Corporate sponsorships are also available for this event.

IT'S HAPPENING

Submitting short stories for publication

Buttonwood Books' Grub Street South will hold a panel discussion on submitting short stories to literary journals, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 7 p.m., at Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A. Editors from three literary journals will discuss the topic: Submitting a Story to Literary Journals – What do Editors Seek in a Short Story? Publications represented by the panelists are "Agni," "Night Train," and "Portrait."

"Agni" calls Boston University home and is supported by the graduate Creative Writing Program. They publish poetry, short fiction and essays. "Night Train" is a print literary journal that debuted in the fall of 2002. They publish all types of stories but prefer those with an edge. "Portrait" selects the works of one author and one visual artist, and places them together. They focus on portraiture as a genre.

Admission is free. Reservations are requested. Call 781-383-2665. Manuscripts will not be allowed.

Dramatic Club presents 'The Best of Broadway'

Cohasset Dramatic Club will present a Musical Review "The Best of Broadway," Saturday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. The production features some of the best loved songs from musicals old and new, including "Rent," "Godspell," "Smoky Joe's Cafe," "The Scarlet Pimpernel," "Nunsense," "Guys and Dolls," and "The Sound of Music." The arrangements are performed by a top-notch cast of singers and dancers assembled for the musical. All proceeds will go directly to Hurricane Katrina relief efforts. This is a one night only event. Tickets are $15 per person and are available at the door, or by calling 617-697-2115.

'Float the Boats' fashion show, lunch

The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) is in the midst of an aggressive fundraising initiative. The two "sliding seat fours" that the group has rented for the last six years are being recalled by their owner at the end of this season.

CMI's goal is to fund raise $30,000 for the purchase of two of its own sliding seat fours. At this time, the group is just about half way there and a "Luncheon and Fashion Show" is being planned to keep the fundraising momentum going. Please plan to join CMI on Tuesday Nov. 8 from 11:30a.m.-2p.m. at the Square Cafe in Hingham. A lunch will be served and "The Sports Closet" of Cohasset is presenting a sportswear and work-out attire fashion show. Tickets are $75 per person ($50 of which is tax deductible) and may be obtained by calling Susan Galligan (781-383-0765) or at Buttonwood Books.

CMI offers Middle and High School rowing programs and an extensive adult program. Help keep ocean rowing alive on Cohasset's waters and join CMI and its' friends and supporters for an afternoon in support of the CMI rowing program.

Consignment Shop offers seasonal items

Managers' Andi Merrill of Scituate and Colleen Roth of Cohasset announce new fall cashmere sweaters in lime, orange, pink, tan and brown along with knitted wool sweaters by Ralph Lauren as well as Brooks Bros. Lord and Taylor, Talbots, TSE and Forte are available at Sea Chest Consignment Shop.

To protect you from the cold and rain there are men and women burberry coats with matching plaid lining and hoods and a man's English made fall hat.

For the young college and teenager view the blazers in fall colors and sizes from petit to large along with kilts and skirts and even colorful selections of vests to complete your outfit.

For the new homeowner there are signed gold frames pictures by actor Lionel Barrymore. A signed reverse painting with gold frame mirror and picture of colorful swan boats and also antique hunting scenes including dogs and horses framed in gold. Other antiques are a signed wood cigar box, an antique Irish bellect tea set.

Those who spend as much decorating for Halloween as Christmas will find young peoples' costumes, frogs, ballet dancer, and a Dalmatian dog. If you are planning a party for Halloween, the shop has one decorated for you complete with center piece and table cloth.

For those looking for jewelry and priceless Italian China vases come before they are discovered by your neighbors. There are new Ester Lauder compacts that are gold and half price. Discover the unique antique crystal and China, and cut glass serving dishes in time for Thanksgiving dinner.

The shop will have regular consigning hours, Monday through Friday, 10 to 11:30 a.m. and special hours 6 to 8, Thursday evening through October. For more information call 781-383-2293. The shop is off Route 3A, behind Coastal Cleaners.

Shelter fundraiser tickets available

Tickets are now on sale for the Scituate Animal Shelter's Bark 'n Howl Ball, that will be held on Saturday, Oct. 29, at the River Club in Scituate from 7 p.m. to midnight. The evening will feature an extensive buffet, cash bar and dancing to the lively music of The Gathering. There will also be a silent and live auction. Tickets are $125 each ($100 is tax deductible) and all proceeds benefit the 3A Farm Fund.

The shelter is currently working with various town boards and Scituate town meeting to gain permission to relocate to the 3A Farm at the corner of Route 3A and Mann Lot Road. A new 2,500 square foot facility will be built to accommodate the growing area need to help stray, homeless, injured, and surrendered companion animals from Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

Tickets are limited and available at the Shelter on the Driftway in Scituate, and at Daylily, 707 Main St. in Norwell Center, Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset, Sylvia's by the Sea in Scituate Harbor, and Brewed Awakenings in Hingham Center. Reserved tables and sponsorships are available.

OBITUARIES

Brenda (Noonan) Malone

Registered nurse

Brenda (Noonan) Malone, 58, of Sun City West, Ariz., formerly of Cohasset, died Sept. 7, 2005, at her home, after a long illness.

The daughter of the late Robert and Dorothy Noonan of Cohasset, she was a 1965 graduate of Cohasset High School, and the Truesdale Hospital School of Nursing.

Mrs. Malone was a registered nurse.

Daughter-in-law of the late John Malone of Cincinnati, she leaves her loving husband of 29 years, Ret. U.S. Navy veteran William Malone; a son, Andrew Malone of Long Beach, Calif.; a sister, Anne Bunstein, of Cohasset; two brothers, Robert Noonan, and Brian Noonan, both of Cohasset; many nieces and nephews; her extended family in Massachusetts and Kentucky; and many friends from her husband's Navy career.

A funeral mass in Mrs. Malone's memory will be held at 1 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 22 at St. Anthony's Church.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in Mrs. Malone's name may be made to Joseph House for Homeless Veterans, P.O. Box 14608, Cincinnati, Ohio 45250; or to the Hospice of the Valley, c/o Donations, 1510 East Flower St., Phoenix, AZ 85014.

Priscilla Keegan

Craved knowledge and learning; loved New England

Priscilla Ann (James) Keegan, age 78, of Roosevelt, Utah formerly of Cohasset died Oct. 1, 2005, at the Uintah Basin Care Center in Roosevelt, Utah.

She was born in Lowell, the daughter of Charles Francis and Mildred Orcelia (Hauver) James. She married Ralph Edward Keegan, Jr., on Nov. 24, 1949, in Brookline.

Mrs. Keegan was always learning and craved knowledge – so much so that people thought she had more than just her high school diploma. She had good political sense, and loved being "a New Englander."

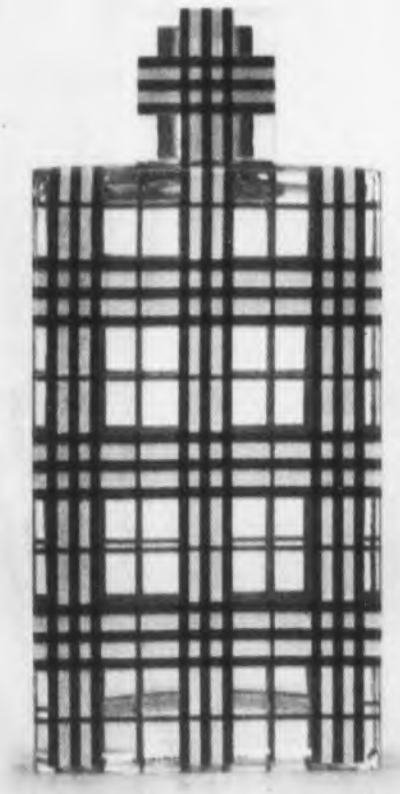
She was very artistic. In earlier years she crocheted and knitted, and liked home decorating and design, favoring the Early American and Colonial periods. She enjoyed musicals and old romantic movies. She loved great music, and had a beautiful singing voice.

Priscilla Keegan

Mrs. Keegan considered herself to be Methodist and enjoyed talking with people. She always said the last thing to go would be her mouth and her mind.

She had a very compassionate heart. She loved her family, especially her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Wife of the late Ralph Edward Keegan, Jr., she leaves two daughters, Bonnie Lee Keegan (Arvin) Winterton of Roosevelt, Utah, and Nancy Ann Keegan (Allen) Jenkins of Camarillo, Calif.; 10 grandchildren, Sybrina, Ryan, Kimberlee, Jay, Seth, Jeremy, Lindsay, Spencer, Corinne, and Jocelyn; nine great-grandchildren; a brother, M. Alden James of Arizona; a sister, Marjie Marquis, and a step-sister, Susan James, both of Massachusetts; and a special brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Harold and Elinor Coughlin, and their children, Donna and Scott of Cohasset.



Graveside services will be held Saturday, Oct. 15, 1:30 p.m., at the Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

OVERPRICED REAL ESTATE, RISING INTEREST RATES, SOARING GAS PRICES

I CAN SHOW YOU HOW TO FIGHT BACK AND REGAIN CONTROL OF YOUR LIFE!

Fred Rewey, President
American Cash Flow

I know it's not easy. It seems like Middle America is being hit from every angle... gas prices are out of control, credit card debt is rising, and the housing market has us all scratching our heads.

The costs keep going up and up while your income continues to hover around "barely making it."

But there is a way for you to fight back and take control of your financial future.

And I can show you how.

TAKE ACTION

What I've found is it's not what happens to you, but rather how you respond to what happens that makes the difference.

And with the right training and tools, you can be financially secure no matter what the world throws at you.

I've trained thousands of people just like you how to make money, no matter which way the winds of change are blowing.

Now it's your turn to decide for yourself what your future will look like... juggling bills and spending day after day after day worrying about money? Or enjoying worry-free time with friends and family doing the things that make life worth living.

A career in cash flow — a trillion-dollar industry centered around money — is the best way I know to regain control and start living the life you deserve.

Whether you start out part time to get your feet wet and supplement your income or you dive right in as a full-time consultant, I know your cash flow career can be just what you need to put life in perspective and put money in your pocket.

START NOW

Exactly what would your career in cash flow be like? Well, as part of the financial services industry, you'll be connecting people and businesses who need money to the funding sources who have money.

The key is knowing the who, where, and how of making these connections.

This is where the training program and resources from the American Cash Flow Institute come in.

ACFI shows you how to find the money, get it to the people and businesses who need it, and make yourself a nice profit in the process.

FINANCIAL FREEDOM REALLY CAN BE YOURS

Getting started now gets you that much closer to your goal of financial freedom. Why wait and then say, "I wish I had done this sooner," when you could be cashing your first check in record time.

My free workshop will be in your area in the next few days. Come and see for yourself how it really is possible for you to have a future where you're in control and your actions lead you to financial freedom and security.

You can't control the price of gas, interest rates, or the real estate market.

What you can control is what you'll do to start making the type of money that'll have you focusing on the joys of life — not the worries that are plaguing Middle America.

With absolutely no risk and no obligation, you cannot afford to pass up this opportunity to take charge of your future.

Make plans right now to attend. Get ready to erase the doom and gloom and replace it with a life of financial security and peace of mind.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS THIS!

Passenger on Spirit of '98 checks out the sights

The Spirit of '98 on the Columbia River

Spirit of '98 at waterfall

By JERRY BROWN
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

ORTLAND, Ore. -- The 200th anniversary of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, a two-year national celebration culminating in November, has focused public attention on the Columbia River, at whose mouth the historic trek ended in the winter of 1805. Following in the footsteps -- or the wake -- of those intrepid explorers, as I did recently on Cruise West's small ship Spirit of '98, on a round-trip cruise from Portland, brought life and color to a tale that I had heard before, but which I had pretty much marginalized.

A simple recitation of the facts does not do justice to the significance of the 8,000-mile round-trip journey of the two soldiers, Meriwether Lewis and William Clark. Their names are woven into the fabric of American history. At the behest of President Jefferson, they led a party of 45, collectively known as the Corps of Discovery, on a journey of exploration into the Pacific Northwest, an area about which little was known other than the fact that it was rich in animal furs and minerals and inhabited by frequently hostile natives.

It took them almost two years to complete their task of finding a land/water route to the Pacific Ocean, which they reached in November 1805, mapping the land en route and establishing contact with the Indians where possible. They were years of hardship -- of bitter cold, broiling sun, white-water rapids and battles with Indians, disease and starvation. But when their ordeal was over, the nation knew more about the geography and trade potential of the land mass then known as "the Oregon country" than it did before. And it had immeasurably strengthened America's claim to the land.

Cruise West's seven-day round-trip cruise, "A River Voyage of Discovery,' which explores the Columbia River along the Oregon-Washington border -- with a side trip by jet boat ride into Hell's Canyon on Idaho's Snake River -- is a cruise that will appeal to anybody with an interest in our nation's early years. The cruises are offered in the spring and fall.

Lewis and Clark are the stars of the show, of course, brought alive by the lectures and slide shows presented by the ship's onboard historians and the sites (and sights) visited. But the Spirit of '98 proved to be a vessel that doesn't necessarily need a historical "angle" to please passengers. The 98-passenger ship, named for the spirit of the gold prospectors in Alaska and the Yukon in 1898, has a laid-back, comfy feel to it.

Don't look for gaming tables or slot machines. There aren't any. Don't look for glitzy, Broadway-style reviews with long-legged dancers and 16-piece orchestras. These, too, are nowhere to be found. The Spirit of '98 is not an entertainment-heavy vessel. Put it this way: The funniest after-dinner show of the week was a Liar's Club-type of presentation with three crew members in the hot seats and the passengers throwing questions at them! Corny? Yeah. But fun.

What the Spirit of '98 does have, and what you don't get much of on big ships, is a feeling of family. Within minutes of boarding, everybody knows everybody else. The bar/lounge becomes the focal point of activity in the evening, with people who were complete strangers just days ago swapping war stories as though they had known each other all their lives.

The ship excels in cuisine, something that you might not necessarily expect of such a small-galley vessel. Chef Charles Mecke, whose food preparation experience includes stints with such diverse outlets as the restaurant at the Baltimore Orioles' Camden Yards Ballpark and the ski resort at Breckenridge, Colo., manages with the help of a galley staff of four others to produce some surprisingly good menus. A typical menu might feature crab bisque for starters, a baby spinach or house salad to follow and entree options of roasted pork rack with bourbon-mustard sauce, halibut Alyeska, penne pasta with prosciutto and sage, and seasonal vegetable torta.

The cabins are not large but they are totally functional and relatively comfortable.

Daily shore excursions (on luxury coaches driven by the same driver each day and narrated by the onboard "expedition leaders," as Cruise West likes to call them) are included in the price of the cruise.

This particular itinerary is heavily larded with Lewis and Clark sites. They are featured in the museum at Fort Walla Walla, Wash., and the Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center in Ilwaco, Ore. Our tour also included Fort Clatsop at the Lewis and Clark National Historic Park in Warrenton, Ore., where the expedition endured the miserable, hungry, frozen winter of 1805-06 before making its way back east, a land hike that took them nine months or so. Unfortunately, a recent fire destroyed the 50-year-old replica of the fort, despite the efforts of volunteer firefighters. The fort is expected to be rebuilt. Meanwhile, the Fort Clatsop Interpretive Center remains open, and Cruise West officials said the line's ships will continue to visit.

The Columbia River is not only a study in the history of two centuries ago. It also is an example of the modern exploits of the Army Corps of Engineer, which, starting in 1930, built a series of lochs, lifting and lowering the Spirit of '98 and other river traffic a total of about 740 feet above sea level, taming a river that must have been a nightmare for Lewis and Clark and their Corps of Discovery to navigate. They'd no doubt be impressed by what river travelers encounter today.

Cruise West offers Columbia/Snake River cruises on the Spirit of '98 in September and October and again in April. Rates are from $2,549 per person. The other two Cruise West ships in the market at that time are the Spirit of Alaska (rates from $1,799) and the Spirit of Discovery (rates from $2,499). For reservations call 800-203-8306 or go to www.cruisewest.com

Julie Andrews brings her 'Boyfriend' to Boston

Legendary performer tries her hand at directing in national tour of musical comedy

Does Blake Edwards know about this? Julie Andrews is bringing "The Boyfriend" to Boston this week.

Actually the acclaimed filmmaker has nothing to worry about. Unless, of course, he is bothered by having another director in the family.

It may be too late, though, since Edwards' legendary wife — actress and singer Andrews — first directed the version of the musical comedy "The Boyfriend," now at Boston's Shubert Theatre, for a 2003 Sag Harbor mounting that began its national tour at Connecticut's Goodspeed Opera House in July.

Julie Andrews

At a Shubert Theatre press conference this summer, Andrews explained why she chose to be a director and not a performer on her current project.

"My singing voice is non-existent. Since I stopped singing, I've chosen opportunities I might not have were I still singing," said the Academy Award winner for "The Sound of Music" who underwent unsuccessful vocal cord surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital in 1997.

Andrews made her Broadway debut in "The Boyfriend" in 1954 and remains a fan of the Sandy Wilson show that spoofs 1920s musical comedies to tells its tale of an unexpected romance on the French Riviera which blossoms when an English heiress falls for a delivery boy.

"It has a lot of happy memories for me and I feel I have an edge because I know it so well. It's such a endearing show. It's a piece of lace. It's toe-tapping. It leaves you with a smile on your face and there's tons of fun along the way."

Even without singing, the 70-year-old Andrews is finding plenty of her own fun in a career that now includes acting, directing and writing children's books.

"It's a real turn-on for me to have the chance to play in so many different sandboxes. It's so stimulating. I just hope people enjoy what I do."

"The Boyfriend," with book, music and lyrics by Sandy Wilson, and directed by Julie Andrews, will be at the Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston, through Oct. 23. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

CDC stars shine for good cause

'Best of Broadway' show benefits hurricane relief effort

From the earliest reports of Hurricane Katrina's devastating impact on Louisiana and Mississippi, JoJo Fichtner - Cohasset resident and South Music Circus House Manager - found herself asking: "What can I do to help?"

"It was Labor Day weekend, and I was working at the Julio Iglesias concert when I first realized how important it was that we do something to help," recalled Fichtner last week by telephone." My daughter, Lisa Pratt, is an usher at the Music Circus and also a Board member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) so I got her involved right away even though we were just wrapping up our summer jobs."

Before long, Fichtner took her idea for a benefit show to CDC President Jean DiGiacomandrea and plans for this Saturday's benefit show were underway.

"The Best of Broadway" will feature some of the best loved songs from classic and contemporary Broadway musicals performed by a cast of local singers and dancers, many of whom have previously performed with the CDC. Highlights of the evening will include songs from "Rent", "State Fair" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel," the latter showcasing the rousing men's ensemble number "Into the Fire," featuring a 13-voice men's chorus. Anne Thornton of Hanover, a CDC member, will sing "The Sound of Music" from the show of the same name. Thornton played the role of Maria with CDC in 2002, and also performed in the Company Theater's production of "The Sound of Music" the following year in Norwell. Barbara Baumgarten, another Company Theater favorite, will perform the ballad, "Home" from "Beauty and the Beast," and also sing a duet with Lisa Pratt on a song from the musical "Wicked." Other performers will include David Clinton of Hull, singing the poignant "Soliloquy" from "Carousel," and Mike Nakashima and Chris Hetherington presenting the haunting duet "Lily's Eyes" from "The Secret Garden" who have been seen locally with Hull Performing Arts, the Unicorn Singers, Hingham Civic Music Theater and also on the Cohasset Dramatic Club stage. Elaine Bono and Stephen Lee, of The Walpole Footlighters, will also be on hand to perform the duet, "I'll Know" from "Guys and Dolls."

"No one is getting paid, not one person in the cast or on the crew," according to Fichtner. "All 30 people involved are donating their time and talent. It's been a wonderful experience with many of us making new friends and just having a great time working together for a good cause."

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present 'The Best of Broadway" Saturday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, Highland Avenue at Cohasset Common. Tickets are available at the door, or by calling 617-697-2115. Ticket price is $15. All proceeds from the one-night-only event will go directly to Hurricane Katrina relief efforts via the American Red Cross.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

AVOID BEING RECRUITED

Interestingly enough, some people with hearing loss have an increased sensitivity to loud sounds. While most of us associate hearing loss with an inability to hear soft sounds, for some individuals loud sounds are too loud. This phenomenon, known as "recruitment," stems from the physiology of the inner ear. With the type of hearing loss known as "sensorineural," or nerve hearing loss, hair cells of the inner ear that respond to soft and medium sounds have been damaged or destroyed. As for those remaining hair cells that respond to loud sounds, they are intact and functioning as they should. Thus, soft sounds largely go unheard while loud sounds seem even louder by comparison.

Talk, listen, laugh, smile, and live again with a custom-fitted hearing instrument from FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. We pledge to provide you with highly professional service as well as the hearing device that is best suited to your individual needs to help improve your quality of life. Do you suspect that you or someone you love has a hearing impairment? Come see a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist for a painless hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, the first step toward better hearing. You can reach us at 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Current hearing instruments can help cope with recruitment by amplifying soft sounds and lowering the volume on loud ones.

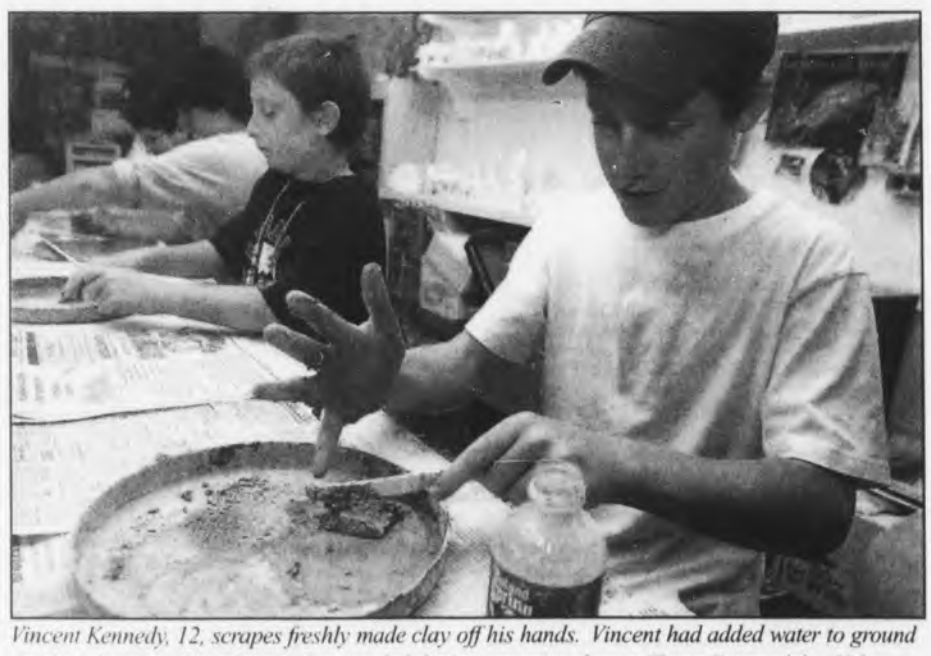
Happy Campers

Sixth grade students enjoy annual trip to Bournedale

Sixth grade student Marie Gilman, 11, works with classmate Jen Mullin, 11, to scale the "V" as they are cheered on by their classmates during the adventure class at Camp Bournedale. Adventure class exposes the students to a variety of team-building activities.

Brianna Scullion, 11, left, and Michaela Hastings, 12, decorate their rockets before launching them at Camp Bournedale, Thursday, Sept. 29. During their week-long stay, students participated in a variety of scientific activities, arts and crafts projects, and team sports.

Megan Green, 12, tries to snap a photograph of 11-year-old Brianna Scullion's rocket launch. The two made their rockets during a workshop at Camp Bournedale, where they spent the week with the entire sixth-grade class.



John Collins, 11, throws a ball as fast as he can while playing dodgeball during recreation time at Camp Bournedale Thursday, Sept. 29. The week-long overnight trip to Camp Bournedale in Plymouth has been an annual event in Cohasset for more than 10 years.

Aniko Haber, 12, holds tight to the rope swing which will help her cross the "pit of lava" also known as the "Pit of Frustration." The task was one of many sixth grade students took on during the adventure program at Camp Bournedale in Plymouth.

Hayley Wheelwright, 11, cannot help but drop her jaw after extracting the liver from a shark during a dissection workshop at Camp Bournedale.

Vincent Kennedy, 12, scrapes freshly made clay off his hands. Vincent had added water to ground up clay pieces to allow them to be recycled during ceramics class at Camp Bournedale. Kyle Healy, 11, left, is also working on his clay.

Jen Mullin, 11, is a fingertip away from grabbing the rope. Her classmates had taken their shoes off and thrown them at the rope to help make it swing to enable her to grab hold. The exercise was just one of many team-building activities for students during their stay at Camp Bournedale. Sydney Waters, 11, right, also stretches for the rope just in case her classmate misses it.

Events prompt beefed-up school security

Students leave backpacks at home

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although students are back in school, recent events have changed life at the middle-high school for the foreseeable future.

Backpacks, athletic bags and book bags are banned. When students walk in they are greeted by faculty that can check their pockets, and search pocketbooks, lunch bags, and baggy sweatshirts.

Students are carrying their books in their arms and gym clothes in plastic supermarket shopping bags.

This is all the result of an unprecedented series of events involving bomb threats and threats of violence at the grades 6-12 school — including two this past week.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams said the vast majority of parents are supportive of beefed up security at the school, where there will continue to be a police presence.

"We all need to be mindful of what a person might be thinking or feeling that would prompt them to do something like this."
— Joel Antolini, CHS principal

The community breathed a collective sigh of relief Tuesday afternoon with the arrest of a 13-year-old student who is charged in two of the four incidents.

However, as Selectman Ralph Dormitzer noted there could at least one more person out there responsible for the other threats – the one Sunday and one last May that included a threatening note with a bullet attached.

A community forum to address concerns about school security was slated for last night (Thursday) after the Mariner went to press. Check out our website today at www.cohassetmariner.com for the story and next week's issue for a more detailed report.

School has been in session less than two months and already, high school principal Joel Antolini – who is in his first year at the post – has delivered a series of telephone messages via the Connect-Ed technology, alerting students and their families about these threats that have twice delayed the opening of school or cancelled school for the day.

Sunday's note was discovered by a teacher and a group of students in the social awareness group that arrived at the school early for carpool for the second consecutive walk in Boston. Antolini said the note included the threat of "bring

Don't count ballpark out

Money offered for major repairs

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It may not have been a home-run, but it was at least a base hit.

Improvements to the Beechwood ballpark took a big step forward this week with the Community Preservation Committee's vote to support the project to the tune of $160,000 plus.

The committee also said if more funds become available, it would provide an additional $70,000 if the Beechwood Ballpark Committee could raise an equal amount from other sources.

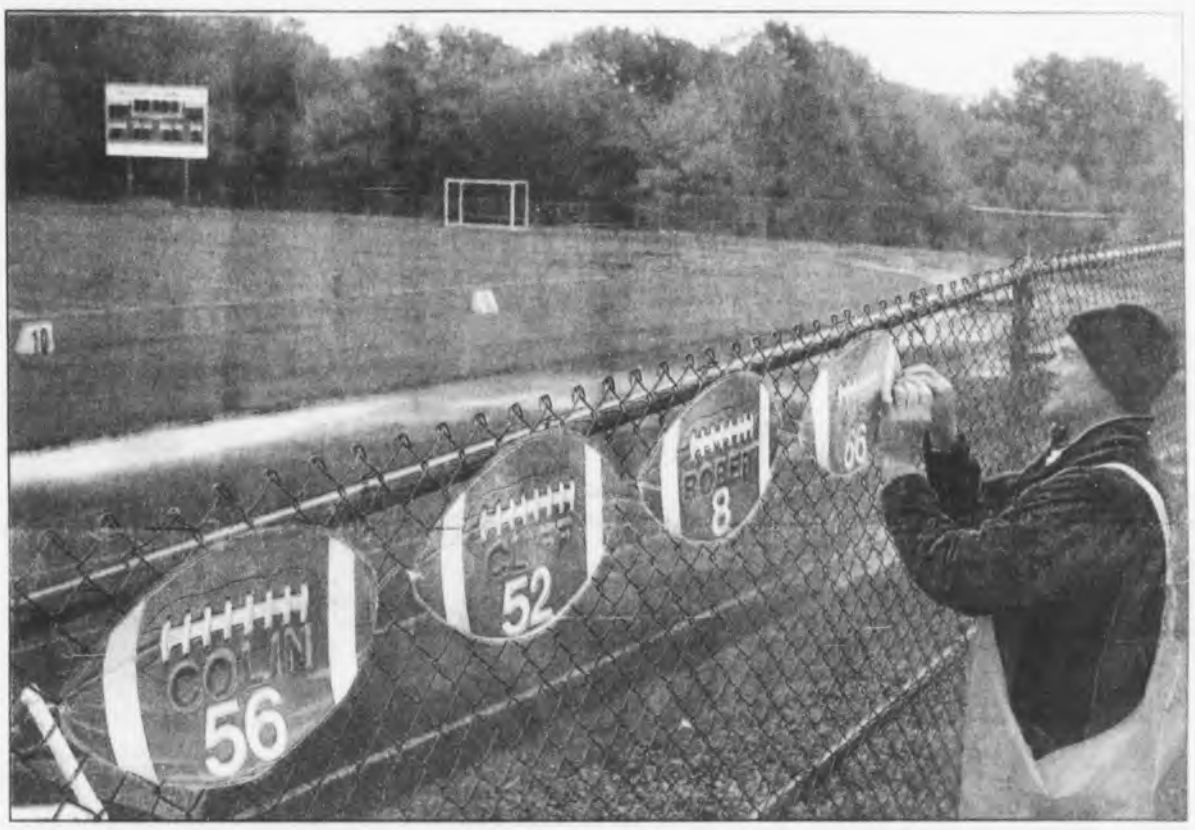
The money is in addition to a $30,000 community preservation grant awarded in 2004 for detailed engineering plans to rebuild the field.

Town Meeting voters will have the final say whether to provide funds for the project.

CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey explained that money from the community preservation fund can support rehabilitation of the field because it is in such bad shape.

In fact, without repairs, the field is in danger of becoming unusable, he said.

According to Glenn Pratt of the Beechwood Ballpark Committee, the project involves completely rebuilding the field area including reorienting the field so the Little League team playing isn't facing the sun, which is now the case.



By reorienting the field, and locating home plate where right field now is, will also increase the distance down the left and right field foul lines, Pratt said. Stands and dugouts are also planned, as well as 20-foot fencing around the infield and 10-foot fencing in the outfield.

"Our plan rebuilds and relocates the basketball court and the Tot Play Area on the Beechwood side," Pratt explained. "A permanent batting cage would be incorporated adjacent to the basketball court, which will be built so it can be flooded in the winter for ice skating."

The committee also hopes to

A 'happy kid' who loved sports

Allen Keating is fondly remembered

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Allen Keating wouldn't have wanted to be remembered as a soldier. Although he bravely served his country and was commended for his role in the Vietnam War, during which he gave his life, his family believes he would rather be remembered as the happy, healthy kid that loved football and baseball, fishing and fighting, and falling in love.

Born on Aug. 1, 1948 to parents T. Gerard and Margret, Allen was one of seven Keating kids, including his older sister Joan and older brother Larry, and his younger brothers Tom, Brian, Chris, and Steve. His father was the Post Master in Cohasset for many years, and had been appointed to the position by President Truman in 1949. T. Gerard had grown up in Cohasset on James Lane, and later raised his family at 514 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Allen attended Cohasset schools and was a member of the Cohasset High School class of 1966. He graduated alongside two other Vietnam Veterans who sacrificed their lives for freedom, Peter Cogill and Craig Simeone.

Allen was very involved in a variety of community and school activities. He excelled in athletics and was captain of his high school baseball team. He was also quarterback of his high school football team, and an all-scholastic.

Allen's brother Tom recalls the Thanksgiving Day football game in 1965 when the Skippers went up against the overpowering Hull Pirates, who hadn't lost a game in two years. However, the Skippers were able to steal away the title under his brother's leadership, and as Tom recalls, "The turkeys tasted a little better in Cohasset than they did in Hull that day."

After high school, Allen went to Arizona State University, but was soon drafted into the Army. He began basic training, and went on to advanced training, before coming home for

Murray is named veterans' agent

TM Griffin makes the appointment

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Veterans will find no better friend than Mary Jeanette Murray.

The former long-time state representative championed veterans causes throughout her years on Beacon Hill.

Now she'll be working with local veterans to address their needs as she takes over the reins as Cohasset veterans' agent.

Town Manager Bill Griffin announced Murray's appointment this week. Other applicants included former police chief Robert W. Jackson, a U.S. Navy veteran, of Ash Street; and Army veteran, Gerald T. Healy of North Scituate.

The annual stipend for the position is $1,600.

Murray, who lives on Margin Street, said she will be available by telephone at 781-383-1000 anytime and hasn't ruled out holding some office hours at Town Hall.

"I plan to do well and help veterans get what they need or I'll storm the Commissioner of Veterans Services office," said Murray, who received an award from the Veteran's Agents Association while she was a legislator.

Former state representative Mary Jeanette Murray is the town's new veterans' agent.

In her letter to Griffin, she stated she still maintains contact with state officials including Secretary of Veterans Services Thomas Kelly and continues to assists veterans on the South Shore when needed.

Murray, who enlisted in the Marine Corps during World War II, is a member of several veterans organizations including the American Legion and its women's auxiliary. She is also state chairman for WIMSA (Women in Military Service Memorial) erected in Washington, D.C.

Schools realize it's a high-tech world

Look for volunteers to upgrade computer system

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We have so many resources in this town and some really smart people."
— Steve Fusco, planning and technology subcommittee

Cohasset schools are about to take the next step into the age of technology. To that end, the school department is looking for volunteers who can help provide assistance forging the road ahead.

The new committee comes at the recommendation of a strategic planning sub-committee, charged with looking at the future of technology in the schools. The school department is in the process of implementing a strategic plan that will set goals for the next five years.

Steve Fusco and Paul Carlson of the planning and technology sub-committee came forward with its report for the school committee Oct. 13. The two explained the committee's recommendations, which include drafting a three year technology plan, looking into revenue generating opportunities, and increasing support personnel.

Fusco explained the first step in making the next technological stride is forming a technological advisory committee. He said the recommendation of his committee is to include representatives from all three schools as well as parents. "We have so many resources in this town and some really smart people," he said, which can help bring technology to the forefront in the classroom. With a committee in place, the three-year plan can be drafted, implemented, and updated on a regular basis.

Fusco said it would also be wise for the school department to consider automating processes wherever possible, which will cut back on the work done by personnel. He said by changing the server and networking the computers, it would greatly improve the efficiency of the technology department. For example, he said if a virus gets into the computers, having a network would allow pathways to be closed, therefore stopping the virus. Software updates can be completed at a central location, rather than at every single computer in the school. "Any place you can automate, you're going to save money," he said.

Fusco said the school should also look into receiving donations of equipment. "Lots of companies will donate equipment or software," when they upgrade, he said. He added the schools need to compile an inventory of the equipment they have to ensure everything is accounted for, then compile a list of what they need.

Revenue generators are also something to look at in terms of technology, and Fusco said many companies rent their roof rights to cellular companies. He said many school systems and other organizations with significant roof space located in high elevations have been able to rent that space to companies who provide wireless service. In addition, schools can rent their roof space for solar energy.

Another way to help curb costs is to ask students, whether they be in high school or college looking for credits, to help with the technology department. Students could help the district update its Web site on a regular basis, or provide similar assistance, Fusco said.

Fuscso said once the technology program really gets underway at the schools, they can also rent their technical facilities or computer labs for residents to use.

Carlson said much of the research he has conducted indicates the school department should increase the number of computers it has. He said in comparing Cohasset with the towns of Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Scituate, and Norwell, the ratio of computers to students in Cohasset is very low.

Carlson said he also noted many of the other schools use MacIntosh computers, "and we have none." Viruses have a much more difficult time entering MacIntosh computers, he said.

Another recommendation was finding ways to integrate computers into the everyday curriculum, especially for special education students. Carlson said there is some wonderful educational software and "A lot can be done in a lot of different subjects."

Carlson said in benchmarking Cohasset against other towns, there is one problem that resonates throughout all the communities — none feel they have enough staff.

To help bring the technology department up to speed, Carlson said other communities have asked for monetary donations, and he said the town of Weston raised $3 million in three years which all went to purchasing new equipment. He said Cohasset might want to try a similar plan.

To help jump-start the Cohasset public schools' technology department and become a member of the technology advisory committee, please contact either the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111 or Steve Fusco at s.fusco@comcast.net. A complete copy of the report compiled by the planning and technology committee can be found in the superintendent's office.

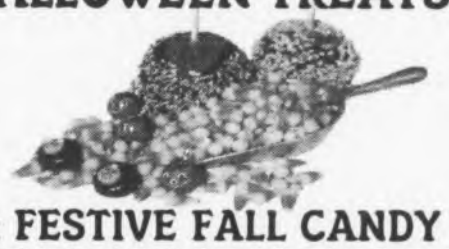
Fire department handles many emergencies

The Fire Department ambulance transported 53 patients to hospitals.

A summary of Fire Department responses during the month of September is as follows:

Building fires two, motor vehicle crashes nine, medical emergencies 69; investigations seven, inspections 41, assistance calls 17, and miscellaneous responses 42. There were no brush or motor vehicle fires during September. Forty-six emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.



The Fire Department ambulance transported 53 patients to hospitals. Mutual aid ambulances transported nine patients. Three motor vehicle crashes resulted in the transport of patients. Fifty-nine patients were transported to South Shore Hospital and three transports were to Quincy Medical Center.

Fire alarm system activation responses totaled 22 during September. Accidental activation of the alarm systems accounted for 10 responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of twelve responses. Two responses were classed as building fires. The two building fire calls being caused by food burning on the stove.

A rain and wind storm on Sept. 29, kept the Fire Department occupied from 1 to 10 p.m. with tree/wire related electrical problems, Lincoln said.

Money offered for major Beechwood ballpark repairs construct restrooms and storage rooms near the infield. There are currently no toilet facilities at the field.

Drainage and grading of the field will also be improved.

"The field will be leveled and a retaining wall will be constructed in right field," Pratt said. "During the off-baseball season, the field will be able to be relined for soccer."

Street drainage from the field to the brook on Beechwood Street will also be upgraded.

Merle Brown of the ballpark committee said the field was built in 1932. For years it was maintained by the Beechwood Improvement Association, which is no longer in existence.

"The town has spent very little money over the years on the park," Brown said. "We feel it would be a great improvement to the area."

"We feel it would be a great improvement to the area."

— Merle Brown, ballpark committee

Ivimey, the CPC chairman, said he drives by the field every day on his way to work and has seen firsthand the amount of use it gets and the deteriorating condition. He said saving the field from continued decay and eventual disuse is a legitimate use of CPC funds.

There was some discussion about spreading the funding out over two years, but Pratt said that would put the field out of commission for too long.

The CPC opted to take the money from its general fund rather than bonding the project. The committee also thought it was important the ballpark committee raise some money privately to involve the community in the project.

Bonding the project was out of the question, the CPC said.

"Forget it, we're not going to add more debt," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who is the selectmen's liaison to the CPC.

Pratt noted the town voted to adopt the Community Preservation Act to set aside money for quality of life issues. "You are parceling out the money responsibly," he said.

Ivimey described the CPC fund as a "rainy day fund." "It's raining and we can still do something for the town," he said.

Money from the Community Preservation Fund can be spent in three specific areas: open space; affordable housing; and historic preservation. Each year, the Community Preservation Committee must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of those areas. All CPF expenditures in Cohasset must be approved by a vote at Town Meeting.

Money for the fund comes from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge and state matching funds. The town adopted the Community Preservation Act in 2001.

CPC fund receives dollar-for-dollar match

On Oct. 15 the town was notified its Community Preservation Fund would receive $278,306 from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue. This is the fourth consecutive year that the Commonwealth matched dollar-for-dollar all money raised by Cohasset through the Community Preservation Act.

The money received from the Commonwealth was deposited into Cohasset's Community Preservation Fund and combined with the revenues raised locally by assessing a 1.5 percent surcharge against real property values. The fund is spent on projects endorsed by the Community Preservation Committee and then approved by Town Meeting.

The Community Preservation Committee recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey explains.

The money provided by the Department of Revenue is raised by a surcharge assessed at all Recorder of Deeds offices each time someone records a deed or mortgage on the land records.

Anyone interested in applying for Community Preservation funding is encouraged to contact Stuart Ivimey at (781) 383-2604.

Mary Jeanette Murray is named new veterans' agent

Griffin said in his view Murray's comprehensive knowledge of veterans' issues, both at the state and local level, gives her the edge.

"She will especially have the ability to work with the state Department of Veterans' Services to address any problems being faced by local veterans," Griffin stated in a memo to selectmen.

Murray, 80, who grew up in Cohasset, enlisted in the US Marines in 1945 and served for 18 months. Her father, Nathaniel Hurwitz of Cohasset, who also served as state representative, was state commissioner of veterans services, fought in World War I, and was active in the American Legion where he served as commander four times.

She served as state representative for the Third Plymouth District that includes Cohasset for 24 years.

Murray, who was named Cohasset Citizen of the Year in 2001, takes the place of former long-time veterans' agent Noel Ripley who passed away July 31.

Every city and town in Massachusetts has a veterans' agent, who is there to find veterans, advise them of their rights and benefits, and then to assist veterans as they apply for and receive state and federal benefits.

Selectmen gave her appointment high marks at their meeting Tuesday.

Selectman Rob Spofford described her as a "great public servant" and said he was glad to see she is staying involved.

Facilities manager dishes out the dirt on school cleanliness

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset public schools are not as clean as they should be.

While giving an update on the schools' cleaning and custodial situation at the Oct. 13 school committee meeting, Facilities Manager Brian Adams said, "Simply put, the situation is not good."

Currently, the schools are at a "level four service," in terms of cleanliness standards. Adams explained there are five levels of service, and level one is "hospital standard," which means sterile and spotless. "We're at a four which is not typically acceptable for schools," he said.

Adams said Cohasset is not on track due to a lack of staffing. While the schools contract with the One Source cleaning company, which is only working at night and provides 6-1/2 employees, who are spread throughout all three buildings. The school department dictates the contract with the cleaning company based on what it can pay. The schools also have their own custodians which work during the day, and right now there is one at each school.

"I don't think people realize we have one person at each building," said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh.

It is imperative that cleaning habits get back on track and Adams said first, a standard for cleaning has to be set, and second, more personnel will need to be added. He said while he understands the school department might want to set its standard at a level three — the commonly accepted cleanliness level for schools — he said getting there will be too much of a financial burden to take on in one year.

"To get to a level three, you're going to need to add 12 people," he said, explaining the school district consist of 360,000 square feet, and to achieve a level three, there must be one full time employee per 30,000 square feet.

Therefore, Adams has suggested taking baby steps to try to achieve a level 3.8. To accomplish that, he would recommend the One Source company stays the same, but the school department add two custodians to its payroll. He would recommend of those two new custodians, one work in the middle-high school and the other serve as a "floater" working during the time after the other custodians have gone for the day, but before One Source arrives.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams asked what the financial impact will be for the school department if it adds two custodians. Adams said roughly $90,000 per year.

Walsh added the cost would be roughly the same to add One Source employees through that company. But she reminded the school committee the school department manages its custodians, but not the One Source employees, and therefore custodians could be the better option.

The school committee said it will continue to look into its options, which include keeping a split-staff of One Source and school employee custodians, or going to fully One Source or fully custodians. There are cost factors to consider with both, and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he would compile some figures. Whatever is done, the change will not happen until fiscal 2007.

Adams gave the cleaning update, due in part to a report given by the board of health on the status of the schools at the beginning of the school year. Tara Tradd of the board of health office, who conducts inspections prior to the start of school every year, said she began visiting the buildings Aug. 29, and in her travels, she found dead bugs, dust, and mold in various areas of the buildings.

Tradd goes through every single room in every school checking to ensure everything is OK for the first day of school. She said she often speaks with teachers, who are setting up their rooms for the year, to ensure there aren't any problems. She said it is a routine event, during which time she inspects for potential health hazards, including signs of water damage which could lead to mold. Because she inspects every room at every school, the inspections take place over the course of many days.

This year, Tradd said she did find some water marks in ceiling tiles which would indicate water damage, and she said there were many dead bugs in corners along with dust. She said there was a rug that was moist and harboring mold.

The five tiers of cleanliness

Level 1: cleaning results in a "spotless" building, as might normally be found in a hospital environment or corporate suite. At this level, a custodian with proper supplies and tools can clean approximately 10,000 to 11,000 square feet in an 8-hour period.

Level 2: cleaning is the uppermost standard for most school cleaning, and is generally reserved for restrooms, special education areas, kindergarten areas, or food service areas. A custodian can clean approximately 18,000 to 20,000 square feet in an 8-hour shift.

Level 3: cleaning is the norm for most school facilities. It is acceptable to most stake holders and does not post any health issues. A custodian can clean approximately 28,000 to 31,000 square feet in an 8-hour period.

Level 4: cleaning is not normally acceptable in a school environment. Classrooms would be cleaned every other day, carpets would be vacuumed every third day, and dusting would occur once a month. At this level, a custodian can clean 45,000 to 50,000 square feet in 8 hours.

Level 5: cleaning can very rapidly lead to an unhealthy situation. Trash cans might be emptied and carpets vacuumed on a weekly basis. One custodian can clean 85,000 to 90,000 square feet in an 8-hour period.

* The figures above are estimates. The actual number of square feet per shift a custodian can clean will depend on additional variables, including the type of flooring, wall covers, and number of windows, all of which must be taken into account when determining workload expectations.

Building committee looks into security

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy attended a meeting of the school building committee and said it is making progress toward gathering information on a potential new security system for the middle-high school.

"There were a lot of questions thrown around about our needs, what we have, what we'd like," she said, adding any security company the town might work with will need to have a firm idea of what the town is looking for.

MacCarthy said building committee chairman Scott Collins has already met with one vendor, and will soon meet with another to discuss the school's options.

MacCarthy said there was a lot of good input from those who attended, including police officers and school administrators. "We'll keep you posted," she said.

Monetary award for school dept.

The school department is happy to report it will receive a state Foundation Reserve Award, dubbed "pothole program," in the amount of $205,000. According to business manager David DeGennaro, the money will be awarded to the school department as a result of significant reductions in state aid which is one of the priority categories established by the legislature.

Cohasset, which applied for the grant, is only one of four communities to receive money in this category this year, others include Erving ($35,000), Farmington River ($44,000), and Lincoln-Sudbury ($226,000).

The school committee was quick to point out last week, the money is to be used specifically for school purposes, and chairman Jamie Williams said she hopes it can be used "for our classrooms, and not for fixed costs."

The foundation reserve ("pothole") program was originally established by the Legislature in fiscal year 1996 to provide relief for extraordinary and unanticipated needs. The category through which Cohasset will receive its award was started in fiscal year 2004 to help make up for drastic cuts in state aid to certain qualifying districts.

Public comment period policy

Selectmen assured viewers Monday night that adopting a "public comment period" policy for their meetings is not intended to stop walk-ins or deter citizens from presenting their concerns.

Historically the board has allowed and encouraged public comment But selectmen have concerns their regular agenda is, at times, being usurped by unscheduled items raised by walk-ins.

The new policy essentially states that except in emergencies, the board will not take immediate action on issues raised during public comment.

They said if it's an issue that requires more than a few minutes, it will be placed on a future agenda. That way, the board said, it could also do its homework and be better equipped to address concerns or issues.

Selectman Rob Spofford got assurance from his fellow board members that "this is not intended to limit public access to us.

"We are accountable to the public and we should not become aloof by not welcoming public comment or any citizen access to the board," he said.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said establishing a policy for public comment will help the board conduct more efficient meetings. He said brief comments on a walk-in basis would continue to be welcome.

One-way plan concerns

James Grinnell, 130 Wheelwright Farm, wrote to Town Manager Bill Griffin stating his opposition to the proposal for one-way traffic along Jerusalem Road on summer Sundays.

"It's extremely dangerous and life threatening," he stated. "Kindly for the sake of all of us forget this entire matter!

"I have been a resident of Cohasset for 48 years and know of where I speak."

Mary McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Road, stated in a letter to Griffin, she would like to see the whole picture before deciding pro or con.

Her questions include emergency vehicle access due to the one-way configuration; signage and who pays for it: proposed penalties if someone forgets or turns left; and hours and number of Sundays. "When you have a discussion on this proposal, I would like to be notified," she said.

Last month, Clark Brewer of the growth and development committee presented the proposal to create a one-way traffic pattern from the intersection of Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road, down Jerusalem Road until it turns into Atlantic Avenue, then up Beach Street to the Common from noon until dusk on summer Sundays. Vehicles would be limited to one side of the road, opening the other side up to pedestrian and bike traffic. Emergency vehicles would be allowed access to the roads at all times, he said.

Selectmen have taken the matter under advisement and have encouraged feedback.

Nina's dad flew home for daughter's debut

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PILLSBURY

Nina Sofia Geddes arrived Oct. 12.

THANK HEAVENS...

Thank Heavens for Little Girls. Sasha and Marc Geddes, along with sons Michael, Dereck and Gregory welcomed a beautiful baby girl into their family on Oct. 12, 2005 at 6:04 p.m. Nina Sofia Geddes weighed in at 7 lbs., 14 ounces and was 20 1/2 inches long.

Maternal grandmother Dorothy Manton of Cohasset, is thrilled as are all of their family and friends.

Marc was in Louisiana working on relief efforts after hurricane Katrina and was gone for over a month. He had to take a flight out as soon as airports opened after Hurricane Rita to make it home in time to welcome Little Miss Nina. Congratulations to you all on this new addition to the family.

BASIC TRAINING

Air Force Reserve Airman 1st Class Gregory A. Figueiredo has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. During the six weeks of training, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization, and military customs and courtesies; performed drill and ceremony marches, and received physical training, rifle marksmanship, field training exercises, and special training in human relations. In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Airman 1st Class Gregory A. Figueiredo

Gregory is the son of Janice Figueiredo of Scituate and grandson of Margret Figueiredo of Cohasset. He is a 2001 graduate of Cohasset High School. Great job Gregory. You should be very proud as I know your family is.

On your next shopping trip, please consider making donations of animal food to the shelter in the red box located at the front of Stop and Shop

TALENTED GROUP

Last weekend, the Cohasset Dramatic Club put on a Broadway Show as a fundraiser for the hurricane victims. I have to say that being involved with such an talented, dedicated and selfless group of performers who gave time, heart and soul to one evening was so inspiring. Thank you to all who came and supported this show and to all of the people who donated behind the scenes. The efforts of all involved helped to raise $3500 with a matching 100 percent gift bringing the total to $7000. Great job everyone!

GARDEN ORNAMENTS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday morning, Oct. 25 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church. Following the 9:30 a.m. business meeting, guest lecturer Betty Brown will present "The Pleasures of Garden Ornament". Her program is a visual feast of garden embellishment, from the simplest garden gate to the most imposing statuary. Club members are sure to come away with a deepened appreciation of the combination of garden art and horticulture. The morning will begin with coffee at 9 a.m.

Tucker DeSisto, Gerritt Church, Cameron Steele, Ford Murphy, Jake Johnson and Brad Dimodica are pictured with Scituate Animal Shelter director Kathy Pendoley.

Spooky and fun movie is just in time for Halloween

Was entirely filmed in town

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

As an amateur filmmaker, John Lengyel admits no illusions as to the marketability of his newly self-produced micro-budget ghost-story movie, titled "Doppelganger".

Working over the summer with a group of local actors "purely for the fun of it," Lengyel simply thought it would be funny to make Cohasset feel like the Hollywood of the East for a week, "with pretend movie-premiere hype and all."

"Doppelganger," just short of an hour long and shot entirely in Cohasset, might not be a major moviemaking production, but it could be the closest homegrown venture to making its town of location feel like the Hollywood of the East since "The Witches of Eastwick" brought Jack Nicholson as well as Cher, Michelle Pfieffer and Susan Sarandon to Cohasset in 1986.

Like "The Witches of Eastwick," Lengyel's movie is, in his own words, spooky, fun and entertaining. Lengyel, who is a software engineer by trade, also describes "Doppelganger" as "about as homegrown as a movie can get, so it will be interesting to see the local reaction to it."

The producer/director will get his chance to do just that when "Doppelganger" will be shown on Comcast Public Access (Channel 10) on Halloween night at 7:30 p.m. (7 central). Before that, "Doppelganger" will have its premiere at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset on Thursday, Oct. 27 at 7pm. It will also be aired at 8 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday nights through November.

'"Doppelganger" is about as homegrown as a movie can get, so it will be interesting to see the local reaction to it.'
— John Lengyel, producer

Lengyel's movie, which he said he can't rightly call a "film" because it was shot with a standard-definition video camera he borrowed from Comcast Public Access in Hanover, is titled after the German word for "double ghost" or "walking ghost." It tells the story of two children, a brother and sister, ages 13 and 8, who wash up onto the shore in Cohasset after a boating accident which kills their parents. They are then taken in by Cohasset foster parents and while living with them, and with their grief, are haunted in strange, eerie ways by their doppelgangers (enlivened images of who they were in happier days before the tragic accident).

"Altogether, the movie is just meant to be funny, entertaining and spooky," said Lengyel. "Deep down, there's a theme about how to deal with grief. Throughout most of the movie, the brother seems to be consumed by his grief, while his sister refuses to be consumed by hers. That ongoing theme runs through the plot of the movie and manifests itself in various ways."

Lengyel's cast included both local adult and child actors. The children are all from Cohasset and included Robin and Meredith Spofford (daughters of Selectman Rob Spofford) and Sam Game, who has been in many Cohasset Dramatic Club productions. The three main adult characters were played by Reed Dickinson, of Cohasset, an actor and musician who also wrote the musical score, an actress from Whitman named Jennifer Duval White, and another from Scituate named Molly Ball.

Lengyel, 40, grew up in Lynnfield and first learned about shooting movies with his parents' super-eight home movie camera. After high school, he considered both film and engineering colleges, but finally decided to play it safe and go to an engineering school. While earning a mechanical engineering degree, Lengyel recalls, he became friends with a student in the graduate film department and helped edit her 16mm film during the summer after graduation. She returned the favor with generous sharing of filmmaking knowledge and helping him find his first job in Los Angeles.

In L.A., Lengyel later got a job with a small effects company which did physical effects (rain, smoke, lightning, gadgets) and worked on many commercials, music videos, and even a couple of feature films. A year and a half later, he moved to Seattle to try his hand at feature-length screenwriting. When that venture didn't quite live up to its promise, he once again relocated this time to the Bay Area and fell back on his engineering background to get a job in software support.

Moving back to Massachusetts and settling in Cohasset, Lengyel said he's been working in software since, but still harbors dreams of a screenwriting career, "despite the tauntings of my wife Brigid." In November he'll be producing a "Doppelganger" DVD that includes commentary tracks and outtakes.

All of this production Lengyel conducts in an outbuilding on his property in Cohasset, where he also handles his software engineering work for his current employer IBM, and which his wife calls "The Hut." The adjacent house is a red colonial carriage house which also serves as the family home in the movie.

"In a way, 'Doppelganger' is the student film I never had the chance to make," Lengyel said.

The cast of "Doppelganger" includes from row from left, twins Meredith and Robin Spofford, both 10, who play Maria and Maria's doppelganger (walking double) in the film. Back row, Jennifer Duval White, who plays Jean, the foster mother; Molly Ball, who plays Samantha, the child psychologist; Same Game, 13, who plays Samuel, Maria's older brother; John, and Reed Dickinson, who plays the foster father.

Filmmaker John Lengyel films a stunt where Meredith Spofford falls on an air mattress that makes her look as if a supernatural force was pulling her toward the water, as Sam Game and Robin Spofford look on.

Robin Spofford and Sam Game rescue Meredith Spofford from a watery grave in this Sandy Beach scene.

From football fields to the battlefield regrets. He remembers how Allen told their father on that cold January morning that if his service in Vietnam meant his younger brothers would not have to do a similar tour, it was worth it to him.

Allen spent nine months in combat before taking a week's leave in Hawaii. That week became a very special time, as it was there that he wed his high school sweetheart, Anne Noonan. Following an all-to-brief honeymoon, the SPC 4th class returned to his military unit, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 4th Infantry Division.

Thirty-six years ago this week, on Oct. 19, 1969, Allen was killed in an explosion when the armored personnel vehicle he was in hit a mine. He was only 21 years old.

Allen showed exemplary bravery during the war and Tom recalls reading a letter sent by his brother's squad leader, Roy Vance of Pasedena, Texas, which had been sent home to the family. It read, "It was about 3 p.m. on March 4. The Vietnamese Platoon had hit us again. I was hit with a B54 rocket and I was wounded. As I lay there, I was pinned down, and Allen saved my life. He had an M16 machine gun, and when he saw that I was hit, he grabbed about 500 rounds of ammunition, jumped up and just started shooting. He was standing with me between his legs, shooting, and he wouldn't stop."

Tom said it was very ironic that in a letter from his brother received shortly after that, he made no mention of that battle, or even the war he was involved in. Tom said if it wasn't for the muddy fingerprints on Allen's letter, it might have easily come from some homesick student living in a dormitory, rather than from a man fighting a war in a distant jungle.

Vietnam took a heavy toll on the town of Cohasset, as eight men were killed, including Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Peter Cogill, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone, and Dennis J. Reardon. Cohasset lost the same number of soldiers during World War II. The worst eight months of Vietnam were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals. Keating was the third of three young men from the Cohasset High School Class of 1966 to sacrifice his life.

For his service, Keating was cited for conspicuous valor and awarded the third highest decoration this country can bestow — the Silver Star, which is awarded for gallantry in action against an enemy of the United States — as well as two Purple Hearts, and other numerous awards.

To ensure his memory is never forgotten, a memorial square has been dedicated in Keating's honor, which residents drive by every day. Keating's memorial square can be found at the intersection of Black Horse Lane and Summer Street.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on Allen Keating or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Squares named after fallen servicemen

Allen Keating is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset for their service to the country. The town lost seven other men during the Vietnam War who have all been memorialized with squares or other memorials in town including:

- Peter J. Albiani, Jr.: Intersection of Jerusalem and Gammons Roads
- Peter Cogill: Intersection of Church and Doane Streets
- William C. Laidlaw: Intersection of Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road
- John Paul Lyon: Intersection of North Main Street and Joy Place
- R. Edward Maree: The boat landing at the end of Parker Avenue
- Dennis J. Reardon: Corner of Elm Street and Stephen's Lane near the police station entrance
- Craig M. Simeone: intersection of Lantern Lane and Pond Street

The mothers of the eight servicemen who gave their lives during Vietnam are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery.

Annual used book drive at St. Stephen's

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., is currently accepting donations of slightly worn hardcover and paperback books, DVD's, CD's and videos for its annual book sale, part of the ecumenical Village Fair that will be held on Saturday, Dec. 3.

If your book shelves are spilling onto the floor, and DVD's, CD's and videos are bursting out of the entertainment center, St. Stephen's has the solution for you. Donations can be brought to the church in bags or boxes and placed inside the parish hall door marked "church offices." Use the "Reserved Parking" spot to unload your books during church office hours: Monday - Friday, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Alternatively, St., Stephen's would be happy to arrange pick up of your donations. For donation pick-up or more information, call Alix White at 781-383-1829. Books are sorted at St., Stephen's Church in Walton Rodgers Hall every Tuesday from 9 a.m. to noon. Donations will be accepted through Monday, Nov. 21. Old textbooks, romance novels, water damaged or moldy books, books with notes or highlighting, cannot be accepted.

All proceeds go to the Scholarship Program of Bishop Barbara C. Harris Camp.

The book sale is a mission program of St. Stephen's Church. All proceeds go to the Scholarship Program of Bishop Barbara C. Harris Camp. Through your donation of books, DVD's, CD's and videos that are being accepted now, you will help change lives and strengthen community.

OPINION

Real world

As much as we'd like to believe otherwise, Cohasset is not Mayberry.

Recent threats of violence at the middle-high school have been like a slap in the face for those of us who either had thought or had hoped that our town was immune to this.

Sadly, Cohasset has now joined the rest of the world – a post 9/11 and post Columbine place – where all threats have to be handled seriously.

Children, thankfully, can be amazingly resilient and can learn to take things, such as rules about no back-packs and the possibility of searches, in stride – as sad as that may be.

School violence is nothing new but it was at least thought to have been limited to troubled, inner-city schools.

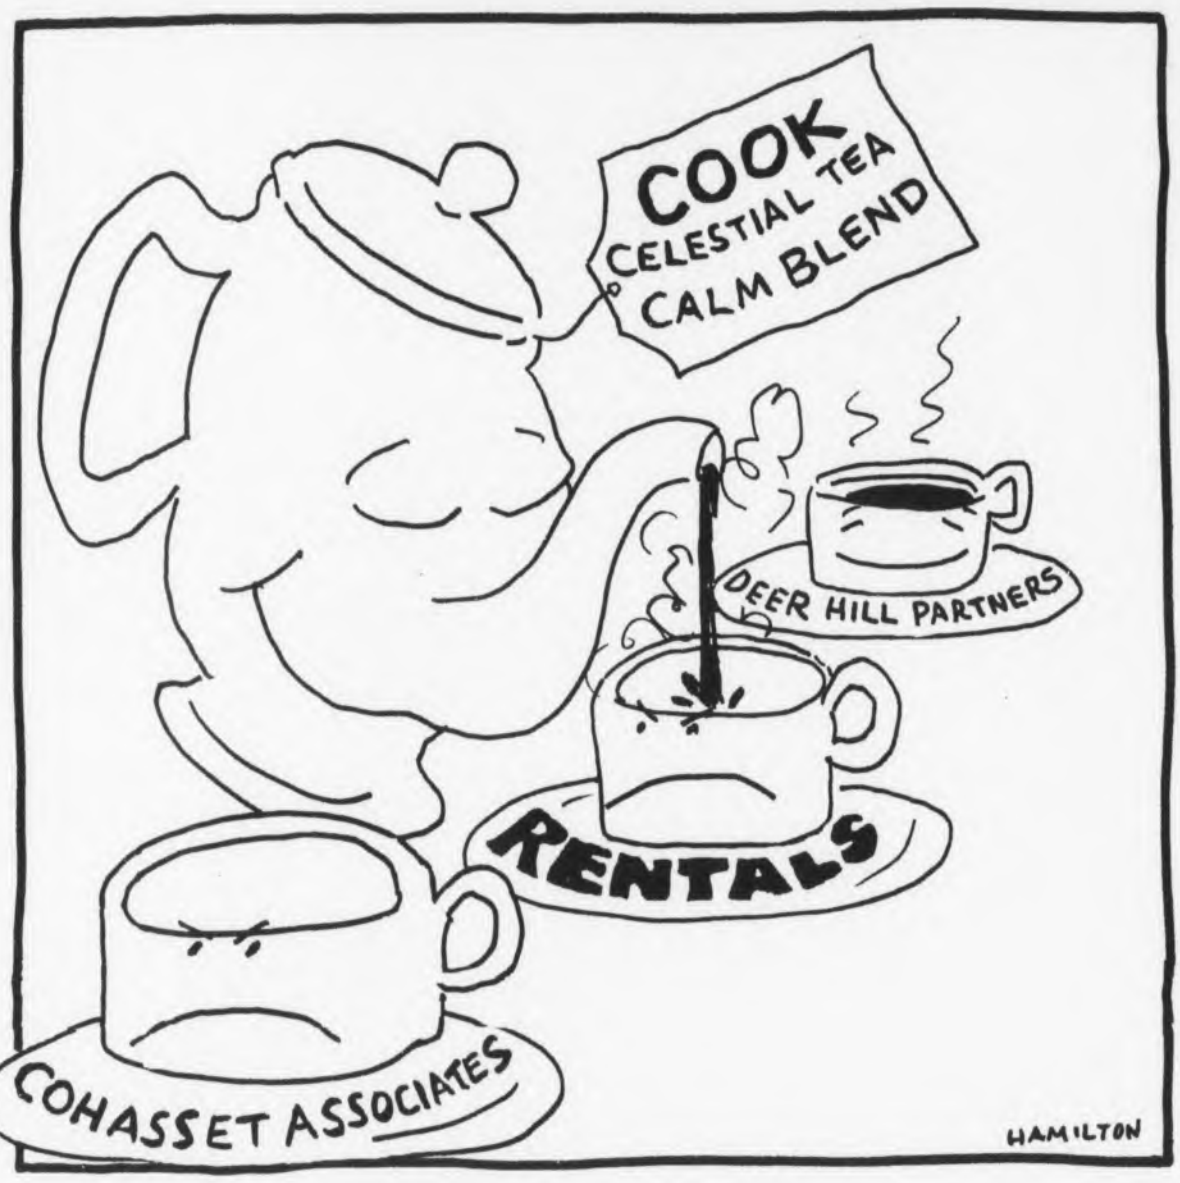
On a personal note, the editor – a former teacher – opted for journalism after a teaching stint in Los Angeles where armed security guards roamed the halls of the junior high school. And that was back in the early 1970s. Stabbings were a common occurrence and teachers also had to endure violent threats from angry parents.

She had part of her college student loan forgiven as "combat pay", for want of a better term, for teaching in what could be described as a culturally deprived environment.

She soon discovered it was easier to face government officials than a room full of adolescents who might be having a bad day.

That was decades ago and thousands of miles away, but that school violence happened and probably still does.

As School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams said this week – the spate of threats at the middle-high school have been a wake-up call to the community.



This past week "the lights went on" in the minds of many Cohasset residents. As idyllic as this town can be there's a frightening, disruptive, ugliness out there that can affect even a small town like this.

Mrs. Williams is correct when she describes the problem as a community-wide one.

Last night a town-wide forum was held at the high school. Because of our press schedule coverage of that forum will appear in next week's issue and will be posted on-line today at www.cohassetmariner.com.

We applaud the police, school and town officials, members of the clergy, parents and interested citizens who took the time to attend the community forum.

Awareness is always the first step; better communication is second; followed by real strategies to keep our schools from being held hostage to the times.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Schools flush with cash

TO THE EDITOR:

For months the Cohasset Taxpayers have been inundated with the dire straits of the fiscal 05 School Budget. Then the schools were so desperate for a $400,000 override for the current fiscal 06 year. Even without this money they are able to:

- For the first time ever make an advance payment of $190,000 for Sped tuition
- Rent buses for $250/day while leaving Cohasset's better buses sitting idle in the yard
- Keep lights on 24/7 because it isn't considered a major budget drain

And to keep up the façade of being underfunded, they are sending the children out begging from their neighbors for funds for everyday school supplies.

When will Cohasset engage professionals who understand the priority of putting tax dollars in the classroom?

HEALTH NOTES

Halloween safety tips for families

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Here in Cohasset, we are not unique in attempting to protect our children. However it's sometimes difficult to realize that the very act of protection differs vastly from that offered to us when we were kids. Take for example the safety tips from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission to protect children who plan to go trick-or-treating this Halloween. What parent needed a list like the one below when we went trick or treating?:

- Treats: Warn children not to eat any treats before an adult has carefully examined them for evidence of tampering. And hopefully when given out, treat selection can include low calorie items such as raisins or pretzels.
- Flame Resistant Costumes: When purchasing a costume, masks, beards, and wigs, look for the label Flame Resistant. Although this label does not mean these items won't catch fire, it does indicate the items will resist burning and should extinguish quickly once removed from the ignition source. To minimize the risk of contact with candles or other sources of ignition, avoid costumes made with flimsy materials and outfits with big, baggy sleeves or billowing skirts.
- Costume Designs: Purchase or make costumes that are light and bright enough to be clearly visible to motorists. For greater visibility during dusk and darkness, decorate or trim costumes with reflective tape that will glow in the beam of a car's headlights. Bags or sacks should also be light colored or decorated with reflective tape. Reflective tape is usually available in hardware, bicycle, and sporting goods stores. To easily see and be seen, children should also carry flashlights. Costumes should be short enough to prevent children from tripping and falling. Children should wear well-fitting, sturdy shoes . Mother' s high heels are not a good idea for safe walking. Hats and scarves should be tied securely to prevent them from slipping over children's eyes.

Apply a natural mask of cosmetics rather than have a child wear a loose-fitting mask that might restrict breathing or obscure vision. If a mask is used, however, make sure it fits securely and has eyeholes large enough to allow full vision.

Swords, knives, and similar costume accessories should be of soft and flexible material.

- Pedestrian Safety: Young children should always be accompanied by an adult or an older, responsible child. All children should walk, not run from house to house and use the sidewalk if available, rather than walk in the street. Children should be cautioned against running out from between parked cars, or across lawns and yards where ornaments, furniture, or clotheslines present dangers.
- Choosing Safe Houses: Children should go only to homes where the residents are known and have outside lights on as a sign of welcome. Children should not enter homes or apartments unless they are accompanied by an adult. People expecting trick-or-treaters should remove anything that could be an obstacle from lawns, steps and porches. Candlelit jack-o'-lanterns should be kept away from landings and doorsteps where costumes could brush against the flame. Indoor jack-o'-lanterns should be kept away from curtains, decorations, and other furnishings that could be ignited.
- Eyewear: According to 'Prevent Blindness America', for older children and adults, cosmetic contact lenses have become popular costume accessories. They can change eye color or even give the appearance of cat's eyes or reptile eyes. Unfortunately, using these lenses without the proper direction from an eye care professional can lead to serious eye complications which include bacterial infections, swelling, eye pain, sensitivity to light, conjunctivitis (pink eye), corneal scratches, corneal ulceration, and loss of clarity. If left untreated, these conditions can result in permanent eye damage.

There is such a diversity of concerns in these complicated times that we have to be careful what protection we select for the threats we become aware of. On the one hand we need to ensure a balanced diet for our kids, so we adjust the list of treats we serve keeping in mind their dietary needs. But, we can't become too strident about dieting because some may receive the wrong signals and develop anorexic tendencies. Also, predators are a real concern, but then I often hear complaints about the fact that many kids are driven to school with the comment "what became of walking?" And with the weather as it has been, for which emergencies shall we prepare?

Rental housing at Cook: a tempest in a teapot?

COMMENTARY

JIM HAMILTON

There seems to be misunderstanding that Cohasset's commitment to provide affordable senior housing requires rental apartments along with ownership units on the Cook property. The proponents of rental units have asked the Board of Selectmen to consider a Phase II option which will include rental units on Town-owned property contiguous to Cook. The winning bidder for Phase I, Deer Hill Partners, proposed affordable ownership units only.

Rental proponents remind the board that the selectmen spoke to a rental component when the article to purchase the Cook estate was presented at the special town meeting Nov. 17, 2003. Many might remember that rental units were discussed together with ownership units, but only in conceptual terms in the general description of the project. The fact is there is no rental language in Article 4, the enabling article which authorized the Board of Selectmen to purchase the Cook property.

The article did refer to the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District Bylaw which one would assume provides more specific guidelines about rental components. This bylaw, adopted in November 2002, defines Senior Multi-family Residence Development (SMRD) as affordable housing to persons 55 years or older in the Cohasset area and refers to the applicable state guidelines for low income, moderate income and median income.

It states that 100 percent of the dwelling units in a SMRD be owned and occupied by at least one person fifty-five years or older. How can owner-occupied be confused with rental?

Rental proponents refer to a Cohasset survey that polled seniors and elicited a high pro-rental response — 46 percent or 61 seniors out of 132 responses opted for affordable rental units.

This survey's summary report titled No Place Like Home: Cohasset Senior Housing Survey dated April 2000 is highly questionable, both because of the credentials of those who prepared it at the McCormick Institute at UMass/Boston and the fact it is missing any supporting raw data or even the original questionnaire to see how the questions were worded. For instance the survey reported that 96 percent of respondents wanted to retain their Cohasset home as their primary residence. Forty-six percent want rentals, 96 percent want ownership? How do you have it both ways? It doesn't add up.

Arguably, no town in the Commonwealth supporting as many non-regionalized services has gone through as dramatic a turn-over of elected and key officials in as short a time period.

A more credible survey that included the demographics of the entire town was developed by the Growth and Development Committee and was released as the Cohasset Master Plan Draft November 2003. Over 10 percent of Cohasset's 5,425 voters responded to a variety of questions. The greatest concerns of those respondents were preserving water resources, managing wastewater, protection of natural resources, impact of train, preservation of open spaces, fiscal management and quality public education. Two bar chart graphics, one ranking Issues Facing Cohasset Today placed Senior Housing Option 15th out of 23 and the other Future Issues ranked Senior Housing 22nd out of 50. There is no specific mention in the questionnaire of rental housing, only the word Housing as applied to low income and affordable.

Yet in the second round of Cook request for proposals, the Board of Selectmen did include rental components as part of the bid proposals in a section titled Affordable Housing, Program Mix and Market Rates. The selectmen ranked the three proposals on a number system based on their answers to four categories. Deer Hill Partners, the winning bidder, accumulated the highest number of points overall from each of the five selectmen because their proposal was the best which added the most points (241 points), the quality of their team was second best (64 points), the affordable housing mix and market rate units were second best (70 points) and financial benefits beyond maximum were third best (35 points). The total points of Deer Hill beat the other two proposals, 410 to 392 for Cohasset Associates and 374 for Northland Residential. This point system was specified in the request for Proposal by the five selectmen. After you add it all up, you don't go back and alter the grade points because you don't like the outcome.

In the past year and half, our town has elected three new selectmen. They hired both a new town manager and a police chief. Three new school committee members hired a new school superintendent. Arguably, no town in the Commonwealth supporting as many non-regionalized services has gone through as dramatic a turn-over of elected and key officials in as short a time period. The results to date are that many of the issues that split the town are under control — or at least being addressed — thanks to these people's diligence and their ability to take responsibilities. Senior affordable housing is being addressed at Cook and in the village while all on our town's western horizon looms the state-mandated prospect of 200 rental units at Avalon (25 percent of which would be affordable).

With the threat of a potential lawsuit from Cohasset Associates which has hired counsel to challenge the Board of Selectmen's decision, with the Cohasset Senior Housing Committee unhappy with the majority of the Board of Selectmen and SERF dusting off their Sewer Cohasset Residents First signs, perhaps the best thing we can all do is sit down and drink a calming pot of tea.

The College Boy, in a new long rocky place

LETTER FROM SCOTLAND

KATHLEEN HEALEY

First in a series; a mother's tale of a Cohasset boy's first year at a small coastal college in Scotland.

A bit of background

After moving from Cohasset in 1995 with two young sons in tow, my husband and I eagerly began a new chapter in our lives in a village of 800 kind souls in rural Scotland.

Although we all longed for what we'd left behind; family, friends, our church community and our beautiful Cohasset, our first decade in Scotland passed in a blur of soccer practices, village social events, school activities, making new friends, exploring the spectacular beauty and history of our surroundings, and generally settling into our new nest like four fat, contented hens.

We maintained our cherished links with Cohasset through letters, phone calls, regular visits, and eventually through the miracle of email and the electronic version of The Cohasset Mariner.

Although we acclimated quickly, we missed disparate combinations of things about what we sometimes tenderly referred to as "our old life". For me there were three things; the first being Purdue Oven Stuffer Roaster Chickens. In 12 years of married life I'd never needed to calculate the cooking time of a roaster chicken based on its weight. Mr Perdue had thoughtfully printed it on the label for me, and thrown in a pop-up gadget to further ensure a successful outcome. Unfortunately, Purdue chickens didn't have the wing-span to cross the Atlantic, and once I arrived here I was forced to learn a new "wifely art", as cooking, baking and home-making are called here.

The second thing I missed was accidental meetings, or the casual run-in, at Stop & Shop or the Paul Pratt Library. It was then that I enjoyed my version of speed-dating; that is, running into a former CHS classmate, a PTA mom, friends of my parents or grand-parents, or a cousin, and then chatting so efficiently for five or ten minutes that we easily covered vacations, the well-being and happiness of our children, married life, health, school events and notable recent developments of our siblings and their families too.

Once in the city, I quickly saw that I was indeed part of a new tribe, and in fact nearly a clone; the sensibly dressed mother, aged between 40 and 50, armed with a list, a credit card and (trailing behind in his own world) an 18-year-old son.

Third on my most-missed list was Sandy Beach. As I'm sure it is for many, Sandy Beach has been many things for me at different points in my life. For the last thirty years it has been synonymous with the words peace and beauty. If any one is ever able to package into liquid form the calming effect that Sandy Beach has on my high-strung nature, I'll buy a lifetime supply of that soothing nectar.

The college boy

Our first decade here in Scotland has passed in a twinkle of condensed time. The wee boys with which we departed from Cohasset are now teenagers, and last month my husband, younger son Anthony and our first-born son Gerald began a new journey, when we drove to Scotland's rugged and rocky east coast, to transfer temporary ownership and care of a beloved son and brother to the University of St Andrews, in the Kingdom of Fife.

Both son and parents had prepared for this journey for many years. Gerald had always been a dedicated and serious student, and was quietly pleased to learn the previous October that he'd been accepted to begin study for a degree in International Relations for the academic year 2005-2006, for which there were 10 applicants for each place. Like all parents, my husband and I had expressed hopes for our children long before they were born; we hoped they would share our passion for language and literature and that they would also be committed to their faith and have a sense of social justice. Our dreams were simple. In the previous 18 years we were proud to help foster Gerald's development into a very pleasant teen-ager, while simultaneously recognizing that incredible good luck played the larger role in the kind of young men which both our boys had become.

For me, the weeks before "college moving-in day" were spent in front of my computer formulating tidy tables and color-coded lists of things to buy in categories and sub-categories, things to mend, paperwork to complete, toiletries required, prescriptions to be refilled and so on. Recognizing that I may have been taking over the entire operation, I asked Gerald what he thought he might need to buy before he left for school. His answer, "I think I could use a towel, a new belt and some new CDs" convinced me I that was indeed the right person for the job of preparing and packing his trunk.

In August, we traveled 40 miles to the nearest city, intent on reducing the long "To Do" list to a scrap of paper. I'd seen a television documentary not long before called "The Human Animal," which pitched the theory that modern man forms into small tribes as a source of social comfort and protection, and that these tribes are easily identified by their uniform, whether it was teenage girls in low-rider jeans, executives in suits and wingtips, older women with similar hairstyles, or Goths. Once in the city, I quickly saw that I was indeed part of a new tribe, and in fact nearly a clone; the sensibly dressed mother, aged between 40 and 50, armed with a list, a credit card and (trailing behind in his own world) an 18-year-old son. Once I'd recognized myself as a new member of this tribe, I realized there were hundreds of us out on the street and in the stores. I stopped myself from leaning against a store-front in stunned horror, and instead reminded myself that this was meant to be a happy task. Even if the members of my tribe had all been dressed head to toe in day-glo orange, we couldn't have been more obvious as near carbon-copies of each other. Occasionally, while passing in the store or on the sidewalk, a member of my tribe made flickering eye contact with me, as if to silently but meaningfully say "I KNOW!".

And so in September, after all the farewells had been said, good wishes cast, and the end of a round of parties had been attended, Gerald & Company, arrived at the University of St Andrews, very aware that this was one of those key "first day of the rest of your life" moments. The dorm-mother opened the door to his room and ushered us in. The view from his window included the club house and 1st hole of the Royal and Ancient Old Course (a pilgrimage site for golfers world-wide) and beyond that the rocky shoreline and beach of what is known as The West Sands of St Andrews. She then asked if this room would be acceptable, to which my husband and I automatically replied with a typically restrained Scottish expression, "It's just fine, thank you". Once the door was closed, and we four were alone, the boys prioritized the unpacking, which meant the music system and CDs were unpacked first, and the Scottish Socialist Party protest rally posters went up second, while Mom and Dad were glued to the window, whispering sweet nothings to each other such as; "million dollar view", "what a lucky boy" and "imagine looking out at ocean from your window every morning!".

The older I get, the more aware I become of the many ways that life seems to come full circle, how it's actually a very small world in which we live, and that it gets smaller and smaller as time passes. In a fraction of a second, I saw in the view from Gerald's window that an important circle which began in Cohasset would start to complete. My son, in having daily contact with the long rocky shore of St Andrews would, slowly and unwittingly, have its comfort, peace and beauty impressed on his young being, and that it would help to shape who he is and will become, as much as Cohasset and Sandy Beach, my own long rocky place, had for me.

Next month: The College Boy meets the global village.

$10 million teen-ager

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Is this a great country or what?

Where else can a 16-year-old high school junior sign an agreement to get paid for playing a game that involves whacking a ball around with a club and bank close to $10 million in product endorsements before taking the first swing?

When I was 16 (and ice covered most of the earth) I was picking beans on Old Man Arnold's Farm mornings for 10 cents an hour...

That's what Michelle Wie did when she skipped morning classes at Punahou High in Honolulu the other day and presumably got back in the classroom in time to take the cake out of the oven before it burned in Home Economics III.

Am I jealous? You're damn right! When I was 16 (and ice covered most of the earth) I was picking beans on Old Man Arnold's Farm mornings for 10 cents an hour and hoping to be held over for a few more hours work in the afternoon.

But, then again, Michelle has been doing this (golfing, not picking beans) at least since she was 11 years old when she put down her Barbie Dolls and won her first tournament, the Jennie K. Wilson Invitational, by nine strokes over the defending champion.

"That's when we knew there was something special here," said her coach, Casey Nakama, a master of understatement.

Michelle, who is six feet, one inch tall and can hit a golf ball 300 yards without a tail wind, has already entered 24 tournaments on the LPGA tour as an amateur and if she was allowed to step up to the teller's window, would have taken home $640,870 by now.

Now I have nothing against money, having watched it flow by me without stopping for more years than I care to count, but Michelle's possible take as a teen-aged amateur would have been chickenfeed only to a movie star, a baseball player and a Colombian drug lord of your choice.

Michelle not only signed a pro contract the other day but she celebrated her 16th birthday, got her first driver's license, hinted to her parents, B.J. and Bo Wie, that she was ready for her first car and appeared on the cover of Fortune Magazine with the headline "Move over Tiger."

The last was a reference to Tiger Woods, the most recent golf prodigy who was at least four years older when he won the Master's Tournament against the cream of the men's golf crop, although lately he appears to have been worn down to little more than sensational.

Michelle had been a pro only a few days when she teed off in her first tournament as a member of the play-for-pay set, the Samsung World Championship, in which she was guaranteed $10,624 just for showing up with enough clubs in her bag to satisfy the LPGA rules.

I must pause here to remind you that she is only 16, and should be worrying about a date for the junior prom and what she's going to wear at that sleepover at Susie's house, not CPAs and tax shelters and whether to tip her caddy $10,624 out of her latest million dollar tournament win.

LNG facility takes center stage

Bruce Berman, director of the Save the Harbor, Save the Bay initiative spends a full hour with co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin on Our Town discussing the proposed LNG (liquefied natural gas) facility proposed to be sited on Outer Brewster Island. Legislation is expected to the remove Outer Brewster from the National Park system.

Our Town also features roving reporter Rich Ofsthun visits with Cohasset residents of the four-legged variety at the Blessing of the Animals at St. Stephen's Church.

This edition will air Monday (Oct. 24) at 9p.m., Tuesday at 9:30p.m. A new show will air Thursday, Oct. 27 at 8:30p.m., all on Comcast channel 10. Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!

POLITICAL NOTES

Democrats kick off forum series

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee announces the commencement of a series of forums to discuss the many challenging issues we face today on a local, regional and national scale.

The first forum will be held on Saturday, Nov. 5 at 9:30a.m. in the Meeting Room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road.

The first forum will be held on Saturday, Nov. 5 at 9:30a.m. in the Meeting Room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The topic will be "U.S. Options in Iraq", moderated by former selectman Tom Callahan. Everyone is invited. Attendees are encouraged to read "New York Time's" columnist Thomas Friedman's Sept. 28 column, titled "The Endgame in Iraq". The article is posted on the Town Committee's web site at www.cohassetdems.org under the "Forum" section.

Reflections of the beaches of Normandy

COMMENTARY

MATTHEW J. GILL

Before Steven Spielberg filmed "Saving Private Ryan," the quintessential film about the D-Day landings of June 6, 1944 was "The Longest Day."

In the film (1962), which starred many of the most famous actors of the day — Henry Fonda, John Wayne and Sean Connery to name a few — there's a powerful scene that depicts the first moment a German soldier realizes the French coast is under attack.

Peering out of his gun mount early that morning, a German soldier takes a glance across the waters of the English Channel.

There's nothing there but the fog.

When he takes another look at the water a few seconds later, though, he sees an armada of a thousand ships emerging from the mist — all headed in his direction.

In August, I had the opportunity to look across the English Channel from that same vantage point, when I visited the American Cemetery in Normandy, a memorial dedicated to the American soldiers who died in France during the D-Day assaults on Omaha and the other beaches, as well as in the months following the Allied invasion.

A monument at the American Cemetery, just a few hundred yards inland from Omaha Beach.

The American Cemetery in Normandy, France is the final resting place for more than 9,000 Americans.

After attending a friend's wedding in the village of Sarceaux on July 30, I traveled a few hours north to the town of Bayeux, and on a day trip cycled to the cemetery.

Riding along the coast, along roads that wind through farmland and small villages, I came across a series of large billboards that showed photographs of the same neighborhoods, that had been taken soon after D-Day. The images depicted destroyed roads and buildings, and each of the billboards was propped up next to the structures, which have long since been repaired.

On the road to Omaha, I found an American flag — in red, white and blue flowers — resting a few yards from a church that had been leveled during the Allied invasion, and then rebuilt.

There were also a number of signs posted in the windows of shops and residences along the way that read, in English, 'Welcome war veterans' and 'Thank you.'

The American Cemetery is located just a few hundred yards inland from Omaha Beach.

It's beautiful.

The grass there is perfectly manicured, and the rows of crosses and occasional Stars of David are a gleaming white.

There are a few monuments on the site, as well as large diagrams that show the various tactical elements of "Operation Overlord," (the Allied invasion) and the German counter-offensives.

There's a nice reflecting pool on the site, and arranged and aligned in perfect symmetry, more than 9,000 American graves.

Visitors can walk through the rows, or take in a nice view of the Channel.

A winding pathway leads down from the cemetery, through some woods and out onto Omaha Beach.

I walked on the beach for 20 minutes or so, out to the water and back, and remembered the films I'd seen of D-Day, and the men who'd actually done it.

I took some photos, and took home some stones from the beach.

A few kilometers to the west, there's a German military cemetery that serves as the final resting place for 22,000 German casualties.

Large black crosses mark their graves.

The first town liberated

Just a few miles inland from the coast, the town of Bayeux bears the distinction of having been the first French town to be liberated by the Allies, shortly after D-Day.

While there, I visited the small town's massive gothic cathedral, and viewed the famous Tapestry of Bayeux. The lengthy piece of art was commissioned nearly a millennium ago to document William the Conqueror's defeat of the English at the Battle of Hastings in 1066.

Throughout Bayeux, and the entire coastal region of Normandy, there are several museums dedicated to D-Day, the battles that followed and the various nations that took part.

Portions of the ring road that encircle the town have been named after important players in the invasion: Montgomery, Eisenhower and Churchill all have boulevards bearing their names.

On my first night in Bayeux, I walked all around the town, had a crepe at a small outdoor café, and picked up some postcards. On one, there's an image of French boys and girls welcoming American and British troops to Bayeux, after the town was freed.

Another features a powerful image of Charles de Gaulle's historic return to France — and to Bayeux — a few days after D-Day.

In the outskirts of the town, I also visited the British Cemetery.

It was after 9 p.m., and the sun had only just begun to set when I arrived.

The sun's rays shined warmly on the cemetery, and lit up the names engraved on the more than 4,000 grave stones.

The cemetery was empty and peaceful, and there was a massive stone monument with a large sword affixed to a white cross.

Outside of the cemetery's gate was another large stone monument, that featured a sign-in ledger for visitors.

There were hundreds of recent entries in the log, and several that had been written earlier that same day.

The countries of origin of those who signed were vastly different — they'd traveled from all around the world to come here — but the majority of the notes sketched in were simple, and very similar.

Thank you for your service, most of them read, and thank you for your sacrifice.

Matt Gill is assistant editor of the Norwell Mariner, one of the Cohasset Mariner's sister newspapers. He can be reached at mgill@cnc.com.

At the American Cemetery, a large battle plan depicts the various aspects of "Operation Overlord," the Allied assault on the beaches of Normandy and the major battles that followed in north-western France, as well as German counter-offensives.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls and local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of October 10-14.

$30.2 MILLION FOR UMASS EMPLOYEES (H 4405)

House 146-0, Senate 35-0, override Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of $30.2 million to retroactively fund pay raises for thousands of higher education employees at the four University of Massachusetts campuses. The group includes faculty, staff and secretarial, maintenance and cafeteria workers. Supporters of the raises said that the $30.2 million contract was negotiated in good faith and agreed to by Gov. Swift three years ago in order to help this group that includes many low-paid workers earning less than $30,000 annually. They noted that the funding was delayed during the state's fiscal crisis and argued that the state now has sufficient funds to honor these contracts. Romney, in his veto message, said that in the past he has signed "going forward" pay hikes for these employees but does not support retroactive ones. (A "Yes" vote is for the $30.2 million).

$11.9 MILLION FOR STATE AND COMMUNITY COLLEGE WORKERS (H 4405)

House 144-0, Senate 34-0, override Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of $11.9 million to retroactively fund pay raises for thousands of workers at other state and community colleges. The issue is similar to the prior roll call vote on retroactive pay hikes for UMass employees. Supporters repeated their reasons for voting for the pay raises and Gov. Romney repeated his reason for vetoing them. (A "Yes" vote is for the $11.9 million).

ALLOW DEBATE ON CASINO GAMBLING AND SLOT MACHINES (H 4430)

House 39-105, rejected a proposal allowing legislators to offer amendments to legalize casino gambling, slot machines and video gaming. A special set of rules, proposed by the Democratic leadership, prohibits the offering of these amendments during upcoming debate on a spending bill. Some supporters of allowing the amendments said that they support legalizing casino gambling and slots that would produce a valuable revenue stream to fund local aid, education, human service programs or tax cuts. Others said that they do not support gambling or slots but argued that it is unfair and anti-democratic to prohibit members from offering these amendments when amendments on any other matter are allowed. Opponents of allowing the amendments said that the House should not consider major gambling initiatives during debate of an unrelated spending bill. They argued that legalized gambling would soon be considered as a separate bill at a public hearing. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing members to offer budget amendments legalizing casino gambling and slot machines. A "No" vote is against allowing the amendments).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL:

WORKPLACE BULLYING (H 3800): The Labor and Workforce Development Committee held a hearing on a bill requiring the state to develop a program mandating that companies with 50 or more employees establish a policy that defines and prevents "psychological harassment." Supporters said that workplace bullying is a growing problem that should be addressed and argued that it is time for the state to take action.

MILITARY BENEFITS (H 37): The Veterans and Federal Affairs Committee held a hearing on Gov. Romney's proposal to increase benefits for veterans and their families. Provisions include increasing from $5,000 to $100,000 the death benefits paid to families of National Guard members and providing an annual payment of $1,500 to Gold Star surviving spouses.

STATE JOBS (H 3812): A proposal heard by the Labor and Workforce Development Committee would centralize the posting of all state job openings by requiring that they be available on a single state website and in a published state bulletin.

ERGONOMICALLY CORRECT SCHOOLS (H 1052): A bill before the Education Committee last week would establish a special commission to study the ergonomic problems in public schools. Ergonomics is the science of designing equipment, furniture and a building's environment to ensure comfort and reduce fatigue. The commission would study issues including the problem with the heavy weight of some textbooks and would look into developing ergonomic design standards for current and future school facilities including classroom design, lighting, computers and furniture. Supporters said that many schools are way behind the times in ergonomics and argued that these problems can affect a child's education.

HEIGHT AND WEIGHT DISCRIMINATION (H 3752): The Labor and Workforce Development Committee held a hearing on legislation to prohibit discrimination on the basis of a person's height or weight.

PROHIBIT WORKPLACE LANGUAGE RESTRICTIONS (H 3807): A bill before the Labor and Workforce Development Committee last week would make it illegal for employers to arbitrarily prohibit workers from speaking in a foreign language in the workplace. The measure allows the restriction only if there is an overriding legitimate business purpose and the worker is notified of the circumstances and the time when the language restriction is required to be observed.

Threatening events prompt beefed-up school security

a gun to school. School was delayed two hours Monday morning and attendance was lower than normal.

Another note discovered in the early hours of Tuesday morning included a bomb threat. School was cancelled for the day.

In both cases the school was checked from the boilers in the basement to the roof, Antolini said. "Nothing was found."

Two student assemblies – one for the high school students and one for the middle school — were held Monday.

"Students were very focused on accomplishing their academic and learning goals," Antolini said. "They were also sharing with me their desire to put and end to this.

"It's taking away what they view as being a typical high school experience."

He said he also explained that whoever is doing this is really looking for some help.

"Our school community is very capable of responding and providing that support," he said. "We all need to be mindful of what a person might be thinking or feeling that would prompt them to do something like this."

He urged students to talk to an adult or call the police hot line if they have any information about who might be responsible at 781-383-1055 ext. 1050.

He said while faculty members are concerned, they have done a "phenomenal job" of addressing student concerns both on a group and individual basis while still maintaining a focus on academics.

Antolini said the ban on backpacks would continue as well as searches of pocketbooks, etc. Students who don't comply have their backpacks collected; they are given back at the end of the day, he said.

Timeline of events

• May 11: students are dismissed after a bullet and threatening note are found outside the middle-high school just before 6 a.m.

• Sept. 26: Cohasset police respond to an alarm at the middle high school at approximately 1:30 a.m. Responding officers find a torn screen on the first floor of the middle school section of the building. Further investigation leads officers to find notes inside the building which indicate there is a bomb in the school. A note on the front door has the same message. The Boston Bomb Squad is called to investigate a suspicious package.

• Oct. 16 (Sunday): Written note discovered on school property by a teacher and students meeting to carpool to Boston. Note included the threat to bring a gun to school. Principal Joel Antolini notifies students and their families that backpacks will not be allowed and purses and lunch bags would be subject to searches. Opening of school delayed two hours Oct. 17.

• Oct. 18 (Tuesday): Middle-high school is closed for the day. Police discovered a threatening note at about 1:30 a.m. on the middle-high school sign at the school entrance stating there was a bomb in the school. Seventh-grader was arrested midday in connection with that bomb threat and the Sept. 26 bomb threat.

Boy arrested in bomb threats

The following is a press release from Cohasset police.

On Tuesday, Oct. 18, at approximately 12:40 p.m., Cohasset Police detectives arrested a 13-year-old male juvenile resident of Cohasset in connection with two of the incidents involving threats of violence at the Cohasset Middle/Senior High School. The individual who was arrested attends school in Cohasset. One of the incidents occurred during the evening hours on Monday, Oct. 17, and involved a threatening letter that was left attached to the front sign at the school. The other incident occurred on Sept. 26, during which time the Middle School was broken into and a note and other writings were left indicating that there was a bomb in the school.

The individual will be charged with the following offenses:

1. Mass. General Laws Chapter 269, sec. 14 (c) Bomb/Hijack Threat with Serious Public Alarm (2 counts). Felony (20 years)

2. Mass. General Laws Chapter 266, sec. 16 Breaking and Entering in the Nighttime with Intent to Commit a Felony (1 count). Felony (20 years)

3. Mass. General Laws Chapter 266, sec. 127 Malicious Destruction of Property Over $250 (1 count). (2.5 years)

4. Mass. General Laws Chapter 272, sec. 53 Disturbing the Peace (2 counts). (6 months)

Cohasset Police urge anyone with any information that pertains to these incidents to call the Cohasset Police anonymous tip line at 781-383-1055, Ext. 1050.

Cohasset detectives continue to investigate the remaining incidents and are further evaluating physical evidence collected during those investigations. Detectives are also investigating whether or not this individual was involved in any of the other threats directed toward the Middle/Senior High School.

In accordance with its existing memorandum of understanding, Cohasset Police have furnished the name of the individual who was arrested to school authorities and will support the school in whatever measures they deem necessary to insure the safety of the student body.

Cohasset Police urge anyone with any information that pertains to these incidents to call the Cohasset Police anonymous tip line at 781-383-1055, Ext. 1050.

LIBRARY CORNER

Knitting group – Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Historical Room. Open to all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring a knitting project and join like-minded friends. For more information call Mary Coughlin, 781 383-1348.

Free admission.

Sunday hours – In addition to its regular hours, the library is now open Sundays from 2 to 5p.m.

Homebound delivery service – The library offers home delivery service to those confined to their homes due to illness or disability. A volunteer from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit interested participants at their residence to discuss reading preferences and take requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to and picked up from residences and returned to the library on a regular schedule. Those interested, or who know someone who could benefit from this service, call the library, 781-383-1348.

Computer help – Reference librarian Gayle Walsh will provide one-on-one tutorials to library users needing help using the computers and want to learn how to search the online catalog or reference databases. Call the library, 781-383-1348, to schedule a session.

Museum passes – The library has free passes to 11 different museums and cultural organizations, available to Cohasset residents, thanks to the Friends of the Library. Boston destinations include Boston By Foot, the Children's Museum, and the Museum of Science. Among the local attractions are the Maritime and Irish Mossing Museums and Plimoth Plantation. Stop by the library to pick up passes. To reserve in advance call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org, and click Using the Library, Museum Passes.

FOR CHILDREN

Music and movement – MamaSteph will be performing music and movement for young children, Mondays, Oct. 24 and Oct. 31, from 10:30 to 11 a.m. in the Meeting Room. Open to all communities. Children must be accompanied by a caregiver. No registration required. Program funded by an LSTA grant awarded by Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Letters About Literature – Writing contest for students in grades four through 12. Contestants select a favorite book, and then write a personal letter to the author explaining why, and how, the book affected them. Contest has three competition levels: Level 1, grades four to six; Level 2, grades seven to 8; and Level 3, grades 9 to 12. Entry forms and guidelines are available in the Children's Room and Young Adult's Room, or visit www.massbook.org. Submission deadline is Dec. 1.

Letters About Literature is a program of the Massachusetts Center for the Book. Primary sponsorship is from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum with additional support from Houghton Mifflin Co., and the Massachusetts Library Association.

Board of Health to hold flu clinic

There will be a flu clinic for seniors (65+ yrs.) and those people with chronic health problems such as cardiovascular and pulmonary disease, diabetes, renal dysfunction, pregnant women, healthcare workers who are in direct contact with patients HIV positive or immune compromised individuals, Tuesday Oct. 25, from 10 a.m. to noon and Thursday, Oct. 27, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

The flu vaccine is free but seniors are reminded to bring their Medicare insurance card or Medicare HMO card with them and all are asked to wear a short-sleeve shirt for ease of administration. Call the Public Health Nurse for more info at 781-383-2210.

Selectmen briefed on series of threats and Tuesday's arrest

Citizens urged to call hotline

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams and police Sgt. John Conte briefed selectmen Tuesday night about the arrest of a 13-year-old in connection with two recent bomb threats at the middle-high school.

Two notes were found with threats of violence this week making a total of four incidents in recent months. This week, one note talked about guns in school and the other was a bomb threat.

The 13-year-old is a suspect in the latter incident and a similar bomb threat in September that also involved breaking into the school.

The middle-high school was closed Tuesday to allow a complete search of the building.

At the selectmen's meeting Tuesday, Williams also announced a community forum to be held Thursday night (yesterday). The forum was held after the Mariner went to press. Check out the Mariner website today at www.cohassetmariner.com for a report on the forum along with next week's paper for a more detailed account.

"Times are changing, no town is immune to these acts of (potential) violence," she said. "The good news is it has given us a wakeup call to put in place community efforts to handle these kinds of problems now and in the future."

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said while a lot has been accomplished the past few days, there could still be at least one person out there responsible for the other threats that remain under investigation. He stressed that anyone with any information should call the police hot line at 781-383-1055 ext. 1050.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said there area pranksters and psychos. "I was a prankster as a kid, but it's the psychos we worry about."

Vanderweil asked if enough was being done proactively to flag troubled students who might be depressed and need some help.

Williams explained there are two school psychologists as well as guidance counselors available.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed assured citizens that their town government is taking this matter very seriously.

"It's being handled by the police and school department with the support of the selectmen and advisory committee," he said.

Sgt. Conte was serving as acting chief while Police Chief James Hussey was out of state in Alabama. Hussey, who was in constant contact by telephone during this week's events, returned Wednesday.

"The good news is it has given us a wakeup call to put in place community efforts to handle these kinds of problems now and in the future."

— Jamie Williams, school committee

In response to the threatening note found Sunday morning outside the middle-high school, Williams, the school committee chairman, called an emergency meeting Monday night that included selectmen, the advisory committee, school committee, police and emergency management personnel to talk about what she described as a "crisis situation." That meeting was held before the most recent incident allegedly involving the 13-year-old who is a seventh-grader at the middle school.

She said the advisory committee was called in Monday night because enhancing security measures could require additional funds, such as police overtime, installing metal detectors at the school and enhanced surveillance cameras, and the possibility of using a security firm.

Williams described her meeting in the middle-high school principal's office Tuesday morning following the discovery of the bomb threat, as a "war room" that included police, Selectman Dormitzer, school officials and some school committee members.

"We brainstormed and left feeling the cooperation between school and police was really working," she said.

In a telephone interview yesterday, Hussey said Cohasset police call in outside help whenever needed. In the school incidents, for example, police have used both the Plymouth County and State Police labs.

"We can also reach out to the FBI or Secret Service to help us solve crimes," he explained.

"In this case we have an arrest and we solved that on our own with the help of tips from two different people," he said about the 13-year-old.

"It's important to stress how important the public is in helping to solve crimes," Hussey said. He said it is unclear at this time if the boy, who was arrested, had some help with the incidents.

He asked citizens to call the hotline with any information they may have relating to the series of school threats.

Recent synopsis of events

- Tuesday, Oct. 4 — parent forum held at CMHS to address concerns about Sept. 26 bomb threat and May 11 incident involving a threatening note with a bullet attached.

Police don't back right turn on red light at Pond Street & 3A

Seek traffic review of state highway

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey is recommending the "No Turn on Red" signage at Route 3A and Pond Street should stay.

He noted the speed limit on Route 3A is 50 mph so any northbound vehicle traveling toward Pond Street would have difficulty stopping for a vehicle turning right from Pond Street onto 3A.

"Children from the middle-high school utilize the crosswalks at the intersection," Hussey stated in a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin.

He also said cars parked at Brown's auto dealership at 3A and Pond Street inhibit visibility looking south on 3A.

"We have had nine accidents at this location in the past year," Hussey stated. "I would recommend that when the Greenbush Line begins operation, that we ask for an extensive review of speed limits, traffic control signals and travel lanes in Cohasset between the Scituate and Hingham town lines."

"Children from the middle-high school utilize the crosswalks at the intersection."

— Police Chief James Hussey

Hussey asked Sgt. John Conte to review the intersection and attached Conte's report to his letter to Griffin.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer would like Town Manager Bill Griffin to look into the possibility of making right-hand turns during a red light legal at the intersection of Pond Street and Rte. 3A.

Last month, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer raised the possibility of eliminating the no-right-turn-on-red signs at 3A and Pond Street. He noted with the closure at Beechwood Street, Pond Street has become a more traveled road, and it would travel easier if right-on-red was allowed.

He said it was something worth looking into, noting right turns on red are allowed at the Beechwood light.

Based on Sgt. Conte's report, Hussey is also recommending additional street lights on Beech Street. He also stated reflective paint would help solve the problem of drivers who have trouble seeing the road.

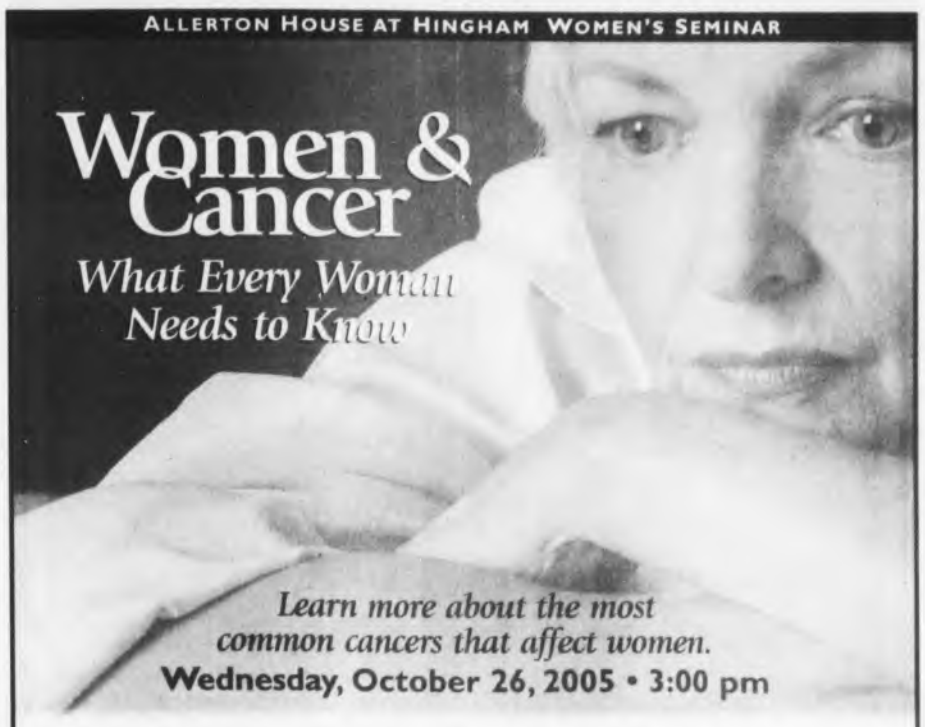
"Beach Street does not have sidewalks or high pedestrian traffic after dark," Hussey said. "With limited resources, I would recommend that the town determine those locations that are in critical need of street lights."

State adjusts Beechwood left-turn light

MassHighway has contacted Town Manager Bill Griffin to address town concerns about the operation of the traffic signal at the Route 3A/Beechwood Street intersection.

Bernard McCourt, district highway manager, said a field review of the intersection was conducted to ensure that the traffic signalization is operating properly.

He said an adjustment was made to the southbound left-turn light, which was not functioning.



"An adjustment to the vehicle detection was made and currently the left-turn phase is fully operational," McCourt said. "It should be noted the left-turn phase would only be called if there were sufficient demand for it."

McCourt said vehicle detection for the northbound left-turn phase on Route 3A is located at the stop line in the left approach lane, which is standard. "The operation was reviewed and found to respond to vehicle demand as necessary," he said.

MassHighway will review concerns about left-turn traffic out of Leo's Exxon. "To fully assess the situation, I am requesting crash reports for the last three years at the gas station driveways on Route 3A," he said. "After review of the reports, a determination will be made as to whether changes should be made to the driveways."

MassHighway installed the traffic signal three years ago, replacing the former signal without arrows, after a public outcry over the safety of the intersection.

Last summer, Chief James Hussey raised concerns about the faulty operation of the left-hand signals last summer and Town Manager Bill Griffin contacted MassHighway.

CHS field hockey keep tourney hopes alive with two big wins

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Last week's rain-induced lack of practice didn't seem to have too much effect on the CHS field hockey team.

The girls played their best game of the season on Monday in a 2-1 upset home win over Mashpee, and followed it up with a 7-0 victory at Hull on Wednesday.

As a result, Cohasset is now 4-5-1 and back in the postseason picture. Beginning with tomorrow's home game against Harwich (4 p.m. start), the Skippers will play their last six games in a span of eight days. Cohasset will need to go no worse than 3-2-1 in those games to qualify for the tournament.

Cohasset is now 4-5-1 and back in the postseason picture.

They stand a very good shot to do so if they continue their level of play from the Mashpee game. The Falcons, always a strong team in the South Shore League, were 7-1-1 heading into the game. But great defense and timely goal-scoring propelled Cohasset to victory.

Mashpee got on the board first with a goal just under 10 minutes into the first half. The Cohasset defense put the clamps down from there, dealing with 12 Mashpee corners and not allowing a goal on any of them. Leading the way were senior co-captains Katherine Whoriskey and Remy Lee, and sophomore Sally Meehan, all of whom played the entire 60 minutes.

"They've been playing outstanding," said Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick. "It's hard to make changes when they're playing that well."

Seniors Ellen Tarpey and Vanessa Plante split time at sweeper in the first half, with junior Michelle Madge playing a good part of the second half. All three defended well in front of a goalkeeping tandem of freshman Alyssa Mullin and senior Aaron Bigley.

In her first varsity game, Mullin played well, making a couple big saves in the first half to hold Mashpee to a single goal. Bigley shut out the Falcons in the second half with five saves.

Junior Virginia Spofford tied the game with two minutes left in the first half. She took a well-placed cross from senior co-captain Mia Lieb-Lappen and buried it in the back of the cage to send the Skippers to the halftime break with some momentum.

Lieb-Lappen led a solid effort from the Cohasset midfield that also featured senior Christie Muir, juniors Caitlin Hurley and Laura Campedelli, and sophomore Corinna Durham.

A special Homecoming for the CHS gridders

Kicking game comes though in the clutch

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

After most football games, people talk about either how the offense or defense played. But what doesn't receive a lot of recognition is the special teams.

Last Friday night, the Homecoming game for Cohasset High School, the Skippers played a muddy game in the rain against South Shore League opponent, Mashpee. This game came down to who had the better special teams and Cohasset showed everybody who truly did in their 7-6 victory.

The game started with a very slow first quarter where neither team's offense could move the ball. Mashpee was first to strike though when senior quarterback Matt Skane bombed a 58-yard catch and run touchdown to fellow senior Mike Raymond with about eight minutes left in the half.

Mashpee went for a two-point conversion but failed, which would come back to haunt them in the end.

Cohasset finally got something going the very next drive, beginning with some great running from sophomore fullback PJ McCave. He had a few runs totaling close to 20 yards on the drive. Junior quarterback Anthony DiPaolo had a 20-yard run, setting up a block from senior captain Nick Arment, which brought the Skippers to the red zone.

The Skippers had a costly penalty, however, that brought them back to the 18-yard line where on fourth down, DiPaolo was looking for senior captain Dan McCarthy but underthrew it and had it intercepted by junior Bryan Kennedy in the end zone. The first half

CHS boys looking for turnaround after 1-1 draw with Spellman

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

To say Cohasset boys soccer head coach Rob Leary was unhappy after his team's 1-1 tie at Cardinal Spellman on Monday would be an accurate statement.

In fact, those were his exact words. And then some.

"It was the worst game we've played all year long," a candid Leary said the next day. "We were very lucky to get out of there with a tie."

The Cardinals scored with 15 minutes left in the game, and Cohasset appeared doomed to defeat until midfielder Sam Roth tallied with two minutes remaining to salvage a point for his team.

Leary did praise his team for not giving up after the Spellman goal and fighting back for the tie. Execution was the big problem, particularly against a team that, on paper, Cohasset probably had the advantage against.

"When we play teams that maybe don't have as much talent, we tend to play down to their level," Leary said. "Sometimes, I don't know what to expect."

The Skippers' Aidan Buick (right) accepts congratulations from Brandon Smith after scoring a goal during the Sept. 28 win at Norwell. Smith recently suffered an ankle injury, and the Skippers missed his presence in central midfield during their 1-1 tie at Cardinal Spellman.

A bright spot on the day for Cohasset was the play of senior stopper Sam MacDonald, who continues to be one of the team's steadiest performers.

"Sam has been playing extremely hard all season," Leary said. "He's probably the toughest kid on the team. He's physical, aggressive, and he always tries to set the tone early in the game with some tackles."

Last Friday, the boys played a much better game in their 2-0 loss against South Shore League would end here with the Skippers losing 6-0.

On the first play from scrimmage in the second half, Mashpee broke a 30-yard run. Just as it began to look bad for Cohasset, their defense picked up its game. With big plays for losses in the backfield from sophomores Sam DeGiacomo and McCaw, Mashpee was forced to punt the ball to Cohasset.

This is where Cohasset's running game really picked itself up. Starting on their own 24-yard line, the Skippers had no problem moving up the field with huge runs from senior back Shane Dorian, including a 15-yard run for a first down. Then, on a QB bootleg, DiPaolo took off for a 43-yard run diving head first into the end zone.

This capped an eight-play, 76-yard drive that left only 2:23 in the third quarter. Senior kicker Robert Murley gave the Skippers a 7-6 lead with an extra point, with help from sophomore holder Brian Hill.

Murley helped the cause further with a fantastic kickoff that pinned Mashpee deep in their own territory. Mashpee could not get anything going and was forced to punt, once again because of the great defense of Cohasset.

With just 6:33 left in the game, Cohasset received the ball back on their own 40-yard line. Mashpee's great defense held Cohasset and forced them to punt the ball. Murley once again had a great kick and Cohasset's coverage was outstanding and made Mashpee lose yardage on the return.

Head coach Tony Rolfe said the Skippers' special teams is a big key to his team's success.

"We spend a lot of time on it and really stress it," Rolfe said. "It also helps when Robert gets a great kick; he's been a huge addition."

The day before the game, Cohasset had a special teams-only practice, which really showed in this game.

With time left for only one more drive, Mashpee, starting on their own 21-yard line, needed to move the ball quickly and efficiently. They began using a hurry-up offense and had a few short completions. Skane had a 12-yard run for a first down, and then on a third-and-9 had a big completion to Kennedy for another first down.

Another third down came up, and Cohasset's defense did their job. When Skane passed downfield, senior captain Dave McKenna jumped up and deflected the pass away, forcing a fourth and long. On the very next play, the Skippers regained possession with a sack by McCarthy.

With only 1:38 left in the game, Cohasset ran out the clock to seal the win. This gave Cohasset a 3-1-2 record and an undefeated 2-0 record in the South Shore League.

After the game, Rolfe mentioned how both defenses played very well and that Mashpee played a great game. In this one though, it was not the defense made the biggest difference. It was the special teams.

Cohasset hopes to continue the momentum tonight when they travel to Weston to square off with the Wildcats. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

leading Harwich. Cohasset controlled the majority of the possession in the first half, and had their chances to score. Roth, Aidan Buick and Mike Grimm all had good opportunities, but couldn't convert.

The Skippers' only mistake of the half resulted in a goal for the visitors, as an attempted clearance went right to the feet of Harwich striker Ryan Soares, who put it in to give his team a 1-0 lead. Soares is second in the league in scoring behind Buick.

Cohasset suffered some bad luck with five minutes left in the game. The whistle blew just before a Skippers free kick at midfield. A Harwich player ran onto the ball, and play was allowed to continue. With Cohasset out of position, the Rough Riders scored an insurance goal.

"I told the kids after the game, it didn't make a difference," Leary said of the perplexing call. "We just would've lost 1-0 instead of 2-0."

The Skippers have been missing the presence of Brandon Smith in central midfield after the senior suffered an ankle injury. Leary said Smith is good with both feet and has controlled games from his position, and not having him on the pitch has hurt.

Tough home stretch

For various reasons, a number of games have been postponed in the last 10 days, leaving Cohasset with a grueling run of games this week and next: yesterday at home against Norwell, today at Carver (4:15 kickoff), Monday at home with Mashpee (5:30), Wednesday at Scituate (3:30), Thursday at home against Hull (3:30), and Friday at home with Bridgewater-Raynham (4).

The Skippers are 5-0 against those teams so far this year, with Scituate the only squad in that stretch they have not played yet. Cohasset will end their season against the Sailors on Nov. 2 at Alumni Field.

The Skippers hope to have a state tournament berth clinched by then. Going into yesterday's game with Norwell, they needed just two wins and a tie to get in.

and control the middle of the field, and they stepped up," Bostwick said. "The defense was doing well to control up to the 25, and the midfield took over from there."

It was one of those midfielders, Hurley, who scored the game-winner with 14:44 left in the game. After Whoriskey sent a long ball down the Mashpee end of the field, Hurley and senior co-captain Katie James ran a well-executed give-and-go, and Hurley capitalized for the score.

Bostwick said another significant factor in the win was her team's depth. All 24 players on the roster got into the game, allowing Bostwick to give her best players a few minutes of rest here and there so they were still fresh at the end of the game.

The Skippers were riding high after the win, and the momentum carried over two days later at Hull. First half goals from Lieb-Lappen and Hurley - both assisted by James - set the tone for the lopsided victory that let Bostwick rest many of her starters in the second half.

The coach was encouraged by the balance of her team's scoring, as six players combined to score Cohasset's seven goals. Senior wings Erin Liddell and Devin Smith scored early in the second half to make it 4-0, at which point Bostwick played many of her reserves for the remainder of the game.

Junior Sheelah Scott assisted Spofford on the Skippers' fifth goal, and Scott scored the last two to round out the offensive attack. Hurley and Spofford assisted on Scott's tallies.

Bostwick said she liked what she saw from senior Whitney Condon and junior Alida Tangherlini, who spelled Lee and Whoriskey defensively in the second half and played well. Seniors Jessica Wheelwright and Brooke Allen also contributed to the great all-around effort.

Now, Cohasset is focused on their grueling season-ending schedule. Following tomorrow's Harwich match, the girls schedule is as follows: Monday at home against Westwood (4 p.m.), Tuesday at Westwood (4), Wednesday at home against Marshfield (5), Friday at home against Norwell (6), and Saturday at home against Scituate (9 a.m.).

Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 report

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team played their third game of the year last Sunday against a feisty team from Duxbury at Hobomock Arena.

In the first period, the Stars scored with on an unassisted goal from Tom Pilat. Jack Conlon, assisted by Dan Cronin and Pilat, quickly racked up another goal.

The Stars defense of Joe Proctor, Brodie Jackisch, Sam Asnault, and Jake Denton were working to keep Duxbury scoreless, but Duxbury had other plans.

Soon the team from Duxbury began their offensive strike. Goalie Hugh Healey made many great saves, with wings Mats Nelson, Derek Benson, Cameren Mastrangelo and Jake Moore keeping on the pressure. Duxbury struck twice, but Stars wing David Craig, assisted by Pilat, scored the third goal. But Duxbury quickly answered back.

Jake Denton scored the Stars' fourth goal to tie the game at 4-4. In a heartbreaking finish with no more than a minute till the buzzer, Duxbury scored for a 5-4 win over the Stars.

The Stars C-2 team is looking forward to the return of Tim Cavanaro next week. Tim broke his leg in a non-hockey injury and was sidelined early on. The Stars will play against the Scituate Seahawks on Sunday, Oct. 23 at Hobomock.

SPORTS NOTES

Youth lacrosse registration begins Nov. 5

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the 2006 spring season on Saturday, Nov. 5 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the auditorium at Town Hall.

The early registration day – held simultaneously with Recreation basketball sign-ups – gives families the opportunity to save some money.

Registrants on Nov. 5 will get the 2005 spring season price of $140 for one player and $260 for two. Registrants after November 5 – and sign-ups will remain open through a second in-person sign-up day in January – will pay the 2006 price of $150 for one player and $275 for two.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). The 2006 season will mark the first time Cohasset has fielded a full-time team in the youngest age bracket for girls.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset participates in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, which does not keep standings or have playoffs. Every team makes several road trips per year, which be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Martha's Vineyard.

In addition, the program is hopeful of attending a jamboree near the end of its season, and is working to develop a special Memorial Day weekend program with teams visiting from out of state. The season ends with Cohasset's annual Family Day in June.

The youth program is likely to field 12 or more teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of that growth, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away.

"We will have this initial sign-up in November, then allow people to mail in registration forms up until our final sign-up at the high school in early January," says Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "At that point, we're likely to be at our ideal roster sizes, meaning there may be no late registration whatsoever."

Parents who can not attend the Nov. 5 registration can wait until Jan. 7 to do it in person at the second sign-up day or can contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. The season concludes in mid-June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Nov. 5 sign-up. If you need more information, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol .com.

Cohasset Recreation activities

Learn to ski program - Ragged Mountains

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with Buckles and boards Ski Shop of Marshfield announces registrations for a learn to ski/snowboard program, to be held, Tuesday, Nov. 8, from 3 to 6 p.m., at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 41 Highland Ave., Town Hall, Cohasset. Trips this year include Ragged Mountain, Mount Sunapee, and Bretton Woods.

The program will be open to all ages but children must be able to participate on their own. There will be an adult chaperone to assist; however, children must be able to function with minimal assistance ie: ages 7 and over.

The fee for this program is $269.99 per student, and rental information will be available at registration.

This year will be 5 Saturday trips starting in December through March 4, 2006. There will be four 1 1/2 hour lessons and 5 full day ski lift tickets included in the $269.99 package.

Cohasset Recreation/Boosters Basketball Registration 2005-2006

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's Basketball registrations will be held for boys and girls in grades 1 through 8, at the Town Hall, on Saturday, Nov. 5, from 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for the program is $75. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club (CBBC), shirt charge is included in the fee. Details on the Basketball Program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid any conflicts. The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Booster Club and the Recreation Department, providing youngsters with a teaching and recreational opportunity. Coaches and Sponsors are needed. You may sign-up at registration.

During this registration there will be registrations for Spring Lacrosse for grades 3-8.

CHS football on TV

Replays of the Cohasset High School football games can be seen on channel 10. Games are replayed every week at three different days and times: Wednesdays at 5:30 p.m., Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 8 p.m.

Baseball club looking for players

Henry's Baseball Club in Waltham is looking for players between the ages of 17 and 40 to play in its current fall ball league.

Games are played on Sunday's at 11 a.m. The club plays year-round, with a winter indoor league and spring competition also.

The club is also looking for coaches, helpers and volunteers. For more information or to sign up, call Henry at (781)891-0621.

Seadogs tryouts

The first in a series of clinic/tryout sessions for the nationally renown Seadogs/AAU Travel Team Baseball Program's 2006 season will be conducted Sept. 10-11 at fields in Braintree, Norwood and East Bridgewater.

The Seadogs will field seven teams in 2006:10-and-under through and including 16-and-under. Players are selected from a series of clinic/tryouts held throughout this fall. The cut-off day to determine proper age group for 2006 teams is July 31, 2006.

The 2005 Seadogs enjoyed their most successful season, highlighted by the 12-and-Under team's Silver Medal performance in the AAU National Championships.

2006 Seadogs Clinic/Tryouts Schedule

U10 - Oct. 29-30, 8-10:30 a.m. at SSBC, Hingham.

U11 - Oct. 29-30, 8-10:30 a.m. at SSBC.

U12 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at SSBC.

U13 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m-1:30 p.m. at SSBC

U14 - Oct. 29-30, 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at SSBC

U15 and U 16 - Oct. 29-30, 2-5 p.m. at SSBC

"We want every interested player to have a shot at making the roster, in addition to learning more about playing baseball at the clinic," SSBC director Frank Niles, Jr. said.

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships held all across the country.

The Seadogs program is intended to supplement, rather than replace, local Little League, Babe Ruth, or American Legion baseball programs.

For more information about SSBC or the Seadogs call 1-GO4-HITS/(781) 749-6466 or visit its Web site at www.ssbc.com.

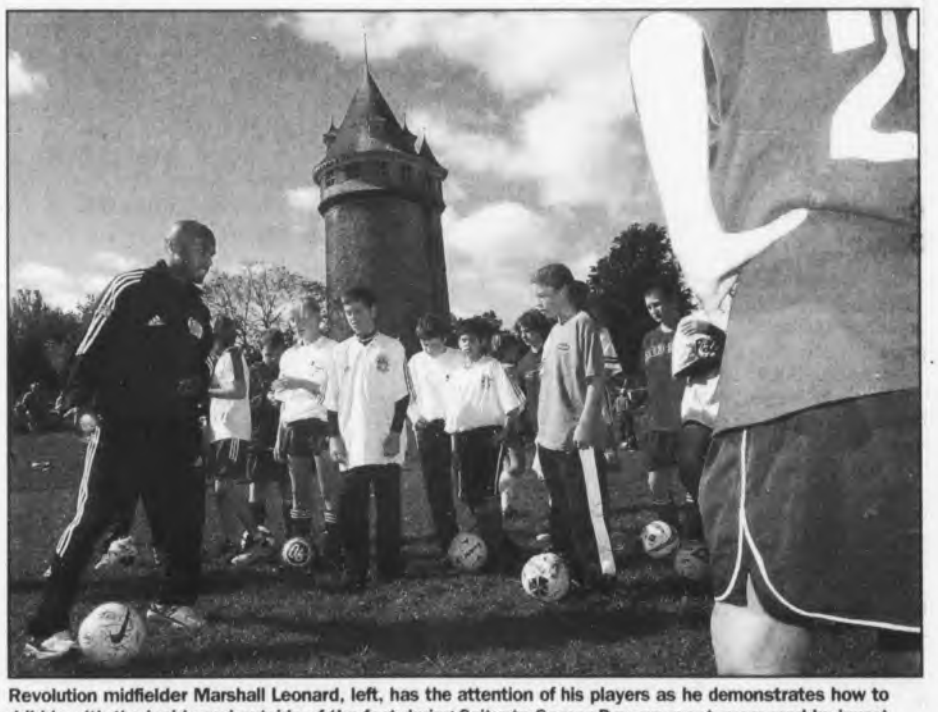
It may have been a good omen that, after a week's worth of downpours, the skies were clear Sunday morning.

Six New England Revolution players - Clint Dempsey, Taylor Twellman, Pat Noonan, Steve Ralston, Matt Reis and Marshall Leonard - were in town at Central Field for Scituate Soccer Day, sponsored by investment firm RBC Dain Rauscher in coordination with the Scituate Soccer Club.

The players conducted a free clinic that was open to players throughout the South Shore.



Bruce Addison, a consultant with RBC and long-time board member with the soccer club, said during Sunday's festivities that the goal is to hold an event involving Revolution players on an annual basis. Hundreds of South Shore youth players between ages 5-13 attended the event, a turnout that had led to optimism for that goal.

"We're ecstatic about the turnout," Addison said as the players signed autographs toward the end of the event. "This exceeded our expectations, without question."

The Revs in attendance signed autographs before and after the clinic, which featured each player leading a group of kids through various dribbling, passing and defending drills. Kids were split into six groups by age, with the players rotating from group to group.

Scituate High soccer players and coaches were also on hand to help lead the clinic.

"It was a good time," said Dave Nelson, co-captain for the SHS boys team. "The kids seemed to like it; they had fun seeing players from the Revolution."

Revolution midfielder Marshall Leonard, left, has the attention of his players as he demonstrates how to dribble with the inside and outside of the foot during Scituate Soccer Day, an event sponsored by investment firm RBC Dain Rauscher in conjunction with the Scituate Soccer Club.

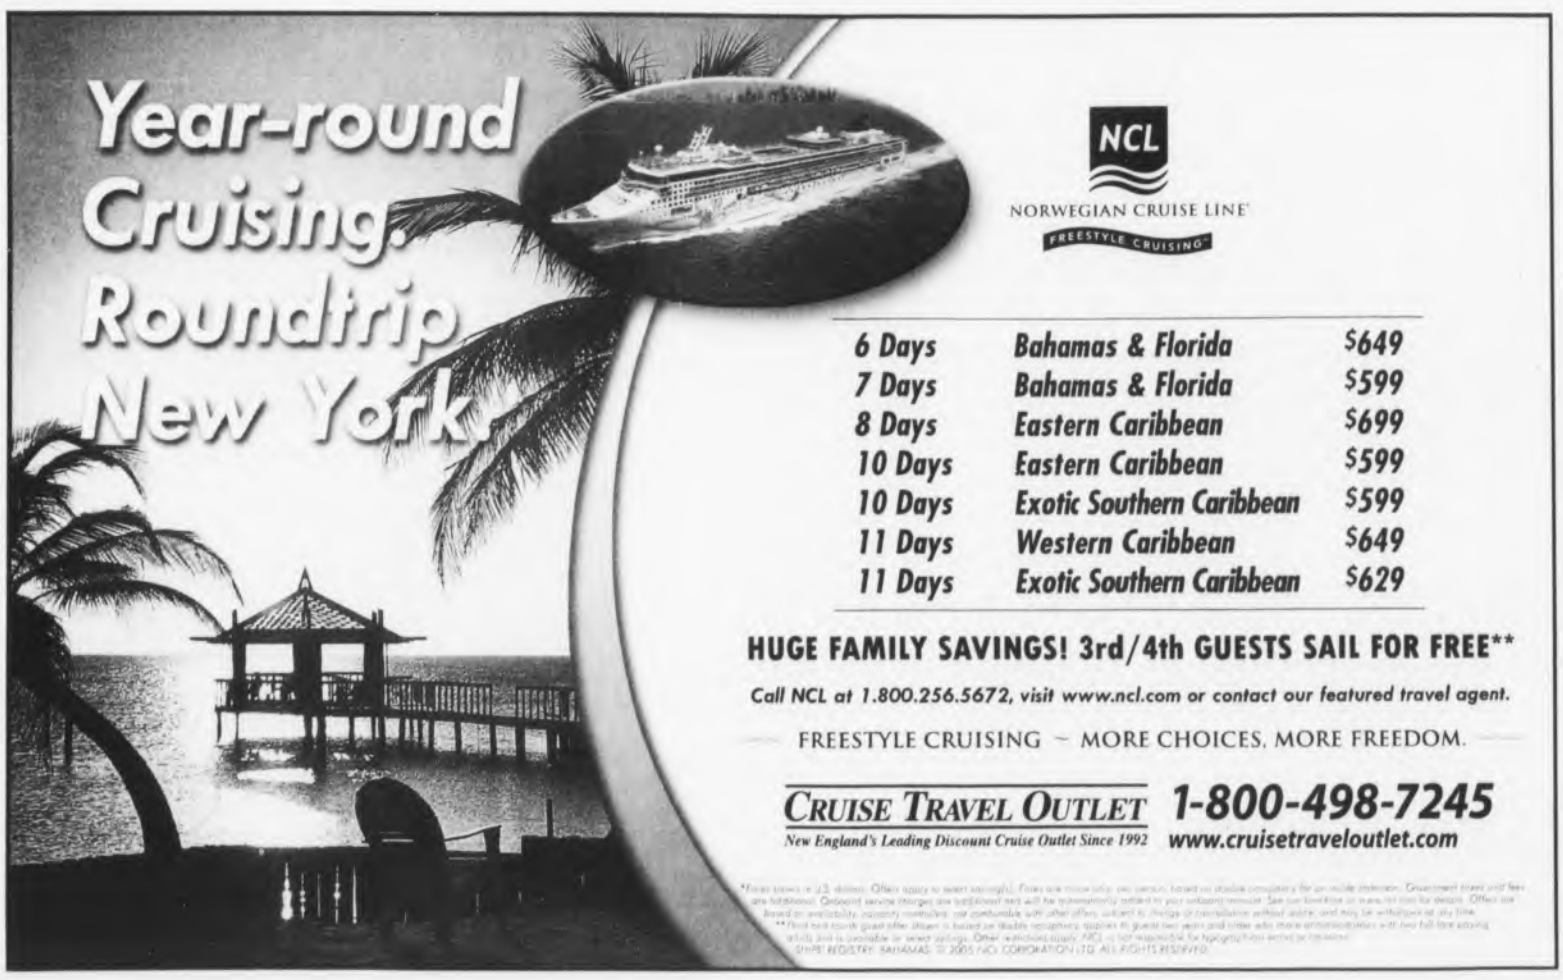
The Cohasset Mariner prides itself on its involvement with the community, in both realms of news and sports.

The Mariner sports page always welcomes contributions from the community, particularly in youth sports.



If there is a team or athlete that you feel deserves coverage, contact sports editor Mark Goodman at 781-837-4577.

You may also reach our sports department via email, at mgoodman@cnc.com.

Submissions from the community, both articles and photos, are also welcomed and encouraged.

It is the combination of high school and youth sports coverage that separates the CohassetMariner sports page from others in the area.

We look forward to continuing to work with the community to help make our sports page the best in the area, and we thank those who have already contributed so much in the past.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Spirit week at CMHS was a big success. From the looks of this photo – it must have been 70s day for the seniors.

CMHS wraps up a busy month

By Christopher Pescatore
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The month of October has been a very busy one for the Cohasset Middle High School. The following clubs have been making noise around the school and in the community.

At the end of September/start of October, the high school finally announced an advisor to the yearbook, Mrs. Derri Schwantner.

The editors of the award winning school newspaper, The Spinnaker, were voted on by the rest of The Spinnaker staff. The editors are…

- Directors of Advertisements and Sales: Steve Abrams, Shane Dorion, and Dave McKenna.
- Editors in Chief: Jessica Bilbo and Mia Lieb-Lappen.
- Editorial Editor: Mike Devlin.
- Executive Editor: Chelsea Grossman.
- Feature Editors: Kate Carpenter, Marissa Evans, and Cassie Rosano.
- Graphics and Design Editor: Patrick Bertovich.
- News Editors: Chris Pescatore and Daniel Sullivan.
- Sports Editors: Ben Libby and Will Pinkus.
- Senior copy Editor and Cartoonist – Zach Etkind

If anybody is interested in purchasing a subscription to The Spinnaker or is interested in purchasing an advertisement in The Spinnaker, please email us at Spinnaker@Cohassetk12.org.

The high school Student Council organized this year's Spirit Week for the entire High School for the week of Oct. 11-14. The themes for the days were as follows:

- Tuesday the 11th: Seniors – 70s Day, Rest of School – Backwards Day
- Wednesday the 12th: Seniors – Whatever Day, Rest of School – Pajama Day
- Thursday the 13th: Seniors – Safety Day, Rest of School – Tacky Day
- Friday the 14th: The entire school: Blue and White Day.

Spirit week turned out great and a large majority of the high school student body participated. The seniors won the total tally for people dressing up throughout the week. Spirit week culminated on Friday with the Homecoming Pep Rally in the gymnasium.

Each class decorated a section of the bleachers and cheered on the sports teams that were to participate in sports that weekend. Each sports team announced their games and gave some quick inspirational words. The Homecoming Court was also announced at the end of the Pep Rally. The four boys nominated to the court were: Brendon Barrett, Chris Ofsthun, Chris Pescatore, and Scott Wakefield. The five girls selected for the court were: Melissa Crawford, Katie DeWaal, Emilie Shea, Shevaughn White, and Katherine Whoriskey. The King and Queen for the 2006 class are Brendon Barrett and Emilie Shea.

The homecoming football game was also last Friday night, and Cohasset beat Mashpee 7-6 at home under the lights.

The homecoming dance was also sponsored by the Student Council, and it immediately followed the football game. The senior class superlatives were announced at the dance and there were a large number of people who attended.

The Cohasset Student Awareness Organization participated in the Making Strides for Breast Cancer six-mile walk around the Charles River on Sunday the 16th with advisor Mr. Scott Newkirk. Twenty-five students from the high school participated in the event.

Bully Busters is topic

Licensed school psychologist Alan Jacobson, Ph.D., will presents a lecture "Bully Busters - Managing your Child's School Environment" on – Friday, Nov. 4 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Library. He will discuss the nature of bullying from all perspectives. Emphasis on assisting children in dealing with a bullying situation. Focus paid to why children bully, who bullies are, likely targets, and empowering witnesses. Attention also given to helping the bullying child. The free lecture is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

As director of Bayview Associates, Dr. Jacobson runs a large out-patient program treating adults, children, and adolescents in individual, group and family therapy settings. His experience includes consulting to area schools and community groups for the past eight years. A columnist on mental health issues for the Patriot Ledger newspaper, Jacobson developed the noted "Bully Busters" workshop program.

For more information call Social Service League at 781-383-0771.

Dance at The Garage

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, Nov. 4, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone in grade 6 though 8 is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

Halloween Fair tradition continues

No matter what the costume, ghosts and goblins, princesses and pirates of all ages should get ready to take to the Cohasset Common on Sunday, Oct. 30. The annual South Shore Community Center Nursery School Halloween Fair steps off with its traditional costume parade at 2 p.m. Little ghosts and goblins will want to stay around until the fair's end at 4 p.m. to try their hand at enchanting games of skill and luck, the moonwalk, ghoulish games and new this year, a train ride around the duck pond. One lucky raffle winner may win a Bowling Party to be held at the Community Center. Tickets for activities are three for $1 and may be purchased at the fair. All proceeds benefit the South Shore Community Center Nursery School including its scholarship and other programs.

For more about the Halloween Fair or South Shore Community Center Nursery School, call 781-383-0036.

OBITUARIES

Alicia Eicoff-Shadley

Loving mother and wife

Alicia (Chase) Eicoff-Shadley of Abington died at home Oct. 12, 2005, surrounded by her family and friends, following a long illness.

Mrs. Eicoff-Shadley was a loving mother and wife, a devoted daughter and sister, and a loyal friend. She was a graduate of Cohasset High School and was pursuing her dream at Massasoit Community College to become an oncology nurse.

She enjoyed traveling, shopping, fine arts and her time at the beach.

She leaves her husband, Don Shadley of Abington; a son, Zackery Eicoff of Abington and Hingham; her mother, Elaine Chase of Cohasset; three sisters, Dana Dow of Cohasset, Vicky Williams of Cohasset and Costa Rica and Judy Salvaggi of Braintree; and many nieces and nephews.

A Memorial service will be held at 1 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 22, at Union Mission Chapel on Old Oaken Bucket Road in Scituate.

Christy J. Tarantino Sr.

U.S. Marine Corps Sgt.; Korean War veteran

Christy J. Tarantino, Sr. 76, of Scituate, died Oct. 1, 2005, at Citrus Memorial Hospital, Hernando, Fla., after a brief illness.

Born and raised in Newton, he graduated from Newton High School. Mr. Tarantino was a resident of Scituate since 1958, and since 1999 lived part-time in Citrus Hills, Fla.

He served as a Sergeant in the U.S. Marine Corps from 1947 to 1952 and was a veteran of the Korean War. After his military service, Mr. Tarantino received a bachelor of science degree in business from Northeastern University in Boston.

He was employed as an insurance salesman for Prudential Corporation. After retirement, he maintained his license and continued to sell insurance in Massachusetts, and real estate for Citrus Hills Realty in Citrus Hills, Fla.

Mr. Tarantino was a member of Hernando VFW Post 4252, VFW of Abington, and American Legion Post of Cohasset. He was also the founder of South Shore Singles. He enjoyed boating and the ocean, airplanes and tennis.

He leaves a son, Christy J. Tarantino, Jr. of Scituate, who is a Cohasset police officer; and two brothers, Michael Tarantino, and his wife Ellie of Hernando, Fla., and James Tarantino, and his wife Helen of California.

A Mass of Christian burial was held in St. Mary of the Nativity Church in Scituate. Interment is in St. Mary's Cemetery, Scituate.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to American Diabetes Association, 190 No. Main St., Natick, MA 01760

Religious traditions at Glastonbury Abbey

This seventh annual series of "Listening to Other Voices" has the theme of "Religion and the World We Live In." The title was motivated by the abundance of news items that were defined or interpreted by a religious perspective, from the Tsunami to stem cell research, from war to political elections, from creationism to end of life issues. Although religion can be polarizing among people, this year's speakers have found it to be inspirational in shaping their life's work and its potential to draw people together. The series will include presentations by speakers representing the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Buddhist and Muslim traditions. Each of us is asked to listen to these voices in dialogue with our own particular religious tradition.

This series continues Nov. 17, at 7:15 p.m. at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St., with Rabbi Samuel Chiel talking about "Judaism's Message of Hope To A Trouble World."

The remainder of the series includes:

- A Documentary — Produced by Rachel Antell, narrated by Dr. Diana Eck, featuring three women — Jan. 19, 2006 — "Acting on Faith: Women and New Religious Activism in America."
- Dr. Mohammad Dadrass and Westy Egmont — Feb. 16 — "One Nation? Under God."
- Tania Leontov — April 6 — "The Common Heart, and Inter-Religious Dialogue Lasting 21 Years."
- Margaret O'Brien Steinfels — May 4 — "Catholic Culture and American Culture."

Hingham Cemetery walking tour

A fall walking tour of historic Hingham Cemetery has been rescheduled to Sunday, Oct.23. Those interested should meet at the Hingham Bell Tower (next to the Old Ship Church) at 1 p.m.

Cemetery Director Lucinda Day will lead the tour, which includes the history of the cemetery dating from 1672, important cemetery monuments and notable burials, as well as social commentary. The cemetery's 150-yr-old arboretum consists of several hundred specimen trees, both native and exotic.

The tour will last about one-and-one-half hours and is open to the public. A $5 donation is requested, with no charge to those under 12. For further information call 781-749-4868.

IT'S HAPPENING

DTC to show 'The Crucible'

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's popular movie series continues Sunday, Oct. 30, at 5 p.m., with the showing of "The Crucible," in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Arthur Miller's "timeless tale of truth on trial" is set in 1692 during the Salem witchcraft trials and was written in 1953 in response to the House Un-American Activities hearings. The film version, produced in 1996, stars Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder, Paul Scofield and Joan Allen. Rated PG 13. Free admission. Filmgoers will also be exposed to some great company and interesting conversation. For more information call Agnes McCann, chairman, 781-383-0222 or visit www.cohasset-dems.org.

Walk the Litchfield property in Scituate

On Sunday, Oct. 23 at 1 p.m., Scituate's local land trust — the Maxwell Conservation Trust — is hosting a free walk of the "Litchfield Property," which will start from the home of the trust's co-founders, Cynde and Wayne Robbins, at 292 Clapp Road.

This 40 acre parcel is significant to Cohasset because it is located in the Aaron River Reservoir Watershed and is currently before the Community Preservation Committee in Scituate.

The Maxwell Trust purchased the Litchfield land late last year and has made a proposal to request CPC funds to help pay off the mortgage and secure the land. If successful, the Litchfield property will join the already protected 180 acres in that part of town and preserve an unfragmented forest of 220 acres.

In addition to its value to Scituate's and Cohasset's clean water supply, an unfragmented forest is essential to many species of wildlife, which cannot survive in segmented woodlands that are becoming increasingly common as the towns are developed.

Garry Van Wart, a Scituate resident and environmentalist, will lead walkers along a trail through the Litchfield property while pointing out native plants and wildlife. This section of the walk will take about an hour; some participants may choose to continue to walk for a further hour along the Carl Pipes Memorial Trail, which runs through the adjoining conservation land near Bates Lane.

Water for Haiti project auction

The Middle School Youth Group of St., Stephen's Episcopal Church is sponsoring a fund raising auction at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., on Saturday, Oct. 22, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. St. Stephen's mission is to provide an entire community in Haiti with a reliable source of pure drinking water. With the objective of purchasing a system that will treat 10,000 gallons of water per day. The fundraising target is $10,000.

Auctioneers are Rich Ofsthun and David Bigley. Refreshments will be served.

For Art Donations or questions, call either Jim Graham at 781-383-7082 or Beth Wheatley-Dyson at 781-383-1083, Assistant Rector, St., Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Shelter fundraiser tickets available

Tickets are now on sale for the Scituate Animal Shelter's Bark 'n Howl Ball, that will be held on Saturday, Oct. 29, at the River Club in Scituate from 7 p.m. to midnight. The evening will feature an extensive buffet, cash bar and dancing to the lively music of The Gathering. There will also be a silent and live auction. Tickets are $125 each ($100 is tax deductible) and all proceeds benefit the 3A Farm Fund.

The shelter is currently working with various town boards and Scituate town meeting to gain permission to relocate to the 3A Farm at the corner of Route 3A and Mann Lot Road. A new 2,500 square foot facility will be built to accommodate the growing area need to help stray, homeless, injured, and surrendered companion animals from Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

Tickets are limited and available at the Shelter on the Driftway in Scituate, and at Daylily, 707 Main St. in Norwell Center, Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset, Sylvia's by the Sea in Scituate Harbor, and Brewed Awakenings in Hingham Center. Reserved tables and sponsorships are available.

Tickets and more information may also be obtained by calling the shelter at 781-545-8703. Hours are Monday to Friday, 4 to 6 p.m., and Saturday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit www.town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter

Buttonwood Books' Grub Street South will hold a panel discussion on submitting short stories to literary journals, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 7 p.m., at Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A. Editors from three literary journals will discuss the topic: Submitting a Story to Literary Journals – What do Editors Seek in a Short Story? Publications represented by the panelists are "Agni," "Night Train," and "Portrait."

"Agni" calls Boston University home and is supported by the graduate Creative Writing Program. They publish poetry, short fiction and essays. "Night Train" is a print literary journal that debuted in the fall of 2002. They publish all types of stories but prefer those with an edge. "Portrait" selects the works of one author and one visual artist, and places them together. They focus on portraiture as a genre.

Admission is free. Reservations are requested. Call 781-383-2665. Manuscripts will not be allowed.

Fall HLCT walk set for Oct. 29

A walking tour of the Lower Weir River area will be the focus of a walk on Saturday, Oct. 29 at 1 p.m. sponsored by the Hingham Land Conservation Trust. The walk is free and open to the public.

The Fall HLCT walk will take a closer look at the history which divides the salt water and fresh water habitats of the Weir River watershed. Visitors will view new proposals for Foundry Pond habitats, old quarries and seldom seen areas of the upper estuary.

The walk will be led by Faith Burbank and Kirk Shiltz of the Weir River Watershed Association.

The meeting place will be at the Foundry Pond parking lot behind 101 Kilby St. in Hingham at 12:45 p.m. Participants are asked to wear comfortable walking shoes and a bring a water bottle. The walk is not suited for small children.

For more information, please call 781-740-0529.

Boston audiences invited to spend 'Tuesdays' with Gould

Stage production of Mitch Albom's best seller comes to Colonial

The character of retired sociology professor Morrie Schwartz in the stage version of "Tuesdays with Morrie," now at Boston's Colonial Theatre, is one that actor Harold Gould can relate to on several levels.

"I like Morrie a lot. Like him, I'm a teacher and I'm also Jewish," Gould explained last week by telephone from his home in southern California. "For some in the academic world, sociology is not considered to be a rigorous science. That may be true, but Morrie must have been a very charismatic guy even if he wasn't the deepest of thinkers. The genius of his insights and how he refined the things he learned in life and passed them along are really what this story is all about."

The autobiographical story of career-driven sportswriter Mitch Albom and his regular visits with his amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS)-stricken former Brandeis University professor Morrie Schwartz became a runaway best-seller not long after it was first published in book form in 1997. The story was made into a made-for-television movie in 1999 with Hank Azaria as Albom and Jack Lemmon as Schwartz. It has been adapted for the stage by Albom and Jeffrey Hatcher, with this production being directed by Michael Montel.

The 81-year-old Gould — who earned a Ph.D. in theater at Cornell — taught dramatic literature at the University of California at Riverside for 10 years, before deciding to pursue an acting career full-time. "In 1959, I left academia for a year to try my luck as an actor. And 45 years later, I'm still at it. I still miss the intellectual stimulation of life on a college campus, but I loved acting too much to go back to teaching."

Audiences have loved Gould, too, on television as Rhoda Morgenstern's father on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and the spin-off "Rhoda" and, more recently, as Rose Nylund's boyfriend, Miles, on "The Golden Girls," and in feature films like the recent remake of "Freaky Friday" starring Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan. Gould may be best-known for his roles on the big and small screens, but the stage is where he says has always been most comfortable.

"I have always felt that theater is in a way a teaching mechanism. I feel it is my function to bring along an audience in an experience I'm going through on-stage."

In the case of "Tuesdays with Morrie," the audiences come ready for the ride." Morrie looks at his own suffering through tears, sentimentality and his own innate toughness. The story is so familiar to so many people that our audiences come prepared for full-throated participation. They have heard these tones and experienced these characters' attitudes before. It is almost like they're visiting with family, sharing tears and laughter."

"Tuesdays with Morrie" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Oct. 30. For tickets and more information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadway-acrossamerica.com..

Boston audiences invited to spend 'Tuesdays' with Gould

Stage production of Mitch Albom's best seller comes to Colonial

The character of retired sociology professor Morrie Schwartz in the stage version of "Tuesdays with Morrie," now at Boston's Colonial Theatre, is one that actor Harold Gould can relate to on several levels.

"I like Morrie a lot. Like him, I'm a teacher and I'm also Jewish," Gould explained last week by telephone from his home in southern California. "For some in the academic world, sociology is not considered to be a rigorous science. That may be true, but Morrie must have been a very charismatic guy even if he wasn't the deepest of thinkers. The genius of his insights and how he refined the things he learned in life and passed them along are really what this story is all about."

The autobiographical story of career-driven sportswriter Mitch Albom and his regular visits with his amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS)-stricken former Brandeis University professor Morrie Schwartz became a runaway best-seller not long after it was first published in book form in 1997. The story was made into a made-for-television movie in 1999 with Hank Azaria as Albom and Jack Lemmon as Schwartz. It has been adapted for the stage by Albom and Jeffrey Hatcher, with this production being directed by Michael Montel.

The 81-year-old Gould — who earned a Ph.D. in theater at Cornell — taught dramatic literature at the University of California at Riverside for 10 years, before deciding to pursue an acting career full-time. "In 1959, I left academia for a year to try my luck as an actor. And 45 years later, I'm still at it. I still miss the intellectual stimulation of life on a college campus, but I loved acting too much to go back to teaching."

Audiences have loved Gould, too, on television as Rhoda Morgenstern's father on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and the spin-off "Rhoda" and, more recently, as Rose Nylund's boyfriend, Miles, on "The Golden Girls," and in feature films like the recent remake of "Freaky Friday" starring Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan. Gould may be best-known for his roles on the big and small screens, but the stage is where he says has always been most comfortable.

"I have always felt that theater is in a way a teaching mechanism. I feel it is my function to bring along an audience in an experience I'm going through on-stage."

In the case of "Tuesdays with Morrie," the audiences come ready for the ride." Morrie looks at his own suffering through tears, sentimentality and his own innate toughness. The story is so familiar to so many people that our audiences come prepared for full-throated participation. They have heard these tones and experienced these characters' attitudes before. It is almost like they're visiting with family, sharing tears and laughter."

"Tuesdays with Morrie" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Oct. 30. For tickets and more information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com..

LISTEN To Life

HEARING IN TANDEM

In cases where applicable, fitting a hearing instrument in each ear provides the most natural hearing. A binaural fitting enables selective listening to be more easily achieved -the listener's brain can focus on the conversation he or she wants to hear and the amount of unwanted background noises are more easily reduced. Binaural hearing also allows listeners to better identify the direction of sound. This ability, called localization, allows the listener to hear from which direction conversation is coming. Localization also enables listeners to better determine the origin point of sirens and other audible warning signals. And, wearing two instruments generally requires less volume than one instrument alone, resulting in less distortion and better production of amplified sound.

We believe an unaddressed hearing loss is more noticeable than a hearing aid, and we urge you to get help if your hearing isn't what it once was. Our methods at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER include using the most sophisticated technology available today in the hearing industry. This, in tandem with the astonishing hearing aids now manufactured and our professionalism and personal attention to your needs, ensures your complete satisfaction with your hearing devices. We'll determine the best approach to your hearing impairment when you have your hearing evaluated at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. Binaural hearing generally renders conversation more comprehensible.

Barbecue Kansas City Style

By BILL BROTHERTON

KANSAS CITY, MO. -- Six plump, juicy, sizzling sausages sit on a tray in front of me. How the heck am I going to eat these things? In the last two hours I've consumed nearly three pounds of smoked meat -- barbecued chicken, pork, brisket and, of course, ribs.

Every bite has been scrumptious. But, man, am I full!

Such is the daunting task facing the judges at the 26th annual American Royal Barbecue Contest, the World Series of Barbecue, or as one contestant put it, "What Daytona is to NASCAR."

It's the largest such competition in the United States; nearly 500 teams, including a foursome from France, are competing for $80,000 in prize money and coveted blue ribbons.

So, what am I, a lifelong New Englander who eats about one pound of red meat a year, doing here? Yes, I'm stuffing my chubby face and bulging tummy with tender, tasty, heavenly meat. Yes, I've popped an extra couple of Lipitor tablets to combat the rivers of cholesterol that are no doubt surging through my bloodstream. But does that mean I'm qualified to serve as judge? Of course I am. This ain't rocket science: Something either tastes good or tastes great. (OK, being a visiting journalist helped.)

And you certainly don't have to be a judge to enjoy this event, which has developed a reputation after having been featured on the Food Network. Dining on Kansas City barbecue is listed in the book "101 Things to Do Before You Die," which, given the amount of food I've devoured, might happen sooner than expected.

This is how the judging thing works. I've been assigned to Table 4, with five other judges. I'm sandwiched between Rosie Karr of Riverside, Calif., and Jim Bickson of Kansas City, both of whom have plenty of experience weighing the pros and cons of barbecued meat. Thank God!

Our table captain appears bearing six Styrofoam containers, each holding a sample of a contestant's barbecue. First up is chicken, which we judge on appearance. We then grab a piece from each container, place it on a tray in front of us, and eat, judging each on taste and tenderness.

A hard-at-work contestant

Between entries, we cleanse our palates with Saltines and bottled water.

I've been told in no uncertain terms that it's not up to me to determine which barbecue entry is the best. I'm to simply judge each entry on its own merits, using a scale of one (yucky) to nine (orgasmically delicious). "It's like being a figure skating judge," advises one longtime participant, "and don't forget that nobody likes those East German judges who give low scores just because they're in a bad mood."

Bickson explains, "The stuff we get to eat today has been babied all night." He's been a judge for 20 years, so he should know. "They give us what they think is the best of their best. No way could you buy this kind of stuff.

"I've had barbecue all over the United States and in pubs in England . . . and Kansas City has the best. You bet it does, my boy," Bickson continued, adjusting his Missouri Tigers ball cap and placing a napkin over his Kansas City Chiefs sweatshirt.

Today is serious business. The night before was all about partying. Some 100,000 revelers invaded the 4 1/2-block area in Kansas City's historic West Bottoms section surrounding the Kemper Arena to eat barbecue, drink beer, listen to music and have a rousing good time.

American Royal Barbeque

Checking out the goods

The competing teams rent space, where they set up the cooker and create a little home away from home. Some of the larger groups erect enormous white tents, charging $10 or $15 for entry, entitling partygoers to all the barbecue, sides, beer and soda they can stomach. All proceeds go to various charities.

Trailers and recreational vehicles are parked everywhere. And the cooking equipment -- cookers, not grills -- is mighty impressive. Brian Richard of Kansas City has one shaped like an airplane. "This is the meat missile," he says. "It took a year to build and it has a rotisserie inside." The gregarious Richard has been competing for 15 years and says the K.C. event is the "granddaddy of them all."

"In Kansas City, barbecue is like a religion," he explained.

Ralph Taylor of Pink Flamingo BBQ traveled from Arkansas to compete. His team finished seventh overall. "It's a hobby gone wild. You start out with a little grill, and you win your first ribbon. Now I have lots of trophies and it's out of control. Thank goodness my wife and two sons do it with me." Several trophies compete for space on his small asphalt lot with the requisite plastic pink flamingos and a sign that says "We're cheap, we're tacky and you don't want us in your yard!"

Some of the team names are inspired: "Let's Kick Some Ash," "Beer, It's What's For Dinner" and "Beverly Grillbillies."

What a gas! I mean, charcoal. No gas allowed. Smoke and the smell of barbecue permeate your hair and clothes here and a fragrant smog envelops the area.

Richard Sinnett, head of the Always Rubbin' Somethin' team, is hosting about 400 people in his tent. He's dressed in a toga, as are a handful of his 400 guests. The Kansas City resident has gone through 1,000 pounds of ice, 300 pounds of pork and 250 pounds of mouth-watering ribs. Sinnett says he and his crew spent about $6,000 to compete and party. A drop in the bucket, he says. Some of the corporate competitors think nothing of forking over $20,000 to $30,000.

Sinnott drags me over to his jet-black cooker. "Weeks and weeks of planning went into this. It's a labor of love. We never grill the meat. We're smoking the meat with indirect heat. See, the charcoal is way off to the side, here." The gauge indicates the temperature is 225 degrees. "The secret is in the wood. Hickory and mesquite leave a bitter taste. I use cherrywood. It sweetens up the meat and adds more flavor." It takes 7 to 8 hours to slow-cook ribs, 14 hours to smoke a beef brisket.

But it's worth it.

Growing the bottom line

Citgo station and Teen Garage eyed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset needs to generate more revenue. To that end, an economic development committee has been appointed and ideas are already in the pipeline which could help jump-start the town's commercial tax base.

The committee, which includes chairman Peter Brown, members Chuck Hurd, Tom Powers, and Gabriel Gomez, and ex-officio members Mike Westcott of the planning board and Mary Granville and Elsa Miller (who serves as an alternate) of the board of assessors, has already begun looking at potential ways to increase the town's commercial and industrial tax base. After 12 weeks, the committee will present its recommendations to the board of selectmen, which will decide what action, if any, it wants to take.

"We are in fact-finding mode right now," said Brown at the committee's meeting Tuesday, adding the group is working hard to ensure potential options are not left unexplored. He said the committee has been working with other groups in town to share ideas, and will continue to contact other groups which have expertise as ideas surface, and so far, things are off to a great start.

One of the key areas of exploration for the committee includes taking a look at all the undeveloped parcels of land along Rte. 3A and the downtown area, or those parcels which are underdeveloped and their use could be expanded. Gomez has been looking into soliciting and obtaining new businesses, from startups to small companies, which could potentially be located in town. In addition, marketing the town to companies which might not know Cohasset could be a potential site for their small business will also be explored.

School surplus under scrutiny

Override need is questioned

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Officials on the town side of government don't want to see a repeat performance of recent actions regarding the school department budget. Although pre-payment of special education out-of-district tuitions is a practice Supt. Denise Walsh said she has done many times before, it is one that did not sit well with selectmen and the advisory board.

Walsh was literally in the hot seat Monday night, as the advisory committee, selectmen and several citizens spent more than an hour trying to understand how the school department has $190,600 left over from fiscal 2005, after an override and many additions to that year's budget had been long touted as not being enough.

"Did you really need the $360,000 that you asked the town for? I fully supported the override, but why did we vote for it?"
— Tucker Glavin, advisory committee

Fiscal 2005 saw a $400,000 override for the school department, (passed at the March 2004 Annual Town Meeting), as well as an additional $160,500 ($93,500 for utilities and $67,000 for unemployment) added to the budget at the November 2004 Special Town Meeting. In addition, the April 2005 Annual Town Meeting allocated another $100,000 to the school budget as well as $100,000 to the reserve fund to cover any additional fiscal 2005 expenses which might crop up, as the school department had said it was in dire straits.

However, on Sept. 22, the school committee met and approved a Warrant — or finale-

Cedarmere's Westerly House to hold the affordable condos

Eligibility follows state guidelines

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Building permits have not yet been issued for the proposed 105-unitCedarmere senior housing development, but Leggat McCall Properties is already getting the word out regarding the specifics of the development. While the majority of the units on the property will be luxury condominiums located in single or two-family residences, there will be two multi-family buildings located next to each other on the site.

Affordable housing is a hot topic in town and Cedarmere has plans for 27 units of affordable ownership housing located in one of the multi-family buildings, dubbed the Westerly House. At least 21 of the affordable units will be two-bedroom units. The Westerly House will also house four market-rate ownership units. A second multi-family building dubbed the Manor House will house 14 units of market rate ownership housing.

The Westerly House will have common facilities, including an exercise room, common living room, a function room with a kitchen and men's and women's restrooms. All facilities within the Westerly House will be used only by its unit owners.

The market-rate units in the Manor House will have an underground garage and common facilities, including an exercise room, common living room, function room with catering kitchen, and men's and women's restrooms. All facilities within the Manor House will be used only by the owners of the Manor House units.

Each condominium will have its own budget and cover its own expenses. To the extent either condominium elects to provide extra services such as additional landscaping or concierge service, or create additional amenities within its respective common

Forest Avenue sidewalk upgrade

Tanna Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road, read a prepared statement to selectmen during the public comment period at their Oct 18 meeting expressing concerns over potholes and lack of sidewalks along Forest Avenue.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the issue is the top priority. He said state highway aid, dubbed Chapter 90 funds, would be used to improve drainage at Heather Drive and Forest Avenue; finish the balance of the Forest Avenue sidewalk; and repave the street.

"Virtually all Chapter 90 funds will be devoted to this project," he said. "Other than the downtown revitalization, this will be the project in town and we are devoting all the public works money we have."

Carlson said it was an issue of public safety, fairness and civic pride.

"Please cleanup Forest Avenue, we as taxpayers deserve this," she said.

Clock is ticking for the Cook Estate

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Deer Hill Partners has until the close of business Friday (today) to decide if it still wants to move forward and build the Cook Estate project.

Town Manager Bill Griffin told selectmen Monday, in Town Counsel's opinion, the town may not extend the closing date for the property beyond the maximum extension of Jan. 15, 2006 set by the Cook heirs, or it will be violating state procurement law. That means Deer Hill Partners — the developer chosen to build on the Cook site — would be under a tight schedule to secure all permits, which includes obtaining a special permit from the planning board.

A special permit alone could take as much as nine months, not to mention coming before the other town boards, which makes the January deadline a near impossible feat.

To ensure the town does not break the state's procurement law, the selectmen have agreed to send a letter to Deer Hill Partners asking it to commit to closing on the property by the set deadline. Deer Hill Partners must respond one way or another today (Friday).

During discussion, selectman Ralph Dormitzer said in the event the town receives a withdrawal from Deer Hill Partners, it should immediately go to the runner-up, Cohasset Associates and ask if that company believes it would be possible to close in that timeframe. If that company declines, he said the town should then approach the third place bidder, Northland Residential. The selectmen agreed that would be the best course of action.

"I'm concerned if we don't get the LDA (land disposition agreement) signed or we don't buy it (Cook property) we could potentially be out a minimum of $20,000, not including the $200,000 deposit or out of pocket expenses," said selectman Rob Spofford.

Griffin explained if all three companies withdraw, the town will have the option to try to purchase the property outright from the heirs of the estate and then try to work with a developer on its own to bring the project to fruition. He said he has asked Town Counsel to draft an article for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting just in case it is needed, which would allow voters to decide whether the town should purchase the Cook land from the trustees of the estate.

However, the Special Town Meeting is scheduled for Dec. 5, which means the town would need to at least secure one and possibly two one-month extensions for $20,000 each. The town has already opted for two extensions which will take the project through Nov. 15. If the town decided it did not want to purchase the property and the town had to back out of the deal, it would lose any money spent on extensions, which at that point would likely be $60,000, the $200,000 deposit, and money spent for consultants and due diligence which is currently close to $300,000. However, if the town gives the OK to purchase the property from the Cooks, the money spent for extensions will go toward the purchase price of the property as will the deposit. The town will also not lose money if a developer is able to close by Jan. 15.

In an interview early Thursday morning, Cohasset resident George McGoldrick of Deer Hill Partners said he had just returned to town and had not yet seen the letter, but expected it would be in his office waiting for him and he would promptly reply to the town. However, he did say he has been working hard with the town to bring the project to fruition and looks forward to continuing to do so.

Background on the Cook Estate

After two hours of discussion, voters at the November 2003 Annual Town Meeting approved the purchase of the Cook land, located on Sohier Street, for $4.5 million, to be marketed to developers with the town's adjacent land, with the intention of selling the parcels together for a profit. However, problems arose with wastewater disposal and plans changed.

Northland Residential was awarded the original bid on the project in March 2004, and soil tests conducted soon after determined wastewater from 95-units of housing - the maximum number of units the original Request For Proposals asked for - could not be handled on site and other options would need to be looked into. The RFP dictated what the town would like to see built on the site.

Northland spent a good deal of money and put in countless man hours helping the town come up with wastewater solutions. Soil testing was done on site, holes were dug at both the South Shore Music Circus and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to determine whether off-site leaching fields would be a possibility at either location, and the possibility of municipal sewer was also pursued. However, in the end the only alternative found was to downsize the project, as fewer units would generate a smaller amount of wastewater, which could be accommodated on site. However, with the change in scope of the project, the board of selectmen said it would be necessary to begin a new bid process pursuant to Massachusetts procurement laws.

Three companies were interviewed in the second bid phase and their proposals were ranked according to a point scale. Deer Hill Partners came out on top, followed by Cohasset Associates, owned by Cohasset resident Donald Staszko, then Northland Residential.

Deer Hill's project does include affordable housing, but the units are not rentals, which has caused some controversy around town. Some residents feel the whole purpose for working with the Cook heirs to build senior housing on the site was to fulfill a need for affordable rental housing for seniors. There has been a lobbying effort by some to try to change the vote or build additional rental senior housing on a piece of town property adjacent to the Cook property which was going to be left as open space.

But the controversy does not stop there. Cohasset Associates has threatened to sue the town if the board of selectmen does not rescind its vote to appoint Deer Hill Partners and appoint it to build instead, as it says both the Request for Proposals, and the Town Meeting vote which authorized the purchase of the property as well as procurement laws have been violated. While a law suit is not yet in place, the town has been working with Special Counsel to remedy the situation.

A story in the Friday, Oct. 14 issue of the Mariner lists Doug Eymer and Bob Parisi as the Cohasset residents starting a new joint-business clothing design venture. The story should have said Doug Eymer and Bill Patsos. The clothing line is being designed by Eymer and his wife Selene Carlo-Eymer, and marketed by Patsos.

A story in last week's Mariner indicated the Cohasset public schools have a low ratio of computers to students. The story should have said the schools have a very low ratio of students to computers. The Mariner regrets the errors.

Schools have safety plan in place

Public forum provides update

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset schools have had, do have, and will continue to have a school safety plan.

That was the message delivered to roughly 200 concerned citizens Thursday (Oct. 20) at a community forum in the middle-high school auditorium called to address the school department's response to a series of threats that have disrupted the normal school routine in recent weeks.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed, who served as forum moderator, encouraged questions.

"You have every right to question the preparedness of your town," Koed said. "Open lines of communication have never been as important as they are now."

"Open lines of communication have never been as important as they are now."
— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

The forum, which ran close to two hours, included presentations from Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh, Police Chief James Hussey, and the principals from the middle-high, Deer Hill and Osgood schools.

The text of the notes and specific details of the four separate threats have not been made public but what is known is that two involved bomb threats; another was a note with a bullet attached; and still another talked about bringing a gun to school.

Walsh, the superintendent, explained the school safety plan that was put in place in 2001, which includes certain protocols to be followed in response to individual incidents that may arise, continues to be updated.

"What the school safety plan sets into motion depends on the incident's time, its severity and resources available," she said.

Walsh said with Sunday's incident when a note [about a gun] was discovered at 9a .m. by a teacher and students who met to carpool at the school, there was enough time to thoroughly search the building before school the next day. But she said additional input was needed from teachers prior to opening the school Monday so it made sense to delay school two hours.

She said Tuesday when another note [about a bomb] was found in the wee hours of the morning with information about a specific area of the school, it was impossible to do a thorough check that night. "It was decided we could not open school," she said.

"We have a chain of command and look at all the ingredients and make a decision based on the facts we have at hand," Walsh said.

Middle-high school principal Joel Antolini introduced himself as the "face behind the voice" that families have received so many phone calls from. The schools are using new technology, dubbed Connect-Ed, through which they can send a recorded telephone message out to all families simultaneously.

Antolini explained that all threats are taken seriously. He also noted the school safety plan is under constant review. After each incident, it is evaluated as to what worked well and what did not.

He said searches have literally involved crawling between the dropped ceiling and the girders, cutting locks off lockers, and looking in all classrooms and common areas. "In every instance, we have found nothing," he said.

Because of the potential that a device or weapon could be stashed in a book bag or backpack, those have been banned from the school. Pocketbooks and lunch bags may also be searched, as well as individual students. The searches are conducted by teachers and staff, not police.

Antonlini said searches and banning backpacks act as a deterrent. "A student trying to conceal a weapon might think twice," he said. There has also been an assembly at both the middle school and high school to address student concerns. He said students are also encouraged to seek counseling and faculty is being trained to recognize students who have high anxiety and stress.

'We are trying the best we can in our world today to ensure safety of students and staff," he said.

Police have arrested at 13-year-old seventh grader in connection with the two bomb threats. His name is not being released because of his age, although several parents at Thursday's forum said publicly they knew who the boy was and described him as disruptive and a troublemaker.

Antolini said federal law restricts him for talking about the student, who has the right for due process. A suspension hearing is in process and the student has not returned to school, he said.

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley and Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan said although the threats did not target their schools, security has still been increased. All entrances and exits are locked and there has been increased vigilance by faculty and staff when students arrive and are dismissed. Policy regarding visitors to the schools is also being tightened up with visitors not only signing in but wearing passes.

Hussey, the police chief, explained Cohasset detectives were still working diligently on the cases. "We've brought closure to a couple [bomb threats] and we're still working on a couple," he said.

He cautioned the audience not to expect immediate results, noting the backed-up crime labs can take up to a month to process requests. "This is not a 45-minute TV show where everything is resolved by the end of the day," he said.

Hussey said Cohasset police seek help with investigations from outside agencies when needed. "In these situations, there has not been a lot of evidence at the scene," he said, noting police have collected whatever was left behind.

Regarding the arrest of the 13-year-old, Hussey said two small bits of information that came in the form of tips gave police enough to go on. "It put us over the hump so we could go out and do an interrogation of the suspect with the parent."

Hussey said it's critical that students, who may have information, come forward and talk to an adult.

"This has upset the entire community," he said, adding people have to put the term "tattletale" aside. He said those behind these crimes need to be identified because they are in need of serious help.

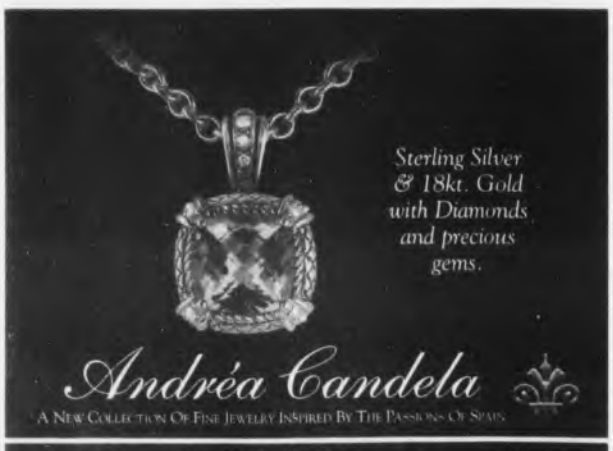
"That's what integrity and strict morals are all about, stepping up to the plate," he said.

Walsh said going forward the school department is looking at better security including better camera surveillance systems, lighting plans for the exterior of the schools, and more education about identifying at-risk youngsters. She also said a police officer, serving as a resource officer "someone who is truly involved and knowledgeable about children in the school" needs to be permanently assigned to the schools. Custodial and secretarial staffing also needs to be examined.

CEA requests names of local servicemen

Cohasset senior veterans would like to send notes to current servicemen. If anyone knows of a young man or woman who would like to receive a note, please contact the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs at (781) 383-9112 on or before Nov. 7.

CEA is hosting a veterans' brunch



All veterans are invited to attend a free catered brunch Thursday, Nov. 10 from 10 a.m. until noon, sponsored by the Cohasset Elder Affairs office.

Please send a photo of yourself (or other memorabilia) while you were in service to be displayed at the brunch. Photos may be mailed to the CEA, located in the Community Center building at 3 North Main Street, or dropped off. After the brunch, retired veterans will be asked to write a note to servicemen currently serving our country. The CEA will provide note paper and stamps.

To make brunch reservations or for more information, please call the CEA at (781) 383-9112.

Cohasset has 458 veterans or roughly 6 percent of the population.

Forum raises more questions

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Some parents may have left last week's forum on the recent school threats with a sense of frustration.

The school administration stated that by law, details about the student responsible for two recent bomb threats and whatever punishment might be meted out has to remain confidential.

Police arrested a 13-year-old seventh-grader last week in connection with the bomb threats.

One mother said times have certainly changed.

"I graduated in 1984 and in the early 80s this would not have been tolerated," she said. "If you pulled the fire alarm at school you were suspended on the spot. What's changed?"

While he said he shared the parents' concerns, middle-high school Principal Joel Antolini explained that over the past 20 years, individual student rights have come under more scrutiny. He said he was restricted in what he could share other than to say he was following a suspension process that would involve a hearing.

Police have not found those responsible for leaving two other threatening notes indicating guns would be brought to school.

Knowing another perpetrator or perpetrators are still at-large, Meg Bertolami asked about specific information in the threats.

"A lot of kids don't want to say how scared they are."
— Larry Lieberman, parent

She said she didn't feel totally safe sending her daughter to school without complete information about what the threats were. "I would like to see the note published," she said.

Police Chief James Hussey said the notes would not be made public. He explained the 13-year-old that was arrested has been implicated in two notes involving bomb threats that prompted thorough searches of the school. He said the other note indicating someone might bring a gun to school did not target any specific person but also prompted added security measures. He said the first incident last May involved a note with a bullet attached.

One parent asked why the FBI hadn't been called in to help with the investigation. Hussey said Cohasset police routinely seek outside assistance when required. He said he has a contact in the FBI that he has spoken with.

Larry Lieberman, a father, suggested school administrators and counselors meet with students in small groups to hear their concerns. He said classroom-size groups are too big and doubted students would feel comfortable sharing their feelings in that setting. "A lot of kids don't want to say how scared they are," he said.

Although the identity of the 13-year-old has not been made public, several parents, who spoke apparently knew who he was. They described him as disruptive and a trouble maker.

However, Andrew Quigley stated – with that being said – "it takes a village to raise a child" and he hoped the community would do all it could to help the boy.

Ann Stenbeck asked how the schools balance the rights of students, who may have problems and are included in the regular classroom, with the rights of the other students. Antolini described the question as "challenging." Although he was careful to state he was speaking in general terms and not about the 13-year-old, he said the schools do what they can for every child, particularly those on Individual Education Plans or IEPs. [IEPs are developed to help children with special needs].

"When do the needs of one override the needs of many – it's a societal question," Antolini said.

Editor's note: During the forum it was difficult to clearly hear the names of each parent who asked questions. Therefore, some people quoted in the story are not identified by name.

Griffin breaks down legal fees

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Finding ways to decrease legal fees is a concern the board of selectmen will likely carry through fiscal 2006. While expenses with Deutsch Williams — the firm that serves as Town Counsel — caused some concern during last year's budget, a recent report of legal expenses compiled by Town Manager Bill Griffin through Sept. 30 shows fiscal 2006 is following in the same footsteps.

The fiscal year is only three months along, and the town is showing figures that are $2,907 less than last year's fees paid to Deutsch Williams, which is good news. However, payments to the firm already total more than $37,000.

To date, the most money has been spent on legal fees dealing with planning board cases. Two outstanding cases this year have cost the town $7,206 and $6,002 respectively, for a total planning board legal bill of $13,208.

Labor matters and conservation commission matters both generated legal fees in the $5,000 range. Police union negotiations made up a good portion of the labor charges at $3,619. Two lawsuits made up the bulk of the conservation commission charges, which together total $4,979. Together, the labor and conservation total legal fees are $10,406.

Real estate matters and board of health cases each total roughly $4,000. Charges to mitigate the James Lane easement came in at roughly $2,576, while miscellaneous real estate matters cost $1,733. While there have been many issues with the Cook Estate property this fiscal year, charges relating to it only total $544. All real estate costs together total $4,853. There were two board of health cases which combined total $4,694.

The remaining charges affecting the town are zoning board matters which total $3,499.

At this time last year, the town had accumulated $40,578 in legal fees.

Democrats kick off forum series

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee announces the commencement of a series of forums to discuss the many challenging issues we face today on a local, regional and national scale.

The first forum will be held on Saturday, Nov. 5 at 9:30a.m. in the Meeting Room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. The topic will be "U.S. Options in Iraq", moderated by former selectman Tom Callahan. Everyone is invited. Attendees are encouraged to read "New York Time's" columnist Thomas Friedman's Sept. 28 column, titled "The Endgame in Iraq". The article is posted on the Town Committee's web site at www.cohasset-dems.org under the "Forum" section.

Gail is also this year's TOP LISTING AGENT! Just featured in the Boston Sunday Globe, Gail has this advice to property owners who wish to market their home, "The current market condition is radically different than 6 months ago. In order to attract a qualified buyer in today's market, the pricing has to reflect the over-stocked inventory, the psychology of early-cautious buyers and the buyer's fear that they may not be able to sell their current home. The property also has to be immaculate and staged to sell. It's a market that requires thoughtfulness and experience on the part of your agent."

Special birthday wishes to Celia Sampson

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY HALLOWEEN

Happy Halloween Cohasset! With all of the crazy events that have taken place over the last few weeks, this weekend and Halloween are going to be just the thing for many of us to take our minds elsewhere. Just remember to go over the rules with the kids, keep them safe and have them wear appropriate costumes.

BIRTHDAY MESSAGE

This was a wonderful message sent to me from a family who love Celia Sampson very much. "Happy 91st Birthday to our Great Aunt & Great-Great Aunt Celia Sampson Of Cohasset. Oct. 31 Halloween. Celia will be 91 years old. Please stay healthy and safe. Love your Great Niece & Great-Great Nieces & Nephew in Ft Myers Florida. We all love you and wish you a happy and healthy birthday."

TURNING TWO

Another birthday message goes out to Joshua Burke who turned two years old this past week. Josh, your family and friends all wish you a super year to come and hope that you enjoyed your special day. You are a terrific little guy, Happy Birthday!

GOYETTE SCHOLARSHIP NIGHT

Over seven years ago, Bob Goyette passed away but his memory and "goodness" lives on. The fifth Robert A. Goyette Memorial Scholarship Fundraiser is coming up and all are invited to come. The event is on Friday, Nov. 4, from 7 p.m.-midnight at the Sons of Italy Hall on Rt. 3A in Hingham. The cost is $15 at the door and includes Bob's favorite meal, spaghetti and meatballs. There will be plenty salad and dessert and is definitely all you can eat. Raffles will be plenty and include Bruins, Red Sox and Patriots items and Butch Stearns, everyone's favorite sportscaster from Fox 25 News will be the MC. So dig out your Bruins black and gold colors, gather your friends and families and come on down. If you are unable to attend but would like to make a donation, make checks payable to The Robert A. Goyette Memorial Scholarship Fund and mail to: The Robert A. Goyette, MSF, PO Box 333, Accord, MA 02018.

POST PROM

There will be a 2006 post prom meeting held on Wednesday Nov. 2 at 7 p.m., at the Cohasset High School Library. We hope everyone will help, also we will have things you can do at home if you cannot attend the meetings. If there are any questions, please contact the Post Prom Co-Chairs Derry Schwantner, Chris Taylor or Linda Bolster.

BULLY BUSTERS

On Friday, Nov. 4 from 10-11:30 a.m. Alan Jacobson, Ph.D., will bring his popular Bully Busters workshop program to the Paul Pratt Library. Bully Busters - Managing Your Child's School Environment, discusses the nature of bullying from all perspectives, with the emphasis on assisting children in dealing with a bullying situation.. With the recent threats and precautionary measures needed at all of the local schools this fall, it should prove to be a timely and useful topic for parents and caregivers. The lecture is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset and is free and open to all. For more information call 781-383-0771.

SIGNUPS TO START

'Float the Boats' fashion show, lunch

The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) is in the midst of an aggressive fundraising initiative. The two "sliding seat fours" that the group has rented for the last six years are being recalled by their owner at the end of this season.

CMI's goal is to fund raise $30,000 for the purchase of two of its own sliding seat fours. At this time, the group is just about half way there and a "Luncheon and Fashion Show" is being planned to keep the fundraising momentum going. Please plan to join CMI on Tuesday Nov. 8 from 11:30a.m.-2p.m. at the Square Cafe in Hingham. A lunch will be served and "The Sports Closet" of Cohasset is presenting a sportswear and work-out attire fashion show. Tickets are $75 per person ($50 of which is tax deductible) and may be obtained by calling Susan Galligan (781-383-0765) or at Buttonwood Books.

CMI offers Middle and High School rowing programs and an extensive adult program.

Cohasset man pilots first private jet into Reagan Airport

The first corporate jet to land at Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport — after the airport had been closed to private aviation for more than four years in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 terror attacks — had a South Shore connection.

"I am humbled and honored that I was chosen for this flight."
— Ryan Staszko

A Hawker 1000, captained by 26-year-old Ryan Staszko of Cohasset and owned by Professional Airways of Plymouth, reopened the airport last Tuesday to private aviation with the proper security clearance. After arriving from Teterboro, N.J. with passengers that included National Air Transportation Association officials and executives of Jet Aviation and New World Jet, the plane taxied beneath a ceremonial water arch formed by two fire trucks. The event received national and international press coverage.

Professional Airways was the first to secure clearance to Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport after 9/11, and at present is the only private charter company in the world authorized to land there. Flight paths to the airport runways cross over government buildings, including the White House and the Capitol.

"Professional Airways worked diligently for this clearance and we are pleased to have received it," said Ryan Staszko.

Owned by Staszko's father, Donald E. Staszko of Cohasset, Professional Airways — which owns the largest fleet of private jets in the northeast — is affiliated with New World Jet and Jet Aviation, the largest jet charter company in the world. Professional Airways provides planes and crews for Jet Aviation flights, and has received security clearance in the past to fly high-ranking government officials. During recent Hurricane Katrina relief efforts, Professional Airways also flew relief missions and medical evacuations to and from the Gulf States.

"I am humbled and honored that I was chosen for this flight," said Ryan Staszko, a pilot with more than 5,000 hours of national and international experience "It was impressive after we landed and then taxied under the ceremonial water arches."

Added Donald Staszko, a retired American Airlines 777 captain with 33 years of service and a U.S. Air Force pilot, a veteran of the Vietnam War, "I'm proud of my son and this organization that we have the expertise and capability to complete such a mission."

Last Tuesday's Professional Airways flight was permitted after the Transportation Security Administration implemented sweeping security revisions that require passengers and crews members to undergo background checks. Under the new regulations, a certified, armed security official must accompany each flight. Some flights require a federal marshal.

Hawker 1000 captain Ryan Staszko

"This is a first step," Congressman Tom Davis, a Republican from Virginia, told the Associated Press during ceremonies at the airport. "There are still a ton of regulations."

One parcel in town of particular interest, which the committee said would be a perfect opportunity as far as expanding its use, is the Citgo gas station in the downtown area. "This is an example of a very visible parcel that is underutilized," said Brown, adding it could potentially be the perfect site for more commercial growth.

In the same vein, Powers said behind the teen garage that is located behind the Red Lion Inn which is next to the Citgo station there is roughly an acre of land which could potentially be developed. The land is mostly ledge, and he said in speaking with Greenbush liaison Mark Gerson he has come to understand the town has been trying to work with the MBTA to blast some of the ledge to clear an area for more parking downtown as part of the Greenbush mitigation package. The committee has identified parking as one of the obstacles to commercial growth as the town requires 10 spaces per 1,000 square feet of building. More spaces could mean more business.

In addition, the committee wants to look further into whether the town's current parking bylaw is most effective. With a lower parking ratio, slightly larger buildings would be allowed, which could create higher real estate values and higher tax revenues.

But it is not only the property located behind the teen garage that is of interest, it is the teen garage itself. The committee recognized the teen garage as a prime piece of real estate and wondered if it would be possible to use the building for a commercial endeavor that could generate more tax dollars. Granville said if the committee was going to present a recommendation to move the garage, it would also have to present an acceptable alternative new home for the activities which currently take place inside.

"This is an opportunity for the town to use its land to the max. If the rock (ledge) can move, there will be an opportunity for development in that area," said Brown.

Powers added, "The garage is great for teens, but it should be evaluated as a critical piece of the parking lot that could tie the downtown retail area together. Right now, it's a non-revenue generator for the town," he said.

While Granville agreed the option could be evaluated, "We have to think of where it could relocate. It's something the kids in that age group need," she said. "The kids absolutely, truly love it."

The group said it would suggest that if moving the garage is an option the town would like to explore, perhaps the teen activities could move into the community center.

Another focus of the economic development committee, is working to find ways to encourage "Transit Oriented Development," or TOD, which is also a recommendation of the town's master plan. Brown said TOD projects can be used to generate funds for the town as the state will often award grant money to get them done.

In addition, the committee thought it very important that the role of Town Planner Liz Harrington be expanded as currently, there is only enough money budgeted for her to work one day per week. With her expertise, the committee feels the town has a greater shot at being able to grow commercial revenue. They even suggested TOD funding might be available to help pay Harrington for working on specific projects.

The committee is in the very preliminary stage of discussions and will continue to meet until Jan. 15. After its last meeting, it will present a list of recommendations to the board of selectmen for its consideration. Meetings of the economic development committee are open, and the public is welcome to attend. For more information on its upcoming meeting schedule, please contact the town clerk's office at (781) 383-4100.

School budget surplus under scrutiny

cial report — which allowed the school department to use $190,652 in left-over funds from the fiscal 2005 budget to pay the fiscal 2006 first-quarter, out-of-district special education tuition bills. While Walsh said the practice is routine and she has done it many times in districts she has previously worked in, it has never been done in Cohasset.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he was very confused about how there could be $190,000 left over from fiscal 2005 when the budgetary picture had been painted so bleak. Walsh explained when the salary accounts were closed at the end of fiscal 2005, there were some positions which had been open for a portion of the year that resulted in savings.

The business clerk position was not immediately filled which yielded $14,772; the SPED director/secretary position was open for a portion of the year which yielded an additional $20,225; the medical therapeutic contract services were overestimated and the schools ended up with a $33,721 surplus; teacher aides were laid off which yielded $97,668; and one custodian position was not filled freeing up $24,266, for a total of $190,652.

However, Spofford said given the situation, while Town Meeting is going to be asked in December to approve an amended school department budget of $12,344,382 — the figure agreed upon by the town and school department after a $400,000 operating budget override failed this spring — the schools aren't really going to have a fiscal 2006 budget of $12.3 million, the $190,652 will become part of the fiscal 2006 budget, for a real school budget figure of $12,535,034.

"Turning back that $190,000 could be an option. It could be given back to the general fund," said Spofford.

Walsh said the school department is very concerned the special education tuitions are underfunded for fiscal 2006 and by pre-paying the tuitions, it will be able to start the year off on the right foot. She said without pre-payment, there is a good chance the school department will need to come back before the town at a later date to ask for more money to pay for the costs.

"This is $190,000 of fiscal 2005 money that could have potentially been used in another way."

— Donna McGee, advisory committee

"So, you're saying I'll either take it now, or come back later," said Spofford. "We all stretched to get you those additional funds.".

Advisory committee member Tucker Glavin said while he has no doubt the school department is trying to do the right thing, the town went for a $400,000 override, of which $360,000 was earmarked for the school department, because it was told the money was absolutely necessary for the schools to be able to function properly. However, in the end, even though the override failed, the school department did not use $136,000 set aside in the reserve fund and there was an additional $190,652 left over. Together, that totals $326,652.

"Did you really need the $360,000 that you asked the town for?" he asked. "I fully supported the override, but why did we vote for it?"

Advisory committee member Roger Hill echoed Glavin's sentiments and said everyone worked really hard together to try to ease the situation, there was money put aside in the reserve fund for the school department and it came back and asked to have that money transferred to cover costs that it could not pay, and the advisory committee approved the request.

"It troubles me a lot," that he is now being told after the transfer has taken place that there is $190,000 left over which it intends to use, said Hill. "It may be a practice in other places, but it doesn't happen here," he said, adding budgetary actions such as this one "should be above the table, not under it."

Common practice

Walsh reassured the boards there was no secrecy behind the decision and she had only carried forth as she had always done in previous districts. She said the school committee was asked to approve the transaction and it did, and "We moved forward with it."

Advisory committee chairman Donna McGee said in her view, it might have been a better practice to talk to the other boards and share the good news and together, they could have looked at options for the money and agree as a group of citizens that this was the best use of these funds.

"This is $190,000 of fiscal 2005 money that could have potentially been used in another way," she said. McGee added the money could have been held in the reserve fund and released to the school department if necessary at a later date.

McGee said while she is not judging the situation, she does think there are people in the community who did not vote for the override and believe the school department budget should only be $12.3 million and should not include any extra funds, and this $190,000 is additional funds.

Walsh replied she hopes the public will see there were cuts made by the school department and that is why there is money left over. However, she said she did not become aware of the surplus until August.

However, Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, said she does payroll for her company and asked how the superintendent was not aware at the close of the fiscal year that there would be a surplus in some of the salary line items.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro explained the salaries for the school department are encumbered at the beginning of the year in full and there was no way to tell how much would be left over until the books were closed. Walsh added the school department hoped there would be savings, but it did not know how much.

Jenkins said the school department has continually been talking about how it is in a terrible deficit situation, "But there couldn't have been a deficit if you have $190,000 left over," she said. "Don't you feel in your conscience, as an ethical person, you should return the money to the town?"

"I hope you're not questioning my ethics, and I do feel it was fiscally responsible," replied Walsh.

Walsh said she has pre-paid out-of-district tuitions a number of times in the past in previous districts where she has worked. "It's not unusual," she said, adding because of the fluid nature of special education tuitions, the state, through Mass. General Laws Chapter 71, allows school districts to pre-pay the charges.

However, advisory committee member Pat Waters said it is his understanding Chapter 71 does not specify the funds used to pre-pay tuitions must be from one fiscal year to another. He suggested the school department use the funds included in the fiscal 2006 budget which are earmarked for out-of-district tuition costs to make the pre-payment instead of the fiscal 2005 funds. "Give back to '05 what belongs to '05," he said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said in his opinion, the more desirable option might be to include an article on the Warrant for the Town Meeting in December and let the public decide whether the money should be used to cover out-of-district tuition charges.

In an interview after the meeting, Griffin said things will remain as they stand unless one of two things happens. The school committee could decide to reverse its action, pay the bills with fiscal 2006 funds and return the $190,000 to surplus, or Town Meeting could vote to reduce the school budget, slated to be approved at roughly $12.3 million, because the school department has the additional funds. The budget the town would likely vote on in that case would be $12,153,730 — the proposed budget of $12,344,382 minus the $190,652 surplus. The school committee will meet again Nov. 3.

But whether the board chooses to rescind its vote or not, McGee said she hopes this will not be an issue going forward. "Speaking as one member of the advisory committee, I think we would not want to see this happen again."

Schools see pre-payment as a step in the right direction

Want to get jump on out-of-district tuitions

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although some questions have been raised, the school department maintains this year's ability to pre-pay a portion of its special education out of district tuitions is a huge step forward in terms of fiscal responsibility.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has proposed using $190,000 in left over fiscal 2005 funds to pre-pay a portion of special education tuitions for fiscal 2006. The school committee has praised Walsh for her foresight and taking the initiative to begin an innovative budgetary practice that has never been done before in town.

Walsh and school business manager Dave DeGennaro presented budget information explaining how the pre-payment was able to take place at the Oct. 13 school committee meeting as well as during an Oct. 24 budget summit in the selectmen's office.

"This is actually very good news to have something left over," said school committee member Adrienne MacCarthy at the meeting on the 13th. School committee member Alfred Slanetz concurred and said, "No one has actually managed the budget before, to her (Walsh's) credit."

DeGennaro explained at the March 27, 2004 Annual Town Meeting, voters approved the school department's fiscal 2005 budget at $11,943,800, which included a $400,000 operating budget override, earmarked for the schools.

However, soon after, unpaid gas and unemployment bills surfaced for fiscal 2004 just before the close of the fiscal year June 30. Not only did the school department have to find a way to pay those bills, it also had to come up with the money for those bills that would be incurred again in its fiscal 2005 budget.

To remedy the situation, the school department asked the Dec.6, 2004 Special Town Meeting to approve paying the utility and unemployment bills from fiscal 2004 at roughly $93,000 and $65,000 respectively, and allocate an additional $93,000 for utilities and $67,000 for unemployment costs in the fiscal 2005 budget.

Voters agreed to provide the funds, and the town paid the unpaid bills. However, the town decided the money for fiscal 2005 would be better off it if was placed in the reserve fund that requires advisory committee approval before it can be spent.

However, in October, just before the December Town Meeting, Walsh sent a memo to then Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley informing him a number of line items were still under-budgeted for fiscal 2005 and the amount could be as much as $500,000.

In addition to the unemployment and utilities costs, special education costs had been greatly under-budgeted, and there were budgetary troubles in the areas of transportation, cleaning and custodial services, tuition reimbursement for professional staff, and legal fees.

"We made an agreement we'd do what we could," said Walsh, adding in January, some staff members were laid off. In addition, the school committee voted to implement athletic fees, and a vacancy on the custodial staff was not filled.

When the 2005 Annual Town Meeting rolled around in April, the school department made its case for another $400,000 override and a bleak picture was painted. However, this time voters were not as generous. While the budget passed with the override at Town Meeting, it did not pass muster at a subsequent ballot box vote during the Special Election in May.

However, even without the override, the school department was given $200,000 to use to pay its bills. There was $100,000 added to the school budget to cover any costs that might crop up, and another $100,000 put into the reserve fund as an added cushion to be used by the school department if necessary.

"We never would have finished in the black without the town's support," said Walsh.

In June 2005, just before the close of fiscal 2005, the school department was able to waive its right to the $100,000 set aside in the reserve fund. It also announced it had only used a portion of the money set aside in the reserve fund for unemployment at the December Town Meeting and would not need to use $36,417 of the $65,000 set aside.

When fiscal 2005 came to a close June 30, the school department soon found it had saved money by having positions open for a portion of the year, including the business clerk position and SPED director. The medical therapeutic contract services were also less than expected. Laying off the teacher aides also saved money, as did keeping the custodial position open. At the end of the fiscal year, the schools were left with $190,652 in surplus funds.

School committee chairman Jamie Walsh asked why they were not able to forecast the salaries, and Walsh explained salaries are encumbered in full at the beginning of the year. Because some positions were left open for a time, there was no way to know the amount that had been saved until the end of the year. She added DeGennaro is in the process of updating the school's programs to allow salary payments to be tracked week by week rather than as a lump sum paid.

Walsh explained when funds are left over from a fiscal year, there are only two options: to purchase materials, or pre-pay tuitions. She said if materials are going to be purchased, they must be ordered in April or May because they must arrive at the school prior to July 1.

"Pre-payment is the only other thing we can do," she said. "It's done pretty routinely."

"And legally," DeGennaro added.

Walsh said currently, two special education students who will require out-of-district placement have just moved to town and another could be on the way. She said as a result, there is no way to know what the actual out of district costs will be in the end.

"Would you say this is the most volatile budget line item?" asked Williams.

"Definitely," replied Walsh.

By pre-paying the special education tuitions, Walsh said the current projected out-of-district tuition shortfall of roughly $80,000 will become a $109,000 temporary surplus.

Affordable housing

It's time for selectmen to call for an educational forum on affordable housing.

While on the surface, the issue may seem to be fairly straightforward – i.e., the town needs more affordable housing – it's far more complicated than that.

Selectmen should invite a range of experts, who can speak about Chapter 40B (the state's affordable housing law), LIP (Local Initiative Projects), and inclusionary zoning – and that's just for starters.

The town and especially the selectmen desperately need to hear from professionals, who can translate these laws and programs into layman's terms and also interpret the "fine print."

For example, in reading a letter from the Department of Housing and Community Development in a packet Town Manager Bill Griffin prepared on the Cedarmere development, we read that affordable housing in age-restricted, "for-sale projects" can't prohibit children. The only restriction is that one member of the household be at least 55 years old. The potential homeowners also have to be "first-time buyers" which means they cannot have owned a home in the past three years. Those rules change in "elderly households" when both husband and wife are 62-plus.

Over the years, efforts to provide our seniors with affordable, attractive housing alternatives here in town have been discussed and debated numerous times. During these discussions the words "senior citizens" have had a reverential ring to them. We don't recall anyone describing seniors as "well-to-do baby boomers" during planning for the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District, dubbed SMROD, that allows higher-density building for age-restricted projects that provide some affordable housing.

We want to make it perfectly clear that Cedarmere is going to be a gorgeous, luxury place – a dream. We wish we could afford to live there. It is a project with a special permit under the SMROD that is actually building less density than the bylaw would allow.

But with most of the homes at $1 million plus – it's a place for well-healed "seniors" who only have had to reach the ripe old age of 55.

Cedarmere will have a total of 105 units. The development's Westerly House is going to house all the affordable condos for the project, a total of 27, with four market rates mixed in for a total of 31 units in that building.

The state requires affordable units to be indistinguishable from market-rate units. The DHCD initially raised questions about Westerly House but appears to be satisfied that the building is adequately integrated into the overall development.

When taken by itself, however, the Westerly House will represent the LIP application (not the entire Cedarmere project), and the mix of market-rate and affordable units in a single building seems lopsided to us.

Under the SMROD, Cedarmere has to provide affordable housing which the town needs. However, we wonder if these for-sale, affordable condos will fill a Cohasset need. Some are saying yes while others say rentals would be more beneficial.

On a related note, selectmen don't have to go far to learn more about how other towns are encouraging affordable housing for families and seniors. Several projects, including projects for seniors, in neighboring Hingham have been adopted under that town's Flexible Residential Development bylaw. The goal of the FRD bylaw is to build some affordable housing while at the same time provide a few extra units for the developer and some open space within the development.

As part of such proposals, the developer must first establish the number of housing units that would be allowed under a conventional subdivision plan, and then there is a formula for determining the number of affordable, market rate, and moderately sized houses. The bylaw encourages the permanent preservation of open space, enhancing community character by allowing greater flexibility in residential developments.

Hingham's FRD developments have been on a much smaller scale than Cedarmere or Cook.

BUILDING PERMITS

The following building permits were issued recently at Town Hall:

Laurajean McDonald, 81 Wheelwright Farm, remodel kitchen, $14,000; Christopher Moran, 11 Beechwood St., 2 story addition, new roof design, $175,000; Wendl Erter, 79 Lantern Lane, remodel bathroom into 2 baths, $30,000; Ron Hobson, 32 Linden Drive, remodel 3 season room/deck, $35,000; Martin Nee, 109 Atlantic Ave., replace windows, siding, doors, $25,000; Martin Nee, 109 Atlantic Ave., woodstove, $1,500;

Bill Cavanaro, 426 Atlantic Ave., demolish/rebuild dwelling, $800,000; Etten Van, 2 Surry Drive, renovate, convert garage, new garage, $240,000; Brian, 20 Sanctuary Pond, remove fireplace and chimney, add job 2', $10,000; and Henvey, 39 1/2 Elm Court, above ground pool 24', $3,000.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ZBA talks about Smith Place

TO THE EDITOR:

The Zoning Board of Appeals has scheduled a hearing for change of usage of a garden business on Smith Place.

The present shop is located partially on residentially zone land. Since Smith Place will be closed with the restoration of commuter rail, access to the proposed usage-storage and small businesses, will be through Cushing Street. This street is also in a residential zone.

The hearing is Nov.7 at 7 p.m. at Town Hall All should attend because the decision of the board will affect the character of Cohasset Center.

Facts on senior housing survey

TO THE EDITOR:

In the Oct. 21 Cohasset Mariner, to serve his own purposes, Jim Hamilton unjustifiably attacked sound research findings on the housing needs of Cohasset seniors.

Here are the facts: Housing research experts within the Center for Social Policy at the University of Massachusetts Boston carried out the study he referred to, which was commissioned by the town of Cohasset. If Hamilton had read the full report, rather than an executive summary, he would see all the detail on methodology and survey instrumentation.

Researchers used a sound random sampling approach and secured a 75 percent return rate on mailed surveys. As to supposed data inconsistencies, Hamilton twisted the findings. In fact, 96 percent of seniors, some who are homeowners and others who rent, expressed a desire to continue to live in Cohasset. In addition, when asked for the one housing option that they think should be more available to seniors in the town, a plurality (46 percent) chose an increase in affordable rental apartments.

Takes issue with school complaints

TO THE EDITOR:

Ms. Jenkins complains in her latest mini-diatribe about the Cohasset School Dept. that the schools have paid $190,000 in advance for Sped tuitions and that the lights in and around the schools are turned on 24/7. She concludes her letter by asking, "When will Cohasset engage professionals who understand the priority of putting tax dollars in the classroom?"

As regards the Sped issue: For those who may not know, "Sped" is shorthand for special education. The $190,000 tuition payments are for out-of-district educational services for Cohasset students (who are the children of Cohasset taxpayers), but for whom the Cohasset schools do not have the specialized programs in order to provide a legally-mandated and appropriate education for those children. For Ms. Jenkins to suggest that the $190,000 is for something other than the direct education costs of these children is a non sequitur.

Moreover, as I recall, last year at this time the entire town was up in arms (and rightly so) about some $400,000 in unpaid bills from the prior fiscal year by the previous administration, of which out-of-district special education bills constituted the major portion. But now we have an administration which evidently is paying these bills on time – and Ms. Jenkins is still complaining?

With regards to Ms. Jenkins's continual rant about the lights being on 24/7 in and around the schools, everyone knows that lighting at night is the single biggest deterrent, at the least cost, to criminal activity, whether it be around your home or a building. If those lights were to be turned off, our school parking areas would become instant hangouts for kids in their cars (just as unlit areas around schools were when I was growing up) and invite all sorts of mischief in the late-night hours.

In addition, in view of the recent security issues at the schools, for Ms. Jenkins (a former School Committee candidate, no less) now to suggest that the lights should be turned off at night is absurd on its face. From what I understand, the schools did turn off the lights at night in late September – and it was only a matter of a few days later that there was the break-in at the middle-high school.

Only Ms. Jenkins knows in her heart why it is that she is so obsessed with the workings of the Cohasset School Department. It is one thing to serve in the role of the loyal opposition and to question conventional wisdom, but it is quite another to indulge continually in personal attacks, to make mean-spirited comments about special education, and to offer half-baked solutions to our fiscal problems. I have never read anything from Ms. Jenkins over the years which even remotely could be construed as a positive suggestion or a constructive idea.

Not yet time for tea

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week's commentary column and accompanying editorial cartoon advises us to have a cup of calming tea and damp down discussion of the need for some senior housing to be rental, while implying that there is no need (and hence no need for further discussion). Well, the demand may be small in proportion to the total number of seniors, but it isn't zero and should be addressed.

Sure, most of us would much prefer to remain in our homes until our time is up, especially if mortgage free , but it doesn't always remain feasible or desirable.

The selectmen did recognize some demand for rentals, but dismissed the need to do anything about it under the mistaken impression that Cedarmere would be providing rental units.

Pretending there is no rental demand doesn't eliminate the need.

Taking responsibility for our life together

COMMENTARY

COHASSET CLERGY

Last Thursday a meeting of parents, police and school representatives was held at Cohasset High School. The presenters did an excellent job of giving straightforward information and outlining the steps that are being taken to address the problem of school safety. The community certainly needs this assurance of protection and order. It gives everyone some room to breathe. The challenge is now to go further and commit ourselves to taking responsibility for our life together.

As clergy we believe there is an ultimate authority for life, God, who in love has given us the freedom to be. Our life then is one of possibility and commitment. The possibilities of life that hold such amazing promise can also include destructive choices, such as threatening notes, bullying, drug abuse and much more. We hold each other accountable for the choices we make as we also seek to grow into forgiveness. The commitments of our lives take us beyond ourselves into mutual relation with others and God. The First Letter of John observes, "if we walk in the light as he himself is in the light, we have fellowship with one another…" We experience empathy for each other. One young person found herself praying that God grant the youth who were arrested the help and healing they need.

Parents and children are living in a post-9/11 and post-Columbine world. It is not an easy place to be and grow. Yet there is no going back. We feel both afraid and courageous, outraged and concerned. There is a lot of ambiguity. We recall the Biblical figures Ezra and Nehemiah who faced a similar complexity in their post-exile world. There was a great deal of fear and hope. And there was work to be done. The people shouted, "Let us start building!"

What is it that we need to build? Clearly, it is a community where each one finds value in who they are. All are children of God with lives full of possibility and commitment. We need to broaden our horizons to more than a narrow superiority in academics, sports, or social group with their concomitant pressures. Rather than a sink or swim mentality, a shift in values finds a buoyancy in God's grace.

This is a work that can only be done as a community. When we make a commitment to one another we move beyond narrow self-interest to take pride in the whole. Our purpose then is to care for the well being of all. We invite you to join us in organizing to plan and work toward the possibilities of this way of life. There is no easy answer. There will be disagreement. What will hold us together is our common intention. The issues to be addressed include: helping one another and our young people when they go through times of loss; reaching out to those who feel alone, who feel different or are left out; the God-shaped space in our hearts; respectful communication; obtaining insight into today's pressures and issues; identifying the rage that comes from hurt, seeking to alleviate the pain and creatively channel the energy of it; forgiveness, accountability and mutuality.

We urge participation in the Social Service League's program by Alan Jacobson, Ph. D. titled, "Bully Busters – Managing your Child's School Environment" on Friday, Nov. 4 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Library. The League plans another program in the winter by Dr. Jacobson on "Building Self Esteem." Marisa Silveri, Ph.D. and Instructor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School will speak on "Understanding the Development of the Adolescent Brain" at Hingham High School on Nov. 3 at 7 p.m.

Project Safeguard is sponsoring a film and discussion for Middle School parents and students titled, "It's My Life" on Nov. 9, and parent workshops with Jan Tedeschi tentatively scheduled for November 15 and 29.

In addition, All our churches are working directly with youth in small groups with caring adults. "Let us start building!"

The Revs. E. Clifford Cutler, Jan Carlsson-Bull, Douglas Fish, John Maheras, John R. Mulvehill, Gary A. Ritts, Susan Schrager, and Beth Wheatley-Dyson.

Memorable hurricanes

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I can tell you exactly where I was on Sept. 21, 1938 and what I was doing but I can't tell you much more.

I was playing soccer for the Thomas A. Watson School team at Watson Park and my teammates and I were reluctant to kick the ball with too much enthusiasm for fear the wind would blow it into the Fore River.

The game was never completed, as I recall, when sanity prevailed over misplaced valor and we made a dash for home while trees swayed in the breeze and an occasional branch came crashing down around us.

It wasn't until later that we learned it was the Great New England Hurricane of 1938 that sent us home to an early supper and even then we didn't believe it because whoever heard of a hurricane in New England?

Between 1635 and 1999, according to the Encyclopedia of Hurricane, Typhoons and Cyclones, there have been 48 documented hurricanes in our six state corner of the land, only 22 of them major.

We can expect one hurricane every five years and a major one in which the pressure dips to 28.50 inches or 965 millibars and the wind hits 111 miles an hour every 25 years.

The year 1635 is significant because the Great Colonial Hurricane of Aug. 25, 1635, was the first recorded in these parts. It destroyed 211 houses and a 14-foot storm surge lifted a 400-ton vessel ashore in Boston.

"The wind caused the tide to rise to a height unknown before," wrote Governor John Winthrop of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, "and drowned eight Indians flying from their wigwams."

William Bradford, governor of the Plymouth Colony, thought it was like "those hurricane and typhoons that writers make mention of in the Indies. Such a mighty storm of wind and rain that none living in these parts ever saw."

A small boat carrying a young minister named Anthony Thacher and his family foundered on a rocky island off Cape Ann where he and his wife spent three days before rescue arrived. The rock is known today as Thacher's Woe.

The Great September Gale of 1815 was another memorable New England hurricane that cost the Rev. Ralph Waldo Emerson the steeple of his church in Reading and so impressed 6-year-old Oliver Wendell Holmes that he wrote a poem about it.

A hurricane named Diane in 1955 took out the Old North Bridge that arched the flood and left Concord with a pile of kindling. An amateur photographer snapped Hurricane Carol as it toppled the steeple of the Old North Church in 1954 and won a Pulitzer Prize for it.

The Armed Forces started naming hurricanes during World War II, calling them "Able, Baker, Charlie, etc.," and the US Weather Bureau took it up using girls' names in 1953. The first used was "Alice." PC pressure dropped boys' names into the mix in 1979.

The Bureau maintains 10 lists of names that will be used over and over again every 10 years except those of historical or meteorological interest, like Andrew, with its $20 billion damage, and Camille, with its record 26.84 inch barometric low, are retired.

Sort of a Hurricane Hall of Fame, wouldn't you say? Think Katrina will make the cut?

HEALTH NOTES

Antibacterial soaps and 'super germs'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The following column, substantially by Barbara Ingham of the faculty of the University of Wisconsin, is an excellent summary of the controversy about antibacterial soaps.

Antibacterial cleaning products abound, from soaps and lotions to kitchen and bathroom cleaners. In fact, a recent survey has shown that more than 75percent of all liquid hand soaps and nearly 30percent of bar soaps for sale nationally contain antibacterial agents. This may seem like good news, but recent research has suggested that some antibacterial agents contained in soaps may facilitate the emergence of antibiotic-resistant bacteria, sometimes known as "'super germs."

Soap is an effective hand cleaner. Soap isn't designed to kill bacteria, but it acts as a surfactant to lift dirt off of surfaces so that dirt can be rinsed away. This is what happens when you wash your hands with soap: the scrubbing action helps to release dirt and oils that are on the surface of your skin, and soap picks up the dirt and carries it away as you rinse your hands.

Alcohol-based hand cleaners. A common antibacterial ingredient in health-care products is alcohol, the active ingredient in instant hand cleaners such as Purell. Several years ago consumers were being discouraged from using alcohol-based instant hand cleaners. These products tended to dry the skin and create a situation where even more bacteria were found on the skin after use of the hand cleaner than before. Now, however, almost all alcohol-based instant hand cleaners contain emollients or aloe to prevent the skin from drying out as much. So, while not a replacement for soap and water, alcohol-based instant hand cleaners can be a good back-up when soap and water are not available, such as when a family is traveling or a preschool group is on a field trip.

Not all products are created equal. It's easy to become confused over the variety of products claiming an antibacterial effect. From lotions and soaps to household cleaners, antibacterial products abound. Some products such as lotions and hand soaps contain an actual antibiotic — triclosan — as the active ingredient. Other products such as household cleaners contain chemicals, most often bleach (sodium hypochlorite) or quaternary ammonium compounds that kill bacteria but don't necessarily select for 'super germs'. Reading the product label to determine the active ingredient may give you an idea as to how each product works to fight germs.

Concern over triclosan-containing products. Most antibacterial soaps and lotions contain the antibacterial agent triclosan or, to a lesser extent, triclocarban. Triclosan damages the cell walls of bacteria, slowing their growth so that the bacteria eventually die. So a liquid softsoap containing triclosan not only cleans your skin by removing dirt, it can also kill the bacteria that might remain on your skin after the dirt is washed away. Scientists and health-care professionals are concerned about the proliferation of products containing triclosan because of the potential for development of antibiotic-resistant bacteria, sometimes known as "super germs." With increased use of products containing triclosan, bacteria have developed a resistance to this antibiotic through natural selection. Bacteria that become resistant to triclosan undergo a genetic mutation that makes them resistant to triclosan or other similar antibiotic agents. And when antibiotic resistant bacteria proliferate, it eventually becomes more difficult to treat infections in humans, as well as in plants and animals. Laboratory research has shown that antibacterial dishwashing liquid that is sold for it's supposed ability to reduce or kill bacteria does not work as designed, and is no more effective than regular dishwashing liquid.

Regulation of antibacterial products. Two agencies are responsible for oversight of products containing antibacterial compounds. Soaps and lotions containing antibacterial ingredients are regulated by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as a drug if they claim to "kill germs" or "reduce infection." Most often, however, soaps and lotions containing antimicrobials make no therapeutic or medical claims and thus are considered cosmetics and need not be proven to be effective. On the other hand, products such as all-purpose household cleaners and dish soaps containing antimicrobials are regulated by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as pesticides.

Summary. Recent studies have shown that for most consumers antibacterial products are no more effective than standard products. So the next time you are purchasing a dishwashing liquid or a container of liquid hand soap, take a moment to consider the product ingredients. For reasons of health and safety, you may wish to choose a 'regular' product and not the antibacterial type.

Seeing mended birds fly away was a thrill

ON THE WILD SIDE

JUNE FREEDMAN

Fly away, fly away, fly away . . . south!

My otherwise bleak, rainy Columbus Day weekend was brightened on Sunday afternoon when I was able to witness the release of the last two birds treated at the New England Wildlife Center next door in Hingham this summer.

The count for animals treated has been down this year: 40 reptiles (mostly turtles and snakes), 500 mammals (mostly squirrels and raccoons, 55 of the latter) and about 1,100 birds, down from the usual 2,000.

Liz D'Arcangelo, Senior Veterinary Technician, attributes the decrease to better screening of admissions. Many birds, particularly fledglings who only need about a week to learn to fly, can make it on their own or may have a parent nearby who is not easily seen. I learned that seemingly orphaned baby bunnies should always be left alone, since Mom only visits each of her several nests twice daily and is never visible. Probably off making more bunnies!

Approximately 60 to 70 per cent of these animals are successfully treated and released. Some must be put down, if they have rabies or distemper or have serious injuries after being hit by cars or attacked by cats. The Center has recently begun testing the tissue of deceased seagulls and other sea birds to determine levels of pollution, particularly lead poisoning. Some animals are healed but considered non-releasable because of their condition. If happy in confinement, they may be kept at the Center to be used in its educational programs after permission is obtained from the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife.

Persons bringing animals to the Center are informed by letter of their eventual disposition, either release, euthanasia, or continued residence at the Center. Updates of animals' conditions are also available during treatment by calling the Center at certain hours of the day.

Animals are considered ready for release when their injuries are healed and they are considered functional and able to feed and sustain themselves.

Animals are considered ready for release when their injuries are healed and they are considered functional and able to feed and sustain themselves. They are released in wooded areas in Hingham, Weymouth, Quincy, and sometimes the North Shore. Attempts are made to release them back into the communities from which they came. Raccoons, communal animals who are released in groups, in particular are released from whence they came.

On Columbus Day weekend, only six raccoons remained at the Center out of the original 55 treated. On Friday two blue jays had "self-released," a euphemism for "escaped"! The two remaining birds, a cedar waxwing and a robin, both favorite species of mine, had arrived at the Center as fledglings about one month previously and were ready for release.

Spirits were high among the little group attending the release, Liz, Mandy Yurof, a recent graduate of UMass Amherst, and now an intern at the Center, several of her family members, and myself. We entered the bird area where the waxwing and robin were residing together in a large, pre-release cage. I don't really know what I expected, but I found even the utter simplicity of the release thrilling. The door was left open, and Mandy entered the cage and positioned herself in the rear with arms extended. The waxwing soon found the exit and winged its way treetop. The robin took less than a minute to follow. I couldn't help bursting cornily into a chorus of "Born Free"! I also found myself hoping they found a warm place to stay that night!

Brown, Quigley discuss current affairs

Tune in this upcoming week to join co-hosts, Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Marti, as OUR TOWN, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, begins highlighting warrant articles or issues that will be brought before voters at Fall Town Meeting. This week's guests include former selectman Merle Brown, who will discuss the improvements being planned to the Beechwood Ball Field, and Karen Quigley, who will inform viewers on her citizen petition to protect Peppermint Brook.

Roving reporter Rich Ofsthun hits the streets in search of Cohasset's supernatural side and finds a few ghosts in his own closet. This edition will begin airing Monday (Oct. 31) at 9p.m. and will show on Tuesday at 9:30p.m. and Thursday at 8:30p.m. all on Comcast channel 10. Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!.

Look for the details of all other future shows in the Cohasset Mariner.

areas, the unit owners of the other condominium will not be obligated to contribute to the cost.

Cedarmere has filed its project under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw which requires 25 percent of the total units be affordable. There will be 105 total units, of which 60 will be luxury town homes which will likely sell within the $1 million range. The 14 market-rate ownership condominiums in the Manor House will sell for slightly less.

The affordable units in the Westerly House will be reserved for sale to households earning no more than 80 percent of the area median income of the Boston Metropolitan Statistical Area. There will be eligibility requirements for those wishing to apply to live in the affordable units. The maximum income allowed is as follows:

- household of one: $46,300
- household of two: $52,950
- household of three: $59,550
- household of four: $66,150

In the Westerly House, the one-bedroom units will be 695 square feet and will be sold for $126,000. The two-bedroom units will be 917 square feet and will be sold for $141,500. All units will feature fully applianced kitchens, individual decks or patios with sliding doors, washer/dryer hook-ups, carpeted and linoleum floors, and two open parking spaces per unit.

Those who wish to live in the Westerly House affordable units must meet the age and income requirements and must also be a first-time home buyer. A person is a first-time home buyer if no person in the household has, within the preceding three years, either owned the house they lived in or owned an interest in one or more other houses, such as through joint ownership, with the exception of elderly households. Elderly households are defined as those in which everyone is over the age of 62.

There are asset limits for those units which are occupied by people who are not 62 years old. Those households shall not have total gross assets exceeding $50,000 in value. Assets may include vehicles, cash, cash in savings and checking accounts, trusts, net cash value of stocks, real property, bonds, and capital investments. The value of personal property shall be excluded.

For those households which are entirely over the age of 62, the equity from the sale of the home can be applied to the purchase price of the unit. The excess, up to a maximum amount of $100,000, will not be considered an asset, though interest from the excess will be considered income.

It is anticipated there will be more interested parties than available affordable ownership condominiums, and therefore a lottery system has been devised which will choose applicants. There will be two separate lotteries — one will be a local preference lottery for 18 affordable units (14 two-bedroom units and four one-bedroom units) and the second will be an open pool for nine affordable units (seven two-bedroom units and two one-bedroom units).

To qualify for the local preference lottery, applicants must be Cohasset residents, the parents or children of Cohasset residents, or employees of the town of Cohasset. The units that have been designated for the local preference pool will first be available to households that qualify, but once the list has been exhausted, those units will then be made available to the open pool.

The Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development has another stipulation that could adjust the local preference pool. If the percentage of minorities in the local preference pool is less than the percentage of minorities in the surrounding U.S. Department Housing and Urban Development defined area, the developer will hold a preliminary lottery comprised of all minority applicants who did not qualify for the local preference pool and rank the applicants in order of the drawing.

Minority applicants should then be added to the local preference pool in order of their rankings until the percentage of minority applicants in the local preference pool is equal to the percentage of minorities in the surrounding HUD-defined area. The percent minority for the metropolitan area of Boston is 17.5 percent. This is the minimum percentage of minority applicants that must be in the local preference pool. Minority applicants are defined as a person who is a member of the following groups: Native American or Alaskan Native, Asian or Pacific Islander, Black, Hispanic, and Cape Verdean.

While the project has received approval from the planning board through its issuance of a special permit, there has been some question as to whether the development can proceed as Leggat McCall Properties plans. Some members of the planning board and the board of selectmen feel it was understood the original proposal for the project included rental affordable units and are hesitant to give the final sign-off on the project without them.

Some selectmen say they voted to build a senior housing project on the Cook Estate without rentals based on the assumption Cedarmere would take care of the rentals the town needs. However, both former developers Kelli and David Calhoun of Sheldon Road and their business partner Tom Ragno of Lexington and new developers Leggat McCall Properties say while affordable units have always been a part of the project, they had never been rentals.

In order for Cedarmere's affordable units to "count" toward the 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state which Cohasset is currently trying to fulfill, an application must be submitted to the state by the board of selectmen, which it has not yet done.

It will still be roughly one year before applications will be accepted for units at Cedarmere. Currently, the deadline to submit applications for the affordable units is slated for Jan. 3, 2007. The lottery is expected to take place for the affordable units Jan. 10, 2007.

'Energetic' committee looks for answers to power problems

By Jim Shipsky
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In December 2004 Merle Brown urged the Selectmen to form an Alternative Energy Committee. Its purpose is to investigate the potential for conserving energy in Cohasset and for generating renewable energy. Merle's concerns included both the rising cost of energy and the ongoing environmental damage caused by conventional methods of producing electricity and heat. Merle mentioned the idea of Cohasset having a wind turbine like Hull's Wind One.

The Selectmen invited interested residents to apply, and a committee was formed. We've been meeting since August. The current members are: Mike Bliss, Rod Hobson, Robert Kinscherf, Luciano Lauretti, Mimi White, Andrew Willard and myself (Jim Shipsky). Our meetings are open to the public, and interested residents are most welcome to attend. There is a public comment period. Our next meeting will be Nov. 15, 7:30 p.m., in Room 2B at Town Hall.

We have no specific mandate from the Selectmen. We will present a report to the Town meeting in the spring of 2006. The committee will investigate various alternatives and provide regular reports to the Selectmen and Town Manager, and to readers of the Mariner. An interesting note: rather than having an elected chairperson, we rotate the responsibility for facilitating our meetings, each member acting as chairperson in turn.

As a committee, we think and feel that using renewable energy instead of energy generated from fossil fuels or nuclear reactors is the right thing to do, both economically and for the good of Earth. With several modes of renewable energy production, the initial costs can be amortized in only a few years, while the life span of the equipment enables it to go on producing energy at extremely low costs. The cost of fuel for conventional energy generation tends to always increase. We also recognize that fossil fuel combustion is adding to global climate change. We feel there is an opportunity here for Cohasset to feel good about itself by doing its small part in reducing carbon and other greenhouse gas emissions.

As a committee, we think and feel that using renewable energy instead of energy generated from fossil fuels or nuclear reactors is the right thing to do, both economically and for the good of Earth.

At our first meeting we brainstormed various possibilities, starting with alternative methods of supply: wind, sun (for electricity and heat), biogas, water turbines (in water mains, in sewer lines, in tidal flows). We discussed possible locations for power plants, and ownership options. On the demand side, we recognized the need to determine existing use patterns and discover where we can conserve energy. We asked the questions: "What local, state, and federal laws are in place that have an impact on the ability of the town or its citizens to provide/build renewable energy systems? What are the current State or Federal programs in place to provide funding for projects?"

Our first step was to invite Brian Adams, Cohasset's Manager of Facilities Operations, to speak at our October meeting. Brian provided charts outlining energy consumption for town-owned buildings. The Middle-High School is the largest consumer of energy, with Osgood and Deer Hill schools being the next largest consumers. Brian reported that existing systems are not operating at maximum efficiency, and is taking steps to improve performance. Adding solar thermal panels to lower the cost of producing domestic hot water was discussed.

Andrew Stern, an electrical engineer currently involved with wind energy projects, will speak at our next meeting.

Jim Shipsky is a member of the Alternative Energy Committee.

OUR WORLD

Holiday benefit weekend — Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum will hold two holiday events to benefit the museum. Harvest Fest, Saturday, Nov. 12 will be held at the museum, 100 Sohier St., Cohasset, at 7 p.m. Tickets are $75 each and are available by calling the museum at 781-383-3198. The 2005 Mistletoe Boutique, will take place Sunday, Nov. 13 in the barn at the Red Lion Inn, 71 South Main St., from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Harvest Fest will feature international hors d'oeuvres and cocktails and a silent auction of items including iPods, ski weekends and dinners in Boston with limo transportation. Local DJ Melissa Trainor will provide music, and the museum's newest exhibit, Biodiversity 911: Saving Life on Earth, will be open. The Mistletoe Boutique will feature more than 40 New England and New York City designers and artisans on hand to sell their creations that include gourmet treats, blown glass, jewelry and clothing, baby gifts, children's items, stationery, and linens.

Proceeds from both events benefit Our World, which relies almost entirely on volunteers and donations. With the success of the recent opening of Biodiversity 911, which showcases the earth's physical and cultural environments, museum director Michele Bolduc said current goals include funding the development and construction of about $1 million in new culturally focused exhibits and collections.

The museum averages 30 visitors daily, and is growing as programs are launched and exhibits are added. New offerings include a weekly Spanish language playgroup-class and field trips for toddlers and preschoolers, winter school vacation activities for children; and adult programs, scheduled for early 2006.

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum serves families with children aged 12 and under. A unique resource for the South Shore, Our World offers weekly toddler hours, educational programs and workshops, field trips, school vacation activities, and an internationally-themed, state-of-the-art outdoor playground. Hours are Wednesday through Friday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free for members; $5 non-members. For information visit www.ourworld-cgdm.org or call 781-383-3198.

LIBRARY CORNER

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is located at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information on its programs or events call 781-383-1348, or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Knitting group – Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., in the Historical Room. For all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring a knitting project and join like-minded friends. For more information call Mary Coughlin, 781-383-1348.

Artist exhibit – The South Shore Art Center presents "Do You See What I See?" a display of photography by Peggy Roth Major, from Nov. 1 through Dec. 30, at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Major, a fine art photographer, combines her imagery with insightful verse, taking us to places where many have been but few have really seen. Her exhibit offers a brief escape from the stress of daily life and a chance to catch that elusive breath of fresh air during the holidays. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5p.m.; and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. An opening reception will be held Sunday, Nov. 6, 3 to 5p.m.

Independent film series – "Witnesses," at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Thursday, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m. Free admission and refreshments.

Book group – Thursday, Dec. 8, at 10 a.m. Coffee and discussion of Tracy Kidder's "Mountains Beyond Mountains." To register call Gayle Walsh, 781-383-1348, ext 120.

Homebound delivery service – The library offers home delivery service to those confined to their homes due to illness or disability. A volunteer from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit interested participants at their residence to discuss reading preferences and take requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to and picked up from residences and returned to the library on a regular schedule. Those interested, or who know someone who could benefit from this service, call the library, 781-383-1348.

Computer help – Reference librarian Gayle Walsh will provide one-on-one tutorials to library users needing help using the computers and who want to learn how to search the online catalog or reference databases. Call the library to schedule a session.

Books on CD new titles – Recent additions to the Books on CD collection include "Winning" by Jack Welch, "London Bridges" by James Patterson, "Last Days of Dogtown" by Anita Diamant, and "Shalimar the Clown" by Salman Rushdie. Books on CD are ideal for people who enjoy listening to books while knitting, commute to work, or have trouble reading print material.

FOR CHILDREN

Letters About Literature – Writing contest for students in grades four through 12. Contestants select a favorite book, and then write a personal letter to the author explaining why, and how, the book affected them. Contest has three competition levels: Level 1, grades four to six; Level 2, grades seven to 8; and Level 3, grades 9 to 12. Entry forms and guidelines are available in the Children's Room and Young Adult's Room, or visit www.massbook.org. Submission deadline is Dec. 1.

Letters About Literature is a program of the Massachusetts Center for the Book. Primary sponsorship is from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum with additional support from Houghton Mifflin Co., and the Massachusetts Library Association.

Music and movement – MamaSteph will be performing music and movement for young children, Monday, Oct. 31, from 10:30 to 11 a.m. in the Meeting Room. Open to all communities. Children must be accompanied by a caregiver. No registration required. Program funded by an LSTA grant awarded by Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Nor'easter no big deal for Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Despite wind gusts of more than 50 miles per hour, and amounts of rainfall that have set a new October record, Cohasset fared pretty well during Tuesday's nor'easter.

"We lucked out pretty well."
— Police Chief James Hussey

"A few hundred people lost power," said police chief James Hussey, but other than that, there were no major problems as a result of the storm.

DPW superintendent Carl Sestito said many of the town's trees were OK despite the high winds. "There were a few big ones," that came down, including trees on North Main Street, South Main Street and Ripley Road, which closed the roads for a short time and caused power outages.

Hussey said the South Main Street tree knocked out power along the Scituate and Cohasset border. "Some were out of power for a couple of hours, some for longer," he said. In addition, some smaller trees fell causing individual power outages for specific households, he said.

As with many storms, high tide can be a concern and Hussey said there were portions of Cohasset — for which flooding is a regular occurrence — that received some minor flooding. "We lucked out pretty well," he said.

Sestito added the DPW was able to easily control the flooding and echoed Hussey's sentiments. "We lucked out," he said.

Harbormaster John Muncey said the harbor was fairly quiet during Tuesday's storm as well. "Only one boat broke loose," he said, of the between 30 and 40 which are docked. He added the waves in the harbor were roughly two feet.

Hussey said overall, Cohasset and its neighboring towns were minimally affected. "I heard some people from Hull say, 'This is minor league stuff'," he quipped.

A utility worker walks over to help with the cleanup on South Main Street Tuesday. The tree, downed by the high wind gusts from the nor'easter that ripped through town that day, caused power outages in both Cohasset and Scituate when it damaged a transformer.

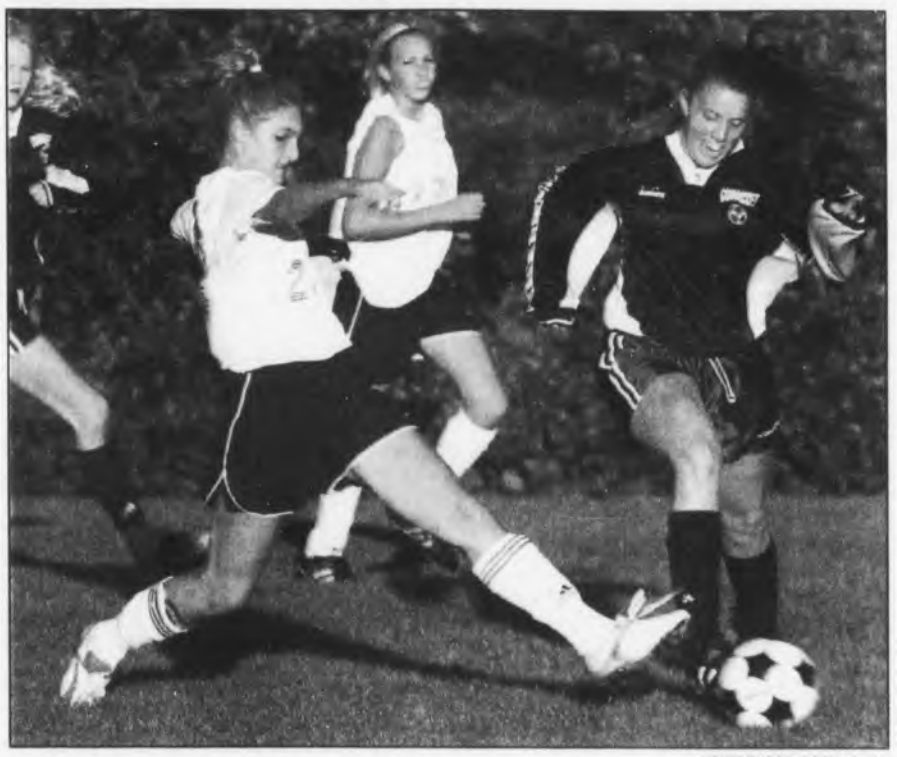
Girls soccer's magic number: 2

A couple wins in last 3 games means another trip to postseason

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM



At 6-8 heading into Wednesday night's game against Hull, the Cohasset girls soccer team found itself in a situation where they need to win three out of their next four games to qualify for the state tournament.

It's one down, two to go, as the Skippers prevailed 2-0 against the Pirates in Hull. The girls need to go at least 2-1 in their last three, and head coach Deb Beal says it can be done.

"Do I think we can? There's no doubt in my mind, but it is going to take some heart and determination," she said. "We have had a lot of games in a lot of days, and with all the other things going on in school it has made it that much longer."

On Oct. 17 the Skippers hosted Abington, a 3-1 loss for Cohasset.

"Abington was a good game for us in the sense that we played hard and we executed some good play to create some opportunities for ourselves," Beal said. "We don't quit, which is great to see when the team is so young. These kids work hard and play hard in every aspect of their young lives. They continue to impress me day in and day out with all the things they do, all the things they juggle and that they continue to devote two plus hours to this team everyday."

Cohasset's Haley Haracz (right) keeps the ball away from Norwell's Ashley Alman during the teams' match last Thursday.

The girls were scheduled to play Hull the next night, but the match was cancelled due to the threats of violence at the high school. Beal says the team's practices have been used not only to improve the team's game, but as a chance to get away from the extra worries that have been created lately at the school.

"These kids go to school and work very hard academically, and they put pride in their work. Then someone goes ahead and threatens the very institution they cherish so much," Beal said. "Soccer becomes less

Finally, South Shore League champions!

By Ben Libby
CORRESPONDENT

Not many people get the opportunity to say they are champions, but the members of the Cohasset golf team can.

With a win last Wednesday against Carver, Cohasset ended its season at 7-3 in the South Shore League, tying with Harwich for the league title.

With coach Torin Sweeney out for medical reasons, the team stepped it up and won the most important match of the season over Carver, 32-22, at Cohasset Golf Club.

"Going into the match, we knew we had a very good chance to win, and we won it for Mr. Sweeney," said senior Mark Bouchard, who shot a 40 and won 7-2 on the day, giving Cohasset valuable points out of the No. 2 spot. "With Mr. Sweeney out, it was hard because it's always good to have him around, especially in big matches like this."

Although junior Kevin Barber lost, 4-5, he still managed to give the team four valuable points out of a difficult No. 1 spot. Also coming up big for the team were senior Chris Bryan, sophomore Charlie Czerkawski and senior Mike Devlin. Bryan won his No. 4 match 6-3, while Czerkawski won his No. 4 match 5-4 and Devlin won his No. 6 match 7-2.

Junior Zach Murray, one of the most consistent players all season, lost 4-5 in arguably one of the toughest spots in the league at No. 3.

For seniors Bryan, Bouchard and Devlin it was a good way to end the season. Going in to the year, many wondered how the team would finish, with a majority of the team inexperienced at the varsity level. But now these players can look up at the gym rafters and see their league championship banner sitting there, for they are South Shore League Champions.

Sweeney said Wednesday a big factor in the boys' success was their willingness to put in extra time and effort.

"Probably the most impressive thing is how hard these kids worked at their game," the coach said. "They really put in a lot of time before and after practice chipping and putting especially. That probably made the difference for us."

Sweeney also commended the efforts of sophomore Chris Mills and freshmen John Stanton and John Wade when they were called upon to compete.

One final thing to note, Kevin Barber and Mark Bouchard were named South Shore League All-stars, a well deserved honor to the team's captains.

CHS boys on a roll

SCITUATE - Even with their team ahead 2-0 and in total control of the game, Cohasset boys soccer fans were a little uneasy heading into the second half of the Skippers' game with Scituate on Wednesday.

A strong, gusty wind was blowing that day, and after having it at their back in the first 40 minutes, the Skippers would be up against the gusts in the second half.

It didn't seem to make a difference. Although they didn't add to their account, the Skippers continued to control the run of play, and came back to Cohasset with a strong 2-0 win.

Afterward, Cohasset head coach Rob Leary raved about his team's performance in the conditions.

"I was very impressed with that second half, playing against the wind like that," Leary said. "I think we took it to them in the second half."

Things did not start out well for Cohasset on this day. The team was having difficulty keeping its shape and connecting on passes. Leary called a timeout just 10 minutes in, after which Cohasset took the pitch looking like a completely different team.

Soon after the timeout, Mike Grimm executed a nice turn and shot just inside the penalty area, with the shot going inches wide of the post. The sophomore didn't miss five minutes later, however, as he volleyed a cross from the left flank past Scituate keeper Greg Hall for a 1-0 Skippers lead.

Senior Aidan Buick doubled the score line in the 20th minute - just 60 seconds after Grimm's goal - with a great left-footed shot from 20 yards out. The score was Buick's 25th of the season.

The Skippers made that lead stand, for various reasons. One was the play of midfielders Ben Libby and Sam Roth. Libby played a strong second half on the left wing, keeping pressure on the Sailors defense with his hustle to 50-50 balls and smart passes ahead to attacking players. Roth, meanwhile, was all over the place in Scituate's third of the field and nearly scored a goal of his own in the 53rd when he just missed near the post off a great ball from Buick.

Cohasset's attack was complimented by a fine showing from the defense. Playing perhaps his best match of the season was sophomore sweeper Evan Deutsch, who played his position perfectly and cleared out any Scituate counter-attack that came his way.

Leary said Deutsch's progression over the last few weeks has made an already solid defense that much better.

"Evan has been strong," Leary said. "He's only a sophomore. The upperclassmen were a little nervous having him back there, but they're really getting along. They've basically learned how to play together, and I think the kids feel comfortable with Evan now."

CHS field hockey need five points in last four games to make tourney

By Evan Deutsch and Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENTS

This year has not exactly been a stroll through Wompatuck Park for the Cohasset field hockey team. But after a first half of very rough sledding, they have rebounded very nicely.

Between the raindrops of mid-October, the Lady Skippers notched two very impressive wins. Then the league-leading Rough Riders of Harwich slipped into town on an overcast Saturday last weekend.

To put these visitors in perspective, last year they ended the season 18-2-1. This year, they remain on pace to finish the same or better.

So a Cohasset victory would have shocked even the most loyal Cohasset fans. It wasn't to be, however, as the Skippers fell by a 4-0 score. One would think last Saturday's Harwich loss would have put a damper on things.

Not in the mind of head coach Deb Bostwick, however, as she and her players agree that they lacked nothing on the effort side. To start, goalie Aaron Bigley turned in what Bostwick called "one of his strongest performances." He held the Rough Riders to only one first-half goal.

Bostwick added that the defense "played their socks off." Co-captain Katherine Whoriskey, Co-captain Remy Lee, Ellen Tarpey, Vanessa Plante and Sally Meehan all delivered rock-solid performances - no sticks in the mud with this group.

The middies did their job controlling, well, the middle. Co-captain Mia Lieb-Lappen, Christie Muir, Alida Tangherlini, and Corinna Durham all showed good effort.

On the offensive side of the game, Bostwick said Cohasset missed several opportunities. Their shots just never landed the way they wanted them to, despite some trying efforts.

Skippers goalie Aaron Bigley has come up with some big saves in his team's last several games, putting them in position to get into the postseason.

"We ran out of steam at the end," admitted Tarpey. "You can't afford to let up against teams like Harwich. That was the difference in the game."

"If we can just maintain the intensity and keep our feet moving, we will land a spot in the tourney."
Senior Erin Liddell

So where does Cohasset head from here? Senior Erin Liddell said after the Harwich game that, if the team's current level of play keeps up, the Skippers will be playing in November.

"We're on a roll," said Liddell. "If we can just maintain the intensity and keep our feet moving, we will land a spot in the tourney."

Cohasset 1, Westwood 0

The girls had their first test on Monday night, entering a 'must win' game against Westwood High School. Before the game, Bostwick said she told her team that this was a game they had to have, and to not settle for a tie.

Well, the team listened, alright.

It wasn't the prettiest game they have played all season, but the Skippers stuck it out for a 1-0 win over Westwood.

In the first half of the game, very little happened for either team. Cohasset had some opportunities down in the other teams end, but just couldn't capitalize. The closest any team came to scoring was when one of the Westwood forwards had a clean shot on the net, but Bigley made a great save, deflecting the ball with his leg pad. Other than this, there was little action and both teams entered the half scoreless.

The second half started out the same as the first half, with neither team getting anything done

Cohasset High football head coach Tony Rolfe addresses his team during a timeout against Nantucket earlier this season. Rolfe and his Skippers improved to 4-1-2 last Friday night with a 34-0 win at Weston. Cohasset doesn't play this weekend, giving them two weeks to prepare for next Friday's big South Shore League clash with Abington. Like the Skippers, Abington is 2-0 in league play. The Green Wave are hosting Norwell tonight.

important because of all the things going on at school. We use our practice time and game time as a release from it all, its an opportunity for them to decompress and to talk and ask questions and share feelings."

Last Thursday, Cohasset traveled to take on then undefeated Norwell. The outcome was a 7-1 loss, but the silver lining was the fact that the Skippers were able to score against Norwell, something not too many teams have done all season. Torey Hart scored on a penalty kick in the last minutes of the game.

Cohasset had the additional challenge of dealing with a stoppage 30 minutes into the game when Norwell's Jackie Vickers scored the 100th goal of her high school career, followed by an on the field celebration. Beal praised her team for their patience and the way they proceeded to play for the entire match.

"We continued to fight and played hard, something we didn't do as well at when we played them earlier in the season," said the coach.

The Skippers got back in the win column last Friday when they traveled to Harwich. After the 80-minute bus ride, Cohasset was given just 20 minutes to warm up, but the team was able to cope and returned home with a 5-0 victory. Scorers that afternoon were Lindsey Durkin, Gabby Flibbotte, Sarah Coggins, Molly Trahon and Maggie McGoldrick.

The next day, Saturday, it was off to Holbrook for the team's third game in three days.

"Holbrook is always a great game for us," Beal said. "We match up evenly and it is usually a good, clean game."

Saturday proved to be no different, and the Skippers came out on top, 2-0. Beal said her team "seemed to be having a good time and playing smart soccer," and it showed in the way they played. Flibbotte (two goals) and Hart (two assists) connected twice that afternoon.

Melissa Crowley-Buck made it count with a solid game in between the posts. The senior keeper has come back from a knee injury "in great spirits and has really stepped up her leadership role on this team," says Beal.

After a much needed day of rest, the Skippers again made the lengthy trip down Route 3, this time to Mashpee. Unfortunately for Cohasset, this trip resulted in a 3-1 loss. Beal said afterward field conditions and sloppy play contributed to the loss.

Mashpee scored first, but Cohasset equalized right off the ensuing kickoff, with Hart assisting Durkin on the score. The Skippers appeared to have the momentum at that point, but Falcons goals at the end of the first half and early in the second led to the 3-1 final.

With yesterday's game with Cape Cod Academy - a team that Cohasset defeated handily earlier in the season - the Skippers were hoping to get back to the .500 mark. As it stands today, the girls have two games left next week: Tuesday at home against Holbrook (3:30 p.m. kickoff), and the following day, same place and time, against Scituate.

"I do believe that this team will continue to fight and will achieve the goals we have set out to meet," Beal said. "I hope to remain healthy and to continue to challenge each and every team we meet. The progress we have made and the experience we have gained is immeasurable. I hope the girls have had as much fun as I have had and will take these memories with them and continue to train hard and finish strong."

Beal added that she hopes her team will soon see the return of co-captain Emilie Shea, who has been sidelined with illness and is "on the mend, hopefully to help us at tournament time," said the coach.

It's in their hands on offense. This type of play for these two teams progressed until the 9:40 mark. Senior co-captain Katie James, playing center forward, shot and scored the only goal of the game with an assist from junior Caitlin Hurley, who was playing center halfback. The play was set up by another Whoriskey, playing center fullback. Cohasset sealed the victory with good defense in the closing seconds to keep the 1-0 lead.

Cohasset's Aniko Haber finishes the 2-mile race in first place among females (and sixth overall) with a time of 14:34 at the 9th annual Joshua's Run for the Jimmy Fund last Saturday in Scituate. For complete results from the race, which featured many local runners, log on to www.coolrunning.com.

After the game, Bostwick mentioned Cohasset's 11-3 advantage in penalty corners and attributed that to a strong defensive performance, as the back line kept the ball out of their end of the field. The defense was led by Lee, Tarpey, Michelle Madge, Meehan, and Katherine Whoriskey.

"We played flat the first half and didn't capitalize, but our defense played great," Bostwick said after the game.

Cohasset ended the day with a 5-6-1 record for the season and 11 total points. To enter the tournament they will need to get five more points in their final four games which, with postponements Tuesday and Wednesday, will be played in four days: Marshfield yesterday, Norwell tonight (6 p.m.), neighbor Scituate Saturday (9 a.m.), and at Westwood on Saturday (11 a.m.). Bostwick said she realizes all of these teams are very good and that they will be tough opponents.

Making it to the tournament is certainly within reach, however, for this team has already shown that they can win "must-win" games.

Replays of the Cohasset High School football games can be seen on channel 10. Games are replayed every week at three different days and times: Wednesdays at 5:30 p.m., Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 8 p.m.

COASTAL STARS

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 Team defeated the Cape Cod 2 Squirt Team 6 to 1 on 10/15/05 at the Hobomock Arena. This was a solid effort by the Stars skaters. Passing was stressed in this game and the Stars responded with over fifty passes.

Goalie, Kal Maier, once again played a great game in the net. He only allowed one goal. Chris Lund played a great game at both forward and later in the game at defense. He added an assist on the fourth goal of the day. Brandon Winn and Matthew Scullion both scored two goals apiece in the first period to the set the tone for the Stars. Brandon added two more goals in the second period, one of these was unassisted on a great breakaway. Mikey Lund chipped in three assists on the day.

Forwards Brendan O'Connell, Henry Brown, Matt McQuillan, and Max Marsden all skated with great speed at both ends of the ice. Brendan added an assist on the second goal of the day. Defensemen Colin Bell, William Marsden, Adam Cowie-Haskell, and Tommy Prendergast kept the Cape Cod team out of their end for most of the game. Adam and Tommy moved up to forward in the third period and were solid rushing the puck into the Cape Cod zone.

Great job by the Stars squad.

Squirt C2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team played their third game on Sunday against a feisty team from Duxbury at Hobomock Arena. In the first period, the Stars scored with an unassisted goal from Tom Pilat. Jack Conlon, assisted by Dan Cronin and Tom Pilat, quickly racked up another goal. The Stars defense of Joe Proctor, Brodie Jackisch, Sam Asnault, and Jake Denton were working to keep Duxbury scoreless, but Duxbury had other plans.

Soon the team from Duxbury began their offensive strike. Goalie Hugh Healey made many great saves, with wings Mats Nelson, Derek Benson, Cameren Mastrangelo and Jake Moore keeping on the pressure. Duxbury struck twice, but Stars' wing David Craig, assisted by Tom Pilat, scored the third goal, but Duxbury quickly answered back.

Jake Denton scored the Stars' 4th goal to tie the game at 4-4. In a heartbreaking finish with no more than a minute till the buzzer, Duxbury scored for a 5-4 win over the Stars.

The Stars C-2 team is looking forward to the return of Tim Cavanaro next week. Tim broke his leg in a non-hockey injury and was sidelined early on.

Anyone looking for some afternoon excitement, found it at Hobomock Arena when the C-2 Stars faced off with the Scituate Seahawks. The Seahawks scored first early in the period, sending the Stars a wake-up call. Hard work by Hugh "Huge" Healey and the Stars' defense of Brodie Jackisch, Jack Conlon, Jake Denton and Joe Proctor kept pushing back on the Seahawks offense. Then late in the first period, Tom Pilat, assisted by Jake Denton pulled the game even at 1-1.

The second period was all hard work but no goals scored. Due the constant backchecking and forechecking of Stars' wings Cameren Mastrangelo, Jake Moore, David Craig, Daniel Cronin and Derek Benson, there were many opportunities, many shots on net, but none turned the light red.

The third period started with the score still 1-1. The play was a continuation of the exciting efforts of both teams seen in the second period until Center Mats Nelson came out of the corner with the puck, deeked the Seahawks goalie and fired off a backhander for the game winning goal! Mats was assisted by David Craig

Stars C2 will play against Weymouth on Sunday, Oct 30 at Pilgrim Rink in Hingham

Mite C3

The Coastal Stars Mite C3 hockey team defeated a strong Hanover team 4 to 1 Saturday at Gallo Arena in Bourne.

Hanover took an early one to nothing lead in the first period with a breakaway goal just beating Stars goalie Jack Kaetzer. The Stars then applied great offensive pressure for the rest of the period getting good scoring chances by Richard Reid, Daniel Tobin, Derek McDermott and Harry Sheldon. The Stars finally got on the board in the final shift of the period as Seamus Ryan took a feed from Richard Reid and beat a diving Hanover goaltender to tie the score. Jack McNeil also assisted on the goal. Jacob Latta played a strong period on defense for the Stars with several heads up plays getting the puck out of his own end.

The Stars took the lead 2 to 1 early in the second period when Seamus Ryan fired a wrist shot from the left side of the net beating the goaltender for his second goal of the game. Jack Kaetzer kept Hanover off the board during the period with a number of great saves including a diving save on an uncontested breakaway.

The Stars went up 3 to 1 later in the period when Jack McNeil scored on a one timer. Marshall Feeney, Brian Neuls, and Shane Comeau hustled throughout the period and displayed some solid back checking in support of goalie Jack Kaetzer.

From the Start of the third period the Stars stayed aggressive. Harry Sheldon displayed some solid back during the period keeping Hanover from getting any good scoring chances. Will Shaw, Cole Mckenzie, Derek McDermott and Brodie Fuller showed great team work passing the puck well and getting several shots on goal.

Austin Sullivan, who was a rock on defense through out the game, broke up two Hanover scoring chances including one on a diving sweep check of the puck. Colin Murray scored the final goal of the game when he took a nice feed from Sean Feeney and beat the goalie with a one timer.

ond place in the South Shore League (behind Harwich), has been playing its best soccer of the season since last Monday's disappointing 1-1 tie at Cardinal Spellman, a side the Skippers had dominated in a preseason scrimmage.

The Skippers are 4-0 since that match, outscoring their opponents 11-2 in the process. One of the team's three senior captains, Buick said after the Scituate win that the Spellman game was a turning point in the Skippers' season.

"We just learned from our mistakes," Buick said. "We weren't moving the ball well in that game. We practiced that and got it right."

Wednesday's win was the first of a three game in three day stretch for Cohasset, who hosted Hull yesterday and are home this afternoon (4 p.m. kickoff) against Bridgewater-Raynham. B-R, a solid Div. 1 program, will be looking to avenge a 4-2 loss to Cohasset in the teams' Sept. 6 season opener.

The boys finish their regular season Wednesday at home with a rematch against Scituate, scheduled to begin at 5:30. Leary is looking to develop a more balanced offensive attack in preparation for the state tournament.

"We have to put the ball in the net more consistently, and we have to have other people put the ball in the net besides Aidan," Leary said. "We just need a little more consistency, and they can't get full of themselves. If we can stay focused, I think we'll be a really good team."

Cohasset's last three wins came against Norwell (2-1), Carver (3-0) and Mashpee (4-1). A common theme in all three games, according to Leary, was his team's ability to control the run of play.

Roth and Buick got the goals against Norwell, which also featured a stellar defensive game from senior stopper Sam MacDonald. Buick scored two more against Carver, with Roth opening the Skippers' account 15 minutes in. That win, which clinched a state tournament berth, saw strong performances from Danny Brady and Chris Ofsthun.

Buick (two goals), Roth and Grimm got the goals against Mashpee on Monday. All three each picked up an assist, as the Skippers had a 4-0 lead within 30 minutes, and cruised from there.

SPORTS NOTES

Youth lacrosse registration begins Nov. 5

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the 2006 spring season on Saturday, Nov. 5 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the auditorium at Town Hall.

The early registration day – held simultaneously with Recreation basketball sign-ups – gives families the opportunity to save some money.

Registrants on Nov. 5 will get the 2005 spring season price of $140 for one player and $260 for two. Registrants after November 5 – and sign-ups will remain open through a second in-person sign-up day in January – will pay the 2006 price of $150 for one player and $275 for two.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). The 2006 season will mark the first time Cohasset has fielded a full-time team in the youngest age bracket for girls.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset participates in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, which does not keep standings or have playoffs. Every team makes several road trips per year, which be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Martha's Vineyard.

In addition, the program is hopeful of attending a jamboree near the end of its season, and is working to develop a special Memorial Day weekend program with teams visiting from out of state. The season ends with Cohasset's annual Family Day in June.

The youth program is likely to field 12 or more teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of that growth, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away.

"We will have this initial sign-up in November, then allow people to mail in registration forms up until our final sign-up at the high school in early January," says Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "At that point, we're likely to be at our ideal roster sizes, meaning there may be no late registration whatsoever."

Parents who can not attend the Nov. 5 registration can wait until Jan. 7 to do it in person at the second sign-up day or can contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. The season concludes in mid-June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Nov. 5 sign-up. If you need more information, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Cohasset Recreation activities

Learn to ski program - Ragged Mountains

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with Buckles and boards Ski Shop of Marshfield announces registrations for a learn to ski/snowboard program, to be held, Tuesday, Nov. 8, from 3 to 6 p.m., at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 41 Highland Ave., Town Hall, Cohasset. Trips this year include Ragged Mountain, Mount Sunapee, and Bretton Woods.

The program will be open to all ages but children must be able to participate on their own. There will be an adult chaperone to assist; however, children must be able to function with minimal assistance ie: ages 7 and over.

The fee for this program is $269.99 per student, and rental information will be available at registration.

This year will be 5 Saturday trips starting in December through March 4, 2006. There will be four 1 1/2 hour lessons and 5 full day ski lift tickets included in the $269.99 package.

Cohasset Recreation/ Boosters Basketball Registration 2005-2006

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's Basketball registrations will be held for boys and girls in grades 1 through 8, at the Town Hall, on Saturday, Nov. 5, from 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for the program is $75. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club (CBBC), shirt charge is included in the fee. Details on the Basketball Program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid any conflicts. The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Booster Club and the Recreation Department, providing youngsters with a teaching and recreational opportunity. Coaches and Sponsors are needed. You may sign-up at registration.

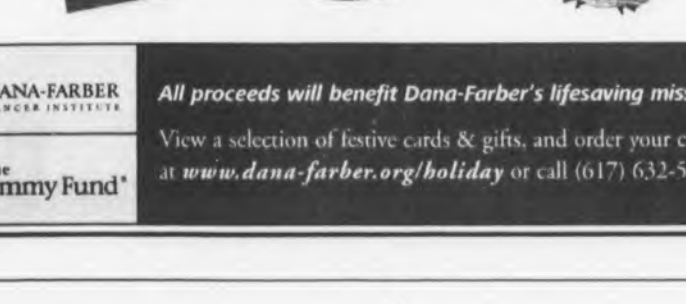
During this registration there will be registrations for Spring Lacrosse for grades 3-8.

Chatterton Golf Tournament a success

The Second Annual Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund Golf Tournament was held on Monday, Oct. 17 at Hatherly Country Club.

The event was a great success due to the generous support of its sponsors: Atlantica, Best Western Adams Inn, Blount Seafood, Black Bear Company, Boston Form LLC, BB&T Capital Markets, Burgin-Platner-Hurley Insurance, Bruce Cameron and Family, Curtis Liquors, Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804, Caldwell Banker, Carpenter Family, Ted Donato and Family, Jeff DiModica and Family, DiGirolamo Family, Andy Downes and Nike, John and Rita Durkin, John Durkin and Family, Bob Durkin and Family, Bob Donahue and Family, Evans Home Improvement, Hatherly Country Club, Harmon Golf Club, Harborside Wine and Spirits, Phil Mahoney and Family, Jack McNeill and Family, George H. Mealy Legion Post #118, Pacific Growth Equities, Red Lion Inn, John Reidy and Family, Bruce Riccio and Mizuno Golf, Bill Roy and Family, Rosano Davis, South Shore Music Circus, Chet Stone and Family, VPNE Parking Solutions, Adam Whitman and Family, Bernard's and Tusk Creative Graphics.

The purpose of the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund is to enhance the athletic and recreational opportunities at the Clark Chatterton Athletic Complex and in the town of Cohasset primarily through one-time projects and gifts to facilities. Since its inception in 2001, the fund has contributed over $40,000 to different projects in Cohasset.



We'll make you smile.

Osgood School first graders make music together

First graders at the Osgood Elementary School are learning to play beat patterns with Mrs. Hathon in music class.

They're playing on xylophones and metallophones while singing seasonal songs. Children also play percussion instruments in the songs as special sound effects.

This activity helps them practice their music listening skills as well as their awareness of rhythm. The children play classroom percussion instruments in place of words used for sounds such as "clomp, clomp" as the story "The Little Old Lady Who Was Not Afraid of Anything" by Linda Williams, is read aloud.

Children in need of special education

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age three through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 16-21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Linda Gill, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

Bully Busters is topic

Licensed school psychologist Alan Jacobson, Ph.D., will presents a lecture "Bully Busters - Managing your Child's School Environment" on – Friday, Nov. 4 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Library. He will discuss the nature of bullying from all perspectives. Emphasis on assisting children in dealing with a bullying situation. Focus paid to why children bully, who bullies are, likely targets, and empowering witnesses. Attention also given to helping the bullying child. The free lecture is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

As director of Bayview Associates, Dr. Jacobson runs a large out-patient program treating adults, children, and adolescents in individual, group and family therapy settings. His experience includes consulting to area schools and community groups for the past eight years. A columnist on mental health issues for the Patriot Ledger newspaper, Jacobson developed the noted "Bully Busters" workshop program.

For more information call Social Service League at 781-383-0771.

School week gets back to normal

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Unlike last week which began with a threat and had more news than we could write, this week opened as a normal one with not much happening. The gun threat last Sunday resulted in a two-hour delay on Monday and another bomb threat to the school. The latter of the two threats caused school to be cancelled last Tuesday, Oct. 18th and resulted in the banishment of bags in the school.

As a result, every time that a student enters the building they are subject to a search and if they have any sort of bag on them, plastic or paper, it is also subject to search. It is pretty difficult to carry all of your books in one hand and your lunch in the other, as you enter school on a rainy morning, believe you me. Now on to the school related news and events.

• The National Honor Society, advised by Mr. Newkirk, will have met on Tuesday, Oct. 25th to discuss the status of the organization and to brainstorm ideas on a community service project that they must complete in order to earn credit for NHS. If you have any ideas or recommendations for a project that these bright kids can partake in, please contact senior, Kelsey Bell, at her house.

It is pretty difficult to carry all of your books in one hand and your lunch in the other, as you enter school on a rainy morning, believe you me.

• If you are interested in the Debate Team, supervised by Ms. Womersley, you must meet with her at some point after school this week in room 114 located in the Middle School. There will have been a meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 25th for the students already participating in the program. The students already involved are: Kevin Barber, Lenny Brown, Brent Daly, Ryan Daly, Mike Devlin, Elizabeth Landon, John McCarthy, Nathan Needle, Tristram Norman, Colleen Richardson, Nils Sceery, John Sturino, and Ellen Wise.

• Members of the Math Club have been practicing after school with supervisor Mrs. Lee and are awaiting an upcoming competition. The team was chosen on Monday, Oct. 24th, but alternates are still being accepted and if you are interested please meet with Mrs. Lee after school in room 151.

• The Cohasset High School Art Magazine, which will appear with every issue of The Spinnaker as an insert, is looking for any pieces of art or poetry to be submitted into the magazine. Meetings are held in Ms. Berkowitz's room (room 264) every Tuesday and anyone is welcome to attend. Right now there are about 10 students involved actively with the magazine, and the editors are seniors Kate McBride and Molly Trisler.

• The High School Band has been evolving and has increased the number of students in the concert band from 23 to a whopping 65 members over the past four years. There are two Jazz Bands, as well as a Pep Band, and a Concert Band now in the Music Department. Director, Ms. Hoskin, has been instrumental (no pun intended) in developing and expanding this program since she took it over four years ago and is continuing to make the High School proud with her work.

• Attention all seniors, your senior write-up is due this Friday, Nov. 1st. There is an envelope in the main office where you can pick up and drop off the form.

That's all the news for this week, but hopefully with the storm bearing down on us, more news will develop and I will have more to write about next week. Have a nice Halloween weekend and enjoy the candy.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Post-prom committee

All parents of seniors at Cohasset Middle High School are encouraged to attend the 2006 post-prom meeting to be held Wednesday, Nov. 2, at 7 p.m., at the high school library. For parents who cannot attend the meetings, the committee also has things that can be done at home. For more information or if there are any questions, contact the post-prom co-chairs Derry Schwantner, Chris Taylor or Linda Bolster.

Calendar raffle

The CHSvarsity hockey team holiday calendar raffle begins Sunday, Nov. 6, when the varsity players will be selling raffle tickets to friends, neighbors and families for $5 each. All monies raised are used to purchase team equipment, continue team development and fund the Coach Dennis Walsh Hockey Scholarship sponsored by the Hockey Boosters.

Every day during December, as well as New Year's Day 2006, a ticket will be pulled from the raffle pool, and a variety of prizes donated by local merchants will be delivered to a lucky winner. With a total of 32 drawings, each ticket has 32 chances to win.

This year's prizes are valued at over $3,000 including a pair of $250 Maui Jim sunglasses, and a $175 automobile detailing at Cohasset Collision. In addition, there will be a special New Year's Day bonus drawing for $150. Players, parents and Hockey Boosters have expressed their sincere appreciation of the continuing support of area businesses who so generously support Cohasset youth.

Changes in IEPs

An Educational Consultation Services Program free workshop, Law has Changed: 2004 IDEA and its Impact on Individual Education Plans, will be held Tuesday, Nov. 1, at the Osgood School, 210 Sohier St. starting promptly at 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by the PSO - Parent Advisory Council, the training will aid parents in understanding how IDEA 2004 relates to their child's IEP.

Deer Hill fund-raiser

The fifth graders at the Deer Hill School are planning a fund-raiser to help defray the cost of next fall's annual trip to Camp Bournedale.

The week-long pilgrimage to Cape Cod is a favorite among sixth-graders and includes a wide array of science and exploration activities, from nature studies to rocketry. From Oct. 28 through Nov. 14, the students will be selling Kinnealey Meats, courtesy of Joe and Andrea Kinnealey of Cohasset, to help cover student costs for the trip. For more information call Bridget O'Brien at 781-383-9397.

Cafe de la Paix in Livgrot, Normandy, France

A foodie's French kiss

Normandy piques the culinary senses

By BARBARA RADCLIFFE ROGERS
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

The entire map of France reads like a menu, with names like Roquefort, Burgundy and Dijon. Each region has its own claim to foodie fame, but Normandy trumps them all with oysters, calvados, cider, France's best butter and a trio of famous cheeses. These make a tasty theme for harvest-season explorations of this northwestern corner of France, more often visited for its World War II landing beaches.

The region serves up food-and-drink-themed routes that are clearly mapped and signposted. Those who love fine cheese should begin in Normandy's Calvados region, in a trio of towns whose very names evoke a well-stocked cheese board: Liverot, Pont-l'Eveque and Camembert. By happy chance, this small, gently rolling area known as Pays d'Auge is also in the heart of Normandy's cider country.

The pleasant small city of Lisieux, between Liverot and Pont-l'Eveque, is on a direct train line from Paris, making it a good center for travelers following cheese and cider trails. Its Saturday market is one of Normandy's best, an entire square filled with row on row of vendors and farmers selling organic cider, fresh oysters, pates, cheeses, sausages, breads, bright berries and mounds of fruit from local orchards. It's the perfect place to assemble a picnic to carry into the countryside.

But the market is not Lisieux's only attraction. This was the home of the little girl who would become the much-loved St. Theresa, "The Little Flower," canonized in the 1920s. Thousands of pilgrims come from all over the world to visit sites that include her home, convent and the magnificent hilltop basilica built to honor her.

Close by, in the center of town, is the Gothic cathedral where she prayed as a child. Just down the street from the cathedral are the area's best authentic breads and pastries, at Maitre Artisan

Fresh local cheeses in Normandy

A foodie's French kiss

Boulanger Huese Gilbert on Ave Victor Hugo.

Renting a car is the best way to visit the farms and cideries, and in tourist offices you will find excellent symbol-coded maps, showing producers of cheese, cider, Calvados, honey and foie gras. These maps give all the details you need to visit, including the open days and hours.

Or you can just follow the signs with apple emblems to tour the cider route. On the way you will find many other delectable stops. In the pretty town of Liverot, a few miles south of Lisieux, you can watch cheese being made at Le Village Fromager with descriptive information in English. Adjacent is Le Vivier, an excellent restaurant.

Not far south, a well-signed Camembert Route begins at the Camembert Museum in Vimoutiers, leading to cheese farms and cideries, including Ferme de la Herroniere, producer of AOC Camembert, an excellent stop for tasting and buying the authentic product.

The farms themselves are worthy of photo stops, with their brick-and-timber barns. Equally picturesque are the towns, especially Pont-l'Eveque, where timber framing is painted the bright colors traditional in Normandy.

Meandering the back roads of this gently rolling region in search of cider- and cheese-makers is only part of the lure for food-lovers. No day in France is complete without at least one leisurely meal prepared by a chef whose life revolves around his or her kitchen. Throughout this region are creperies, auberges, cafes and restaurants where you can sample a cuisine based on the freshest locally grown ingredients.

Dairy products, beef, shellfish and the produce of gardens and orchards provide a bountiful palette for culinary artists.

Order moules a la creme (mussels in rich local cream) and tarte normande, an open-faced apple pie. Although crepes are thought of as a specialty of the neighboring region of Brittany, they are just as popular in Normandy. Creperies serve them as all courses, from appetizers to desserts. Inside these paper-thin crepes you will find cheeses, woodland mushrooms, fresh-caught shellfish and fruits from nearby farms. Cider, usually served in pottery cups without handles, is the preferred drink; for an aperitif ask for kir Breton, a tasty combo of cider and Creme de Cassis.

Those planning to visit the war beaches and memorials will be entering Normandy's prime oyster-harvesting area. In Grandcamp Maisy, near Isigny (a two-hour drive from Lisieux) boats unload in the harbor at the center of the small town, directly into a waterside market area. You can eat whatever's in season, almost before it realizes it's left the sea.

Americans will find a warm welcome here and in all of Normandy, where memories of D-Day sacrifices are still surprisingly fresh. English is widely understood and local signs often welcome American visitors and returning veterans. The question you will be asked most often is if you had a family member who took part in the 1944 landing.

If You Go

Getting there: Air France (www.airfrance.com) and Continental (www.continental.com) serve Paris with direct flights from Boston. Train travel is easy and fast, and works well to avoid the drive from Paris to Normandy, or for adding other cities and regions to a longer itinerary. You can purchase Rail Europe passes before you leave home (www.raileurope.com, 888-382-7245). Auto Europe (www.autoeurope.com) offers good car rentals in France, and for travelers staying more than 17 days, leasing a new car from Renault Eurodrive is both economical and easy, with the most comprehensive insurance package and no age limits ($900 for 17-day lease, 800-221-1052, www.renaultusa.com).

The region serves up food-and-drink-themed routes that are clearly mapped and signposted.

Staying there: Hotel De La Place, a mile outside the center of Lisieux is good for those with cars (doubles $90-$110, www.bestwestern.com, 800-780-7234) and the equally reliable Terrasse Hotel ($75, www.logis-de-france.fr) is located in the center of town. In Livarot, try Le Vivier ($75, www.logis-de-france.fr).

'Message of Hope to a Troubled World'

Rabbi Chiel served as rabbi of Temple Emanuel in Newton from 1968 until his retirement in 1995

Glastonbury Abbey's Inter-Religious Lecture Series presents "Listening To Other Voices: Religion and The World We Live In", at 7:15 p.m. at the Glastonbury Conference Center on Thursday, Nov. 17, Rabbi Samuel Chiel will talk about "Judaism's Message of Hope to a Troubled World."

Rabbi Chiel served as rabbi of Temple Emanuel in Newton from 1968 until his retirement in 1995. During those 27 years, Rabbi Chiel brought his unique combination of erudition, insight and warmth. He serves as Scholar-in-Residence at the Combined Jewish Philanthropies and as a Special Advisor to the President of Hebrew College as well as Director of its newly created Rabbinic Institute. He is the Jewish Scholar in the interfaith program New Directions: Catholic-Jewish Dialogue, sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League and the Archdiocese of Greater Boston.

Reservations recommended at 781-749-2155. Lectures are free - donations gratefully accepted.

FOUR STORES ONLY: BURLINGTON, HAVERHILL, HANOVER AND SHREWSBURY

SKI MORE... WORK LESS

The skiers I know would rather spend their hard-earned money at the ski resorts and on the slopes than in the equipment shops and the sporting goods stores.

Maybe that's why our last few ski events have been so successful. When you can save 40% to 74% off their prices, even the snowboarders pay attention!

... AND MORE!

OVER $2 MILLION BUCKS

...Worth at their retail! Plundered from ten different ski shops that serve the resorts of New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont

Every year they have to re-stock their boutiques with the latest styles and colors of ski and snowboard equipment for their 'price is no object' customers. And every year they have to find a new home for last year's inventory...and every year they have to raise some cash to restock.

That's where we come in: we travel all over, making deals and carting those finds back to our warehouse so we can work them for this, our annual Ski and Snowboard event.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

- BEGINNERS

If you've been thinking about skiing, this is where you start. You don't want to invest a lot of money in something you may or may not like...like that treadmill in the attic.

- ROCK SKIERS

Early In the Fall, and late in the Spring, the snow gets kind of sparce. That's when smart skiers break out the skis they didn't spend a lot of money on.

- EXPERTS

You'll see great brands: the same ones that you see in the sporting goods stores and the ski shops; plus you'll see great bargains on test skis that are lent to the ski reviewers who write for those ski magazines!

HUGE SELECTION!

FROM $59.00 RENTAL SKI AND BINDING PLUS $49 SNOWBOARD AND BINDING

TO DYNASTAR 800 SERIES DEMO SKIS WITH LOOK BINDINGS THEIR $1,210.00 $599.00 OUR PRICE

BRIAN, BOB & ED HAVE BEEN AT HARD LABOR...

...Since last Summer, calling on the ski shops, making the deals, shipping the goods, and marking them down so that we could make this ski and snowboard event the biggest and best in Building #19 history.

They made deals for last year's rental skis and snowboards(both with bindings) . Demo skis, overstock skis, and even test skis that they send to the experts to review for the ski magazines.

They also came away with a great pile of jackets pants, gloves, goggles, scarves, and hats, too.

30-DAY 100% SATISFACTION OR YOUR MONEY BACK GUARANTEE!

We're trying to make friends and customers...We're not just selling skis and snowboards. That's why we offer such a guarantee: if you're not happy in any way with your purchase... Whether it's a $1.59 scarf or a $600 pair of skis... bring it back within 30 days for a full refund.

Shop around...Ask your friends what they think...try 'em out on the slopes. But don't keep any purchase longer than 30 days unless you are convinced it is a genuine, bonafide, good-enough-to-brag-about

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

ALL CHARGED UP

Zinc air batteries have become the most prevalent power source for hearing instruments. They allow for fewer replacements and volume adjustments, as well as clearer tones and longer battery life. A zinc air battery uses air outside the battery as a power source. The factory-applied tab seals the air holes in the battery. The tab should not be removed until the battery is ready to be used. To activate the battery, simply remove the tab and wait about one minute prior to inserting the battery into the hearing instrument. This will allow time for air to enter and activate the ingredients. Replacing the tab when the battery is not in use will not extend the life of the battery.

In addition to the tiny, state-of-the-art hearing instruments currently on the market, today's technology is also evident in the tiny batteries that allow the devices to do their job. When your present hearing instrument is in need of replacement batteries, remember that FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER receives battery shipments on a regular basis, and we offer FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased. While you're here replenishing your battery needs at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, we'll check your hearing aid, too, to be sure it is working at its optimum performance. PH: 781-337-1144

P.S. Store hearing instrument batteries at room temperature.

Cook Estate still in limbo

Deer Hill Partners pulls out of project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

How the Cook project will proceed is anyone's guess, but at this point it does not look like Deer Hill Partners will be the development company to carry the project forward.

In the interest of abiding by state procurement laws, the town sent a letter to the company last week which asked whether it would be able to close the deal with the town by the maximum extension date of Jan. 15, 2006. The Cook heirs have set Jan. 15 as the maximum extension date to close the deal with the town. Deer Hill was asked to commit to the closing date whether permits have been granted by the appropriate town boards or not. If the company could not commit to the closing date, the temporary award of the bid would expire.

Deer Hill Partners responded the January closing date "is not sufficient to obtain the requisite permits needed for the proposed development," and Deer Hill said it would therefore not be able to execute the Land Disposition Agreement with the town. A Land Disposition Agreement, or LDA is a document similar to a purchase and sale. Therefore, Deer Hill Partners is no longer negotiating with the town to build its proposed 56-unit project on the Cook land, located on Sohier Street.

The board of selectmen received word from Deer Hill Partners Oct. 28 and sent a letter

Veterans Day Nov. 11

Cohasset's Veterans Day observances will take place at 11 a.m., Friday, Nov. 11 at Veterans Memorial Park at the Harbor. The public is encouraged to attend the brief ceremony that is expected to last 15 minutes.

Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, wants to compile at list of Cohasset men and women currently serving in the armed forces. Please contact him at 781-383-1055 ext. 1003 with names of those in the service.

As a reminder to our readers, Veterans Day is a federal holiday. U.S. Post Offices will be closed, which means there will be a delay in home delivery to subscribers. If you are a home-delivery customer, your newspaper will most likely be delivered on Saturday by your mail carrier. Copies of the newspaper will be available for purchase at local newsstands on Friday.

Most seniors can't qualify for affordable units

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Countless hours have been spent crafting bylaws and finding ways to provide affordable housing that will enable Cohasset's seniors to stay in town through their golden years. However, selectmen were given a wake-up call Tuesday when they were told the vast majority of Cohasset residents would not qualify to live in the affordable housing the town has been working so hard to build.

Representatives from Leggat McCall Properties — which is working with the town to build the 105-unit Cedarmere development on the 41-acre former Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street — came before the board in an effort to answer any questions it might have regarding the Local Initiative Program (LIP) affordable housing application it had submitted for the board's review.

Instead, Bob Engler, the 40B housing consultant hired by Leggat McCall, cleared up the misconceptions the board had Margaret Hall was an amazing woman with an amazing eye for photography. While technically, she was a Red Cross volunteer who had traveled overseas to help injured soldiers during World War I, the diary she wrote and the photographic records she kept qualify her as a bona fide journalist.

Just in time for Veterans Day, the Cohasset Historical Society will be unveiling a new exhibit displaying artifacts Hall, a North Cohasset resident, brought back from the war, as well as memoirs from her diary

Pin Oaks' death rooted in mystery

Tree warden says poison was used

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street has become the site of a possible attempted murder. The victim — a pair of unsuspecting pin oak trees which were given a lethal dose of an herbicide.

Tree Warden Andrew Swanson, a Massachusetts Certified Arborist (MCA), said he and MCA Gary Barrow have been paying close attention to the trees since they were planted in the spring of 2004. However, this spring, declining health strongly suggested someone had been trying to damage the trees on purpose.

"They had deformed foliage," said Barrow, adding mutated leaves are always a clear indication a tree has been

Volunteers for housing partnership

Selectmen plan to reinstate the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

The committee will be responsible for providing perspectives on creating affordable housing and will be guided by the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership. The MHP is a state agency that encourages the formation and ongoing efforts of town appointed partnerships and housing committees by providing financial assistance, training sessions and resource materials.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town may bring in a housing consultant to help the committee. The expert would provide training and bring members up to speed on affordable housing guidelines and regulations. The selectmen will ask the Community Preservation Committee to provide the funds necessary to hire the consultant at the December Special Town Meeting.

The board would like a variety of expertise on the CHP including someone from the Cohasset Housing Authority, in the real estate and banking fields, and members of the clergy. Interested citizens should send a letter of interest and/or résumé to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. by Nov. 17.

Charting a course for the fiscal future

Griffin crunches the numbers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin is on his way to charting a new budgetary path for the town. At a fiscal summit held Monday, Oct. 24, he presented his ideas for the future, which include a wide-variety of long-range initiatives.

Griffin said his long-range fiscal priorities will be finding ways to:

- Maintain and improve the quality of services for the town
- Address key community needs
- Begin to reduce the use of reserves to balance the operating budget
- Begin to reduce the ratio of debt service to the operating budget
- Begin to address traditional budget shortfalls

"I can guarantee you we cannot do all of these things this year," said Griffin, but having an outline will be a good start.

Using the reserves to balance the operating budget is a practice Griffin said must stop. He said for fiscal 2006, $325,000 in free cash, $75,000 in an overlay reserve, $80,000 in pension reserve and $50,000 from the sale of lots will be used. "We need to begin to wean ourselves off this," he said. "You use your savings at home not to pay the mortgage, but to fix the roof" and that is the same mentality the town should have, he said.

Griffin said the town should also strive to maintain an undesignated fund balance of at least 5 percent of the general operating budget. Griffin said 5 percent of the fiscal 2006 operating budget is $1,461,800, and as of June 30, Cohasset has $946,672 or 3.3 percent set aside which is "not bad," but should be higher.

The stabilization fund, which is mainly used to fund capital projects, should be maintained at 3 percent, which Griffin said is roughly $850,080. "We are at $502,757 or 1.8 percent," he said. The good news is "the stabilization fund is not used in this (fiscal 2006) budget," he said.

"We need to come to Town Meeting with a balanced budget."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Moving forward, another change Griffin would like to see take place is the way the budget is adopted. He said currently, when the town is considering a budget with an override, the budget figure brought to Town Meeting for approval includes the additional funds. If it does not pass, the budget is not balanced and it must be amended which means there is much work to be done by way of cutting.

He said it would make much more sense for a budget to be passed which is balanced, to ensure if the override does not pass, there will be no need for amendment at a later date. "We need to come to Town Meeting with a balanced budget," he said.

Griffin said the way overrides are dealt with could also change for the better. He said perhaps voters could be given a menu of options which clearly outline what will be accomplished with the additional funds if an override vote passes and help people clearly understand what their support will yield.

The fiscal year is still young and Griffin said ideas will be discussed with the board of selectmen as the year goes on. He said he will continue to give updates on the town's fiscal situation, especially as Town Meeting draws near. "I pledge to keep you advised, good, bad, or otherwise," he said.

This week in COHASSET

RTF closed Veterans Day

"The Recycling Transfer Facility will be closed on Friday, Nov. 11, in observance of Veterans Day."

Selectmen's meeting schedule detailed

Selectmen will hold a regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday, Nov. 8, and an additional meeting Thursday, Nov. 10. The additional meeting is required to give the board enough time to thoroughly discuss the articles which have been placed on the draft Town Meeting Warrant.

The board will also hold a regularly scheduled meeting Nov. 15. The Warrant will be sent off to the printer Nov. 18, to give enough time for printing before the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting. Please contact the selectmen's office for agenda information at (781) 383-4105.

Solicitation bylaw

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said a number of residents have been concerned with the increase in door-to-door solicitation, especially during dusk. He said currently, the town does not have any bylaws regulating solicitation, and he feels there should be something in place that requires people to go to the police department first and register before going door-to-door selling products. Selectmen said they would contact Town Counsel Paul DeRensis about drafting language to be voted on at the December Special Town Meeting. Dormitzer said any new bylaw would have to be written in such a way that children who also solicit, such as girls selling Girl Scout cookies, or even trick-or-treaters, would not be affected.

Master Plan draft

Selectman Rob Spofford said he has noticed various boards around town referring to the Master Plan or using it as a mechanism for decision-making when it is still a draft. "We need to either get it approved, or stop using it," he said. The planning board is responsible for approving the Master Plan and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he had thought the board had scheduled a hearing for sometime in September, but believes that hearing was pushed back. He said he would be in touch with the planning board to find out if the hearing has been rescheduled.

Opening on harbor comm.

Robert Cunningham has resigned from the harbor committee. There is now an open slot on the committee and interested residents are asked to send a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

Van drivers needed

Van drivers are needed at the Council on Elder Affairs. The commitment is only three hours, once per month, to drive the CEA vans to take elders shopping and do other essential errands, as well as bring them to the Center for lunch. To volunteer, call Martha Horsefield at (781) 383-9112.

Remove all dinghies

All dinghies must be removed from the Sailing Club docks by Friday, Nov. 4. Docks will be pulled for the winter on Saturday, Nov. 5 at 9 a.m. Extra hands welcome on Saturday at the Sailing Club.

Parking regulations to take effect Nov. 15

Winter parking regulations will be in effect from Nov. 15, through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators subject to a fine of $25.

Volunteers for housing partnership

Selectmen plan to reinstate the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

The committee will be responsible for providing perspectives on creating affordable housing and will be guided by the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership. The MHP is a state agency that encourages the formation and ongoing efforts of town appointed partnerships and housing committees by providing financial assistance, training sessions and resource materials.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town may bring in a housing consultant to help the committee. The expert would provide training and bring members up to speed on affordable housing guidelines and regulations. The selectmen will ask the Community Preservation Committee to provide the funds necessary to hire the consultant at the December Special Town Meeting.

The board would like a variety of expertise on the CHP including someone from the Cohasset Housing Authority, in the real estate and banking fields, and members of the clergy. Interested citizens should send a letter of interest and/or résumé to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. by Nov. 17.

Charting a course for the fiscal future

Griffin crunches the numbers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin is on his way to charting a new budgetary path for the town. At a fiscal summit held Monday, Oct. 24, he presented his ideas for the future, which include a wide-variety of long-range initiatives.

Griffin said his long-range fiscal priorities will be finding ways to:

- Maintain and improve the quality of services for the town
- Address key community needs
- Begin to reduce the use of reserves to balance the operating budget
- Begin to reduce the ratio of debt service to the operating budget
- Begin to address traditional budget shortfalls

"I can guarantee you we cannot do all of these things this year," said Griffin, but having an outline will be a good start.

Using the reserves to balance the operating budget is a practice Griffin said must stop. He said for fiscal 2006, $325,000 in free cash, $75,000 in an overlay reserve, $80,000 in pension reserve and $50,000 from the sale of lots will be used. "We need to begin to wean ourselves off this," he said. "You use your savings at home not to pay the mortgage, but to fix the roof" and that is the same mentality the town should have, he said.

Griffin said the town should also strive to maintain an undesignated fund balance of at least 5 percent of the general operating budget. Griffin said 5 percent of the fiscal 2006 operating budget is $1,461,800, and as of June 30, Cohasset has $946,672 or 3.3 percent set aside which is "not bad," but should be higher.

The stabilization fund, which is mainly used to fund capital projects, should be maintained at 3 percent, which Griffin said is roughly $850,080. "We are at $502,757 or 1.8 percent," he said. The good news is "the stabilization fund is not used in this (fiscal 2006) budget," he said.

"We need to come to Town Meeting with a balanced budget."

to runner-up in the bid process Cohasset Associates, owned by Cohasset resident Donald Staszko.

The Mariner obtained a copy of Staszko's response, which indicates the company is willing to work with the town to bring the project to fruition.

Cohasset Associates believes that if the town will be reimbursing carrying costs out of its profits, a speedy permit process should occur.

In the letter Staszko stated it is impossible to complete the purchase at this time in accordance with the original Request for Proposals — which outlines what the town would like to see built on the site — and LDA, unless the town is holding to its original proposal, 30 days to sign the LDA and five months to close. However, because the outside closing date apparently cannot be moved, Staszko stated the structure of the LDA would have to be modified to deal with the time constraints.

He stated the simplest way to keep the project moving would be for the town to purchase the property directly from the Cook heirs for $4.5 million, on or before the Jan. 15 deadline. If the town wishes to purchase the property, it will require Town Meeting approval. A draft article has already been prepared for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting Warrant, just in case it is needed. Staszko stated Cohasset Associates would then purchase the property from the town for $4.5 million, and because it bid $5.15 million, it would pay the roughly $650,000 balance of the purchase price after all permits are in place.

A second alternative would be for Cohasset Associates to purchase the property directly from the Cook Estate on Jan. 15, 2006 for $4.5 million, and then pay the $650,000 balance of the purchase price to the town after all permits are in place. Under this alternative, a fair allocation of the cost would allow Cohasset Associates to deduct the closing costs, interest, taxes, insurance, and protective maintenance and operating costs incurred from the date of the purchase to the date all necessary permits are granted, from the balance of the purchase price.

Cohasset Associates has discussed the project with its civil engineers and its fast track estimates would indicate all required permits could be applied for within three months, Staszko stated. The approval process is estimated to be two to five months. Two months is realistic only if the town uses its best efforts to facilitate permitting. Cohasset Associates believes that if the town will be reimbursing carrying costs out of its profits, a speedy permit process should occur. Under this proposal, there would have to be a mechanism for the town to repurchase the property in the event all required permits were not granted, he said.

"I can assure you that Cohasset Associates is willing to sit down in good faith to discuss options for the purpose of completing and LDA consistent with the original RFP and the changed circumstances," Staszko stated in the letter.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the board of selectmen will be discussing the response from Cohasset Associates next week, either at its Tuesday, Nov. 8 or Thursday, Nov. 10 meeting.

Summary of Cook expenditures

Sources of Funding

The following sources of funding for the Cook Estate were authorized:

Town Meeting appropriation $24,800
Reserve fund transfers $50,000
Town operating budget $15,545
Town Meeting bond authorization $4,500,000

Total $4,590,345

Out of pocket expenses

The following "out of pocket" expenses have been incurred or are anticipated:

Engineering services $47,228
Consulting services $142,551
Legal services to date $50,421
Legal services anticipated $25,000
Note issuance $7,263
BAN interest $12,277

Total $284,800

Deposits

The following deposits on the Cook property have been paid or are pending:

Initial deposit $200,000
First extension $20,000
Second extension $20,000
Third extension (pending) $20,000
Fourth extension (pending) $20,000

Total $280,000

Financial Implications

If by the outside closing date of Jan. 15, 2006, the town purchases the Cook property at the agreed upon price of $4.5 million, the deposits, then totaling $280,000, will be applied to the purchase price, and the town will owe a balance of $4,220,000 to the trustees. The town will require additional bonding authority of approximately $200,000 (total out-of-pocket expenses minus the expenses paid from direct appropriations and reserve fund transfers). In that case, the town will have to carry $4.7 million in temporary notes until the town disposes of the property at an approximate cost of $16,000 per month in interest. If it takes one year to dispose of the property, interest expense would total approximately $192,000. In such a case, the town would have incurred total expenses as follows:

Deposits $280,000
Balance due to trustees $4,220,000
Out of pocked expenses $284,800 temporary interest cost $192,000

Total $4,976,800

In other words, if the town purchases the property from the Cook trustees, the town would have to sell the property for approximately $5 million to "break even."
If the town does not acquire the property, the town will be out a minimum of $284,800 in out of pocket expenses, and all or a portion of the $280,000 in deposits.

Selectmen reluctantly agree to sign LIP application

Unhappy with route process took

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The board of selectmen will send along the completed LIP application submitted by Cedarmere developers, but it is not happy with the process that has brought it to this point.

The board says it is no fault of Leggat McCall Properties — the developers who bought the project from Cohasset residents David and Kelli Calhoun and their business partner Tom Ragno of Lexington — but that all along, it should have been more involved in the application process. The board was recently surprised to find out the 105-unit proposed Cedarmere senior housing development will not include any rental units.

However, the former developers and some members of the planning board say while affordable units have always been a part of the project, they were never designated as being rentals.

Cedarmere will have a total of 105 units on its 41acres, of which 60 will be luxury town homes which will likely sell within the $1 million range. There will also be 14 market-rate ownership condominiums in a building dubbed the Manor House, which will sell for slightly less. A building dubbed the Westerly House will hold all 27 of the affordable ownership condominiums at Cedarmere. The building will also hold four market-rate ownership condominiums.

The LIP, or Local Initiative Program application, will allow the affordable units in the Westerly House to "count" toward the town's affordable housing stock. The town is trying to meet a state-mandated 10 percent affordability threshold. The board of selectmen is required to endorse the application before it is sent on to the state Department of Housing and Community Development for final approval.

"The danger for us is that we wouldn't get credit for something that is built out."
— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

The board of selectmen approved a LIP application submitted by the previous Cedarmere developers in January of this year. However, the DHCD returned the application, saying it was incomplete. Now the board is being asked to sign the second application, which has been updated by Leggat McCall and definitively does not include rental units. Some members of the board of selectmen were hesitant to sign, as in their minds, the application was for a different project than they had previously approved.

Town Counsel Rich Hucksam was on hand to help answer questions about the LIP process. He said in his opinion, having the endorsement of the board is the only way the units at Cedarmere will count. However, he said without the endorsement, he believes the project can still be built as the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which the project filed under, only requires the project be "approvable" to be built, and not necessarily approved by the state. A letter sent by the DHCD indicated with some minor changes, which Leggat McCall has made in the most recent application, it did not see any reason why the project would not be approved.

"What happens if we don't submit the application or we choose not to?" asked selectman Rob Spofford.

Hucksam said likely, the applicant would seek a building permit and it would be up to the building inspector to grant the permit or not. If the permit is denied, the developer would likely appeal to the Zoning Board of Appeals. However, again, he said he does not believe there is anything in the bylaw that would prevent a building permit from being issued, as the project is "approvable."

"The danger for us is that we wouldn't get credit for something that is built out," said Chairman Fred Koed.

"As a board, we're in a real pickle," said Spofford.

To ensure this kind of situation does not arise again, Spofford said he thinks developers should come before the selectmen before they go before the planning board.

"The LIP guidelines do suggest developers deal with the state first before filing a local application," said Hucksam.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he did not agree with Spofford. "The planning board is here to plan. We just need to submit the plan," he said.

However, Spofford said, "I think what you're advocating is that this board become a rubber stamp to the planning board."

But Koed pointed out the first Cedarmere developers did come to the selectmen first, but at that point, sewer issues were the main concern, not whether the housing would be rental or ownership affordable units.

Planning board member Mike Westcott attended the meeting and spoke as a citizen, and not on behalf of the planning board. He reiterated the bylaw specifically states the project must be approvable in order to move forward, but not necessarily approved by the state. "The town has said they need affordable senior housing and there is an affordable component, albeit not rentals. We urge you to approve the LIP application and be done with it," he said.

The board voted unanimously to send the application on to the state. "Clearly, we want to see this project succeed," said selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

Most Cohasset seniors can't meet asset test for affordable housing about who actually qualifies to live in affordable senior housing.

Engler said there is almost no chance any Cohasset resident would be able to qualify to live in affordable rental senior housing. Affordable rental housing guidelines state those households in the 60 to 80 percent median income range (roughly $40,000 to $50,000 per year) may only have $50,000 in assets in order to qualify.

"Most of the people (in Cohasset) have owned a home and they're going to be selling a home," said Engler, and with the property values in Cohasset, it is virtually impossible for a senior to sell their home and not have more than $50,000 left over.

Engler said for ownership housing, there is a better chance Cohasset residents would qualify because assets are not as restricted. Seniors looking to purchase an affordable unit may have $150,000 in various assets, as well as $50,000 in liquid assets, such as money left over from the sale of a house. "Again, that is very difficult in Cohasset," he said adding, however, residents would have a better shot at qualifying for the ownership than rentals.

But there are other limitations imposed on the 55-plus crowd that would like to purchase an affordable unit. Unless everyone in the household is 62 years or more, they may not have owned a home within the past three years in order to qualify.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he couldn't believe what he was hearing. "It's very highly unlikely people in Cohasset will qualify. We've created a bylaw for the town and it won't help our residents," said Spofford, referring to the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw that was created to encourage the development of affordable senior housing. "It's a real shame."

"It's very highly unlikely people in Cohasset will qualify. We've created a bylaw for the town and it won't help our residents."
— Selectman Rob Spofford

Engler said the likely tenants at Cedarmere will be the parents of Cohasset residents who may have downsized and moved out of town, but would like to come back to be with their families. "They'll qualify because they won't be selling a home in Cohasset," Engler said. Other than that, he expects Cedarmere residents who live in the affordable units will be from other towns.

The board was also surprised to hear there is a possibility — albeit very slight — that children could live at Cedarmere. Engler said the DHCD does not discriminate against children and while it is very unlikely, a man who is 55 years old could marry a "trophy wife" and begin a new family, and there would be nothing stopping them from all living at Cedarmere. However, "It is senior housing and they typically wouldn't want to live there," Engler said.

Engler said in addition to the financial restrictions for rental housing, trying to build a development with a mix of ownership and rental housing — as the board said was previously floated for the Cedarmere project — rarely works. He said if the town wants rentals, there should be a project which is just rentals and the mix of affordable to market-rate can be whatever the town would like. However, the mix of rentals with market-rate for sale units in the same development has in his experience, often led to developers going back to the town to change their plans because the two are too different to co-exist.

Although the information came in later than the board would have liked, members said it was a valuable lesson nonetheless. "It's quite enlightening, I must say," said selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

However, Spofford did not take the news lightly. "I'm very disappointed with the way the process has worked and it's no fault of Leggat McCall. In fact, the process didn't work as far as I'm concerned. It's unfortunate for those who could have used another kind of housing and that need is not being met," said Spofford.

Police welcome new officer

Serves in National Guard

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Upon the recommendation of Police Chief James Hussey, Town Manager Bill Griffin has appointed Christopher Goodman to a vacant patrolman's position on the Cohasset Police Department.

Goodman is a student officer and began his first week at the Boston Police Academy Monday. He will begin working full-time in Cohasset upon completion of the program in April, 2006.

"It's a 26-week program, so he'll be doing a lot of work. It'll be a lot of studying and a lot of physical work," said Hussey. He added he stopped by the police academy this week to see how things were going, and joked that watching all the training and strenuous activities going on, "It brought back some great memories."

Christopher Goodman will be a familiar figure in town once he completes the police academy.

Goodman is also a member of the National Guard and spent 6 months in Egypt on a peacekeeping mission between Egypt and Israel. He was born and raised in Marshfield and continues to live on the South Shore.

"I've been looking forward to becoming a police officer for a long time and I'm looking forward to graduating and working full time," Goodman said.

Hussey said when Goodman comes on board in the spring, the department will be operating with 18 officers (which includes the chief). "This will fill our current budgeted positions, as we were reduced by a position this fiscal year," he said. "I am hoping to add that position back to our budget next fiscal year."

ENJOY THE MOMENT

Hello Cohasset. I hope everyone had a great Halloween and are enjoying this first week of November and the fantastic weather. As we head into our holiday season, I am made more aware of the phrase that my mom told me when I was a child, "don't wish away your childhood because when you get to be an adult, life goes by way too fast." I never realized until the last few years what that meant and how true it is.

Each day seems to go by in a regular pace but the weeks, months and years are flying by. I cannot stress enough the importance of trying to make all of our "little things" that happen on a day-to-day basis count with our family and friends and the holidays are a perfect time to start and/or continue to enjoy all of these "things." My oldest child is 15-1/5 and is growing into a young man and I look up to him now(literally and physically) and say, "where did that time go?" Make sure also to send me any "good news" items for this column like birthdays, anniversary notes and new baby information as that is what a community is all about as well.

CRAFTS GALORE!

The South Shore Votech Parents Organization is holding its 11th annual Craft Fair this Saturday, Nov. 5 from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. at the school located at 476 Webster St. (Route 123) in Hanover. This fair has over 75 crafters and vendors ready to sell their products and let you get a great start(or finish) to your holiday shopping. Students from towns all over the South Shore including Cohasset are involved along with their parents and faculty and would love to have you come and see what is available on this day. The kitchen will be open all day along with a fantastic Bake Sale and great raffles.

GOYETTE SCHOLARSHIP

Over seven years ago, Bob Goyette passed away but his memory and "goodness" lives on. The 5th Robert A. Goyette Memorial Scholarship Fundraiser is coming up and all are invited to come. The event is tonight Nov. 4 from 7 p.m.-midnight at the Sons of Italy Hall on Rt. 3A in Hingham. The cost is $15 at the door and includes Bob's favorite meal, spaghetti and meatballs. There will be plenty salad and dessert and is definitely ALL YOU CAN EAT. Raffles will be plenty and include Bruins, Red Sox and Patriots items and Butch Stearns, everyone's favorite sportscaster from Fox 25 News will be the MC.

So dig out your Bruins black and gold colors, gather your friends and families and come on down. The scholarship is for two Cohasset High School seniors, and 16 scholarships have been given out to date. If you are unable to attend but would like to make a donation, make checks payable to The Robert A. Goyette Memorial Scholarship Fund and mail to: The Robert A. Goyette, MSF, PO Box 333, Accord, MA 02018.

BLACK TIE BINGO!

The South Shore Art Center is raising funds to continue its educational outreach program with an evening of creative games-Black Tie Bingo, Saturday, Nov. 19 in collaboration with Center's In the Game national juried exhibition. Prizes include golf outings on exclusive private courses, hockey game packages, ski weekends, casino overnights, fine wines and martini mixers, jewelry and elegant accessories.

Guests are encouraged to dress for creative black tie, and everyone is guaranteed, a least for one night, to become a real player! The party begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $85 for members of the SSAC, $95 nonmembers. For more information visit www.ssac.org or to reserve a ticket call 781-383-2787.

HOLIDAY FAIR

Start your holiday shopping early. The Scituate - Cohasset Newcomers' Club is having their first annual holiday fair Saturday Nov. 12 from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. at St Anthony's Parish Center. There is bound to be something for everyone with vendors and crafters of all types.

REC SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Recreation Department is getting ready to kick off their next session of late-fall/winter programs for children of all ages. This coming Saturday, Nov. 5 at Town Hall suditorium will be registration for the Recreation/Booster Basketball program for boys and girls in grades 1-8. The time is from 9-11 am and the cost is $75 per player with checks made payable to: CBBC. Coaches and sponsors are needed and you may sign up at registration. Also, registration has begun for the Holiday Session of children's Recreation classes and workshops including Sports with Mr. Dykas and Jeremiah, Science and Nature classes through the South Shore Natural Science Center, Music classes for ages 2 and up and so much more. Information will be coming home through schools and may also be found by going online at www.onecreativeplace.net, calling 781-383-4109 or 781-383-2211 or coming to the Cohasset Recreation Office at Town Hall. The Arts and Crafts program being held for grades K-2 on Monday afternoons and taught by Becky Bates-McArthur starts on Monday, Nov. 14 and registration for this popular class can be made by calling 781-383-4109 or by coming to the Cohasset Town Hall Recreation Office.

HOCKEY BOOSTERS

The sixth annual holiday calendar raffle for the CHS varsity hockey team is underway! On Sunday, Nov. 6, the CHS varsity hockey players will begin selling raffle tickets to their friends, neighbors and families. Raffle tickets cost $5 each. Every day during the month of December (and New Years day) a ticket is pulled from the raffle pool. Prizes donated by local merchants will be delivered to a lucky daily winner. Because there are 32 drawings, every ticket has 32 chances to win!! This year's prizes are valued at more than $3,000 including a pair of $250 Maui Jim sunglasses, a $175 automobile detailing at Cohasset Collision, and much more!! There's even a special New Year's Day bonus drawing for a $150 cash prize!! The players, parents and Hockey Boosters sincerely thank the local merchants who donated to this fundraiser. All monies raised are used to purchase team equipment, continue team development and fund the "Coach Dennis Walsh Hockey Scholarship" sponsored by the Hockey Boosters. Please join the fun and support our varsity hockey program by purchasing a Holiday Calendar raffle ticket.

HOUSE TOUR

Community Garden Club members have been working to present "The Art of Christmas", a tour of five Cohasset homes that will be beautifully decorated for the holidays. This year the work of local artists will be featured in each home, as well as at the Holiday Tea and Gift Boutique which will be open to ticket holders at Cohasset Town Hall. Reserved tickets will be available for $20 at Cohasset shops including Buttonwood Books, Fleming's, Rooms in Bloom, and the Windsor Tea Shop. The House Tour will be held on Thursday, Dec. 1 from 10 am until 4 p.m., and the Holiday Tea and Gift Boutique will be open at Town Hall during Tour hours. Directions and information about the homes will be provided in the ticket folder. Tickets may also be reserved by calling 781-383-2486.

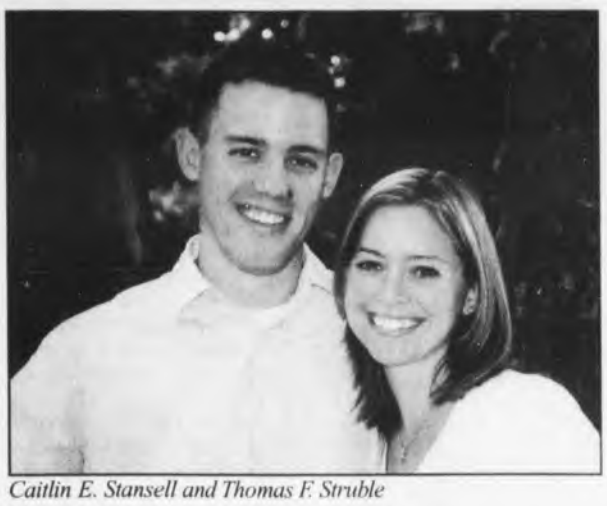
Megan Anne Pratt and Robert Stephen Thatford, Jr.



Pratt - Thatford

Mr. Glenn Pratt of Cohasset and Ms. Kathleen Mulcahy of Hingham, announce the engagement of their daughter, Megan Anne Pratt to Robert Stephen Thatford, Jr., of Northport, N.Y.

The two were engaged while vacationing in San Francisco, Calif.

A December 3, 2005, wedding in Newport, R.I., is planned.

After a wedding trip to the Caribbean, the couple will reside in Scituate.

Caitlin E. Stansell and Thomas F. Struble

Stansell - Struble

Robert and Moira Stansell of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Caitlin E. Stansell, to Thomas F. Struble, the son of Daniel and Jane Struble of Pittsford, NY.

The bride-to-be is a 2000 graduate of Cohasset High School. She received a Bachelor of Architecture from Cornell University in 2005 and now works for an architecture firm in Shelton, Conn.

Her fiancé graduated from Osbourn Park High School in Manassas, Va. in 1999 and received a Bachelor of Science in Geology from Cornell University in 2003. He received a commission in the United States Navy upon graduation and is currently serving on board the USS Virginia stationed at the New London Submarine Base in Groton, Conn.

A September, 2006, wedding is planned in Cohasset.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Raimund Vanderweil

Vanderweil - Day

Lucinda Anne Day, daughter of Lucinda P. and Henry Shields Day of Hingham, was recently married to Alexander Raimund Vanderweil, son of Anne and Gary Vanderweil of Cohasset. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Warner and Hart Day of Hingham, and the bridegroom is the grandson of Mrs. Janet Vanderweil and the late Raimund G. Vanderweil of Cohasset.

The ceremony took place at St. John the Evangelist Church in Hingham and was followed by a garden reception at the bride's home on Cushing Pond in Hingham.

Matron of honor was Jennifer Helies of New York, N.Y. Serving as bridesmaid was Shelley Vanderweil, sister of the groom.

Stefan Vanderweil, the groom's brother served as best man. Shields Day of Cohasset, brother of the bride, was the usher.

The bride is a vice president in the consultant relations department of Evergreen Investments in Boston. She attended Derby Academy in Hingham, graduated from St. Mark's School in Southborough, and from Union College in Schenectady, N.Y. She received a master's degree in business administration from Babson College in Wellesley.

The bridegroom is an engineer at R.G. Vanderweil Engineers in Boston. He graduated from Cohasset High School and Harvard College. He received a master of science degree in mechanical engineering from Stanford University.

After a honeymoon in Italy, the couple is residing in Boston's South End.

Pin Oaks' death rooted in mystery

exposed to an herbicide. Going on their instincts, the two had additional experts come in to confirm their suspicions, including specialists from Bartlett Tree Experts, Peter Abbott of Abbott Arborists, and landscape professional Tim Knight from Barcellos and Kane Landscape Service.

"We all came to the same conclusion," said Swanson, that an herbicide was causing the damage, which is when they decided to involve the state.

Swanson said the day after the state was informed of the poisoning, workers were on site taking soil and cutting samples. However, testing takes time and it was not until recently that the results were sent back to the town.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency issued a report which indicates the state collected two 500 ml amber bottles containing soil and two plastic bags with vegetation. Both sets of samples were analyzed for 24 different chemicals, and soil samples indicated the chemical glyphosate was present. Swanson said glyphosate is the chemical found in Roundup, a powerful household weed killer.

The tests confirmed what the town already knew — someone had tried to kill the pin oak located at the island at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street (which serves as a memorial for Vietnam veteran Capt. John P. Lyon) and a second pin oak located on town property next to Central Cemetery.

"You can buy it over the counter," said Swanson of the chemical, meaning virtually anyone could have purchased it and poisoned the trees. "It's really a shame."

This pin oak, located by Central Cemetery on Joy Place, used to be a healthy tree, but began growing mutated foliage and is dying, due to chemical poisoning. The tree, along with another tree located nearby on the Capt. John P. Lyon memorial island on the corner of Joy Place and North Main Street, were both exposed to high levels of a chemical found in the household weed killer Roundup. Tree Warden Andrew Swanson said it will be necessary to remove all the soil in the immediate area before planting new trees to ensure it is not contaminated.

Barrow said he would guess the original poisoning took place in the fall of 2004, just months after the trees were planted, as the leaves would be dropping from the tree for the season and the damage taking place would not be as easily detected. He said the herbicide used can be absorbed through the roots in the soil, or through new leaves or bark.

The two pin oaks are replacement trees for two original trees — a pin oak and a white ash — which were taken down roughly 1-1/2 years ago, without a tree hearing or permission from the tree warden. Their removal was rooted in controversy at the time.

Swanson said if a resident wants to remove a tree because it is a nuisance and there is no danger if it remains, there must be a shade tree hearing which is advertised in the newspaper and posted for two weeks. Shade tree hearings are conducted by the board of selectmen.

Swanson said he will replace the two poisoned trees, but it is not going to be easy. All the soil around the trees has been contaminated and must be removed or it will poison the new trees. He said the town has purchased two new trees, one at a cost of $570 and a second for $563, and there will be additional labor charges associated with the replanting as well.

Swanson said after the trees were first cut down, a meeting was held and the town made the decision to replace them. Therefore, he said it is his job to uphold the wishes of the town and said he will continue planting trees on the island and on the cemetery land as many times as is necessary.

While the island is a memorial island, none of the trees which have been planted on it have been dedicated trees because the very first tree to grow on the island was planted before the island's dedication. The new pin oaks are scheduled to be planted by the end of this week.

CEA is hosting a veterans' brunch

All veterans are invited to attend a free catered brunch Thursday, Nov. 10 from 10 a.m. until noon, sponsored by the Cohasset Elder Affairs office.

Please send a photo of yourself (or other memorabilia) while you were in service to be displayed at the brunch. Photos may be mailed to the CEA, located in the Community Center building at 3 North Main Street, or dropped off. After the brunch, retired veterans will be asked to write a note to servicemen currently serving our country. The CEA will provide note paper and stamps.

To make brunch reservations or for more information, please call the CEA at (781) 383-9112.

Historical Society celebrates Veterans Day with new exhibit and the many photographs she took of a war-torn Europe. The exhibit, "From the Battleground, 1918-1919: The Journals of Margaret Hall," will run from Nov. 7 until Nov. 30, and will be open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will also be an opening reception Nov. 10 from 5-8 p.m.

To help bring the exhibit to life, executive administrator for the historical society Lynne DeGiacomo said she has received a lot of help from a group of five high school students.

Brooke Allen, Christie Muir, and Emily Savage were chosen by Michael Welch, chairman of the Cohasset High School history department, to participate in an "internship" with the society, which had them reading Hall's diary, highlighting the most fascinating passages to be displayed in the exhibit, and matching up photos Hall took with the passages she wrote in her journal.

In addition, Melissa Crawford and Leigh Laugelle both participate in the civics class at the high school and have been volunteering three times a week at the historical society since the beginning of the school year. The two began working on the Hall exhibit in October, and conducted much research into her background. While the historical society had many artifacts relating to Hall, not much was known about her as a person and resident of Cohasset.

"Our future goal is to continually get students in here working direc'ly with me on exhibits and research," said DeGiacomo, adding the society was very fortunate to have had such good help this time around.

The historical society has been in possession of Hall's photos, journals, and artifacts since the early1960s, and DeGiacomo said it is amazing to see it all on display. In fact, the society has so much information, it was contacted by the Massachusetts Historical Society which is writing a book on Hall. "They were amazed at all we had on her," DeGiacomo said.

With the extensive journal entries, it took three students just to wade through the information.

Allen was responsible for reading the first portion of Hall's journal and was very interested to learn just how excited Hall was to go overseas. Hall was born in 1876, which made her 42 years old when she went off to the battlefields of France in 1918. Allen added from reading the journal, she found Hall, "felt proud to be on the boat they were waving to" as she shipped off to do her part for the war and was wished well by her fellow Americans.

DeGiacomo said although Hall worked very hard while overseas, she was there at the very end of the war which gave her some time to tour battlefields. She has many photos in her collection which are "before and after" shots, which show the stark contrast between the pre- and post-war towns. She also brought home a German army helmet and a number of shell casings as "mementos," which the society has on display.

But in reading through Hall's diary, Muir said she learned there were some who took home a different kind of souvenir at the end of the war. She said Hall reported while walking through the battlefields it was not unusual to see people taking a skeleton bone or two to bring back home.

But those were not the kinds of souvenirs Hall was interested in, potentially because she had grown so close to the wounded soldiers she was caring for and saw their remains as more than something to be saved as a token. Savage said in reading the diaries she found there were many personal stories Hall collected and documented from the soldiers she met along the way.

She said there were two men — one Irish and one English — and they had enlisted in the war together. At the end of the war, they were still together, although the Englishman was in much better physical shape than the Irishman. Hall wrote the two had become such good friends that the Englishman was going to bring the Irishman home and take care of him until his strength returned, and only at that time would he return to England. Those kinds of personal stories would have been lost forever, had Hall not recorded them in her journals.

DeGiacomo said Hall's accounts are very well detailed, and likely so because she was a college graduate, having studied at Bryn Mawr. She came from a very wealthy family, and her aunt was a professional photographer. DeGiacomo said she wonders if her aunt may have taught her a few tricks of the trade as her photographs are professional quality.

Hall broke the rules when she smuggled her camera into France, making it past the police, medical personnel and customs. Once inside, she was able to catch images which vividly tell the story about what it was like to have been in France during the last year of the Great War. Through her documentation, history will never be forgotten.

"From the Battleground, 1918-1919: the Journals of Margaret Hall," will be on display at the Cohasset Historical Society Headquarters, 106 South Main Street in the Pratt Building, Nov. 7 through Nov. 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will also be an opening reception Nov. 10 from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Society headquarters. For more information, please call the Society at (781) 383-1434 or send an e-mail to cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

Emily Savage, 17, reads a passage from the diary of Margaret Hall while Derry Schwantner captures it on a camcorder. Schwantner will use Savage's voice and photos Hall took during her time overseas during World War I to create a video for the Historical Society. The video will be shown as part of an exhibit being presented on Hall's experiences as a Red Cross volunteer during the last year of World War I. Savage was one of five high school students who volunteered their time to help with the exhibit.

Special Town Meeting Warrant in the works

Budget leads the agenda

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The board of selectmen will schedule several sessions for article review, including during its regularly scheduled meetings Tuesday Nov. 8, and Tuesday, Nov. 15, and at an additional meeting Thursday, Nov. 10.

The Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting is approaching fast , leaving roughly four weeks for preparation.

Town Manager Bill Griffin has drafted a preliminary Warrant — or Town Meeting agenda — which at this point includes 18 articles — or items of business — on which the town will cast its vote. While the draft Warrant began with 20 articles, the process is still very fluid and changing daily, and the final version will be different from what currently exists.

The board of selectmen will schedule several sessions for article review, including during its regularly scheduled meetings Tuesday Nov. 8, and Tuesday, Nov. 15, and at an additional meeting Thursday, Nov. 10.

• The draft Warrant currently states article one would amend the fiscal year 2006 operating budget. The budget passed at the April 2, 2005 Annual Town Meeting includes a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 operating budget override. (Prop. 2-1/2 is the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its tax levy from year to year). While Town Meeting voters passed the override, it failed at the ballot box. Therefore, a new amended budget which does not include the $400,000 figure will need to be approved this fall. A final figure will be inserted into the Warrant.

• Article two would ask voters to allocate the funds necessary to pay any unpaid bills from previous fiscal years. If there are bills which must be paid, Griffin will include a summary of those bills, including the vendor and the amount, on the Warrant. Under the general laws of the commonwealth, bills from previous fiscal years can only be paid by a super majority, which is 9/10 approval at a Special Town Meeting.

• Article three would ask the town to appropriate additional funding for the fiscal 2005 and 2006 cost items contained in a collective bargaining agreement between the town and the police officers union.

• Article four has been removed from the draft Warrant since it was first printed, but was slated to take up police department purchases.

• Article five would deal with Community Preservation Committee recommendations, and Griffin was waiting for the committee to submit its specific recommendations at the time the Mariner went to press. Griffin said he would also be in touch with the CPC to see if it would fund hiring a housing consultant which would work with a to-be-appointed housing partnership, made up of residents from the town.

• Articles six and seven would deal with board of assessors issues. Article six would ask the town to appropriate $15,000 to be expended by the board of assessors for the ongoing triennial revaluation program for certification by the Department of Revenue. The allocation would allow the assessors to keep to the current timetable set by the DOR as well as maintain the accurate and equitable assessments for properties in the town, which includes maintaining cyclical inspection schedules, data quality review, and digital imaging of the properties, as required for certification. Article seven would ask the town to vote its approval for the board of assessors to grant tax exemptions to qualified applicants for fiscal 2006.

• Articles eight and nine would be put forth by the water commission. Article eight would ask the town to purchase land in Scituate to protect the Aaron River Reservoir, which is part of the town of Cohasset's drinking water supply. There is currently no definite cost associated with the article. Article nine would allow the water commission to acquire additional parcels of land in Cohasset for watershed protection.

• Article 10 would ask the town to vote to petition the general court to enact a special law which would provide the board of library trustees with the capability to begin a nonprofit corporation, the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., which would raise and manage major gifts to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, including the library's current endowment. The trust would not conflict with the annual membership appeal of the Friends of the Cohasset Library, Inc.

• Article 11 has been removed from the draft Warrant but dealt with emergency preparedness. Article 12 also relates to emergency preparedness and as it stands, it would ask the town to authorize the purchase of equipment, supplies, and communication to improve the town's emergency preparedness, including $5,000 for supplies for the town's evacuation shelter, $30,000 for a reverse 911 calling system, and a generator for the public safety building for an as yet undisclosed amount. Griffin said the cost of the generator will soon be provided to the town by deputy director of emergency management Glenn Pratt for inclusion on the Warrant.

• Articles 13, 14, and 15 would amend the town's zoning bylaws, and all would relate to the downtown business district. Article 13 would give the planning board the ability to review multi-use projects in the downtown business district with an eye toward flexibility and creative design in assessing required setbacks from abutting structures and lots. Article 14 would also amend the town's zoning bylaws to allow dwellings for more than one family to be constructed in the downtown business district in conjunction with other business uses in the same building. Article 15 would allow the planning board to review projects in the downtown business district with respect to parking requirements while taking into account parking available in the municipal parking lot immediately adjacent to the village center.

• Article 16 is a citizens' petition which asks the town to apply for a conservation restriction on the town-owned land located adjacent to the Cook Estate on Sohier Street. The restriction would protect Peppermint Brook, the main tributary for the public drinking water supply. The article states the land provides a natural biorentention function, filtering out pollutants such as copper, lead, phosphorus, nitrogen, and nitrates from stormwater runoff before it degrades Peppermint Brook. If the article passes, it would prevent the development of rental units on the parcel, which has been floated as a way to build affordable rental housing for Cohasset seniors.

• Article 17 would ask the town to accept a gift for the purpose of establishing a scholarship to be known as the "Gia Barresi Award." The scholarship, named for an alumnus of Cohasset High School, would be given to a female graduate who has achieved high honor roll three of four terms, has engaged in athletic or other extra-curricular activities two of three seasons during each academic year, has enrolled in a full-time four-year accredited college or university, and has exhibited outstanding leadership qualities in school or in the community.

• Article 18 would appoint the elected recreation commission as the board duly authorized to exercise control over playgrounds and recreation areas. The article would consolidate all recreational activities under one group.

• Article 19 has been inserted into the Warrant at the request of some residents of the Beechwood Street area of town. The article would appropriate funds to reconstruct a sidewalk on Beechwood Street from South Main Street to the westerly intersection of Norman Todd Road. Griffin said the residents to not have the requisite number of signatures (100) for a citizens' petition, and understand they will need to convince the board of selectmen to insert the article on their behalf.

• Article 20 has been drafted by Town Counsel, and for now is a place holder which would allow the board of selectmen to purchase the Cook Estate if it becomes necessary. The article as it currently stands would allow the board to hold the property for general municipal purposes indefinitely, or in their discretion, dispose of all or a portion of the property.

The Warrant is still in draft form and will be changing throughout the coming weeks. It will be sent to the printer Nov. 18, and will be mailed soon after to every household in town.

Register Bill O'Donnell reports on quarterly RE activity for Norfolk County

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported on quarterly real estate activity in Norfolk County. Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the period July through September of 2005, was $2.27 billion, down 4 percent from July through September of 2004.

A total of 5,601 deeds were recorded at the Norfolk Registry during the period, and the average sales price reported in deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties), was $585,038, up 6 percent from the third quarter of calendar 2004.

A total of 5,601 deeds were recorded at the Norfolk Registry during the period, and the average sales price reported in deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties), was $585,038, up 6 percent from the third quarter of calendar 2004.

Mortgage activity, while relatively steady in terms of numbers of filings, was down sharply in dollar volume on a year-to-year basis. There were 16,019 new mortgages recorded in the third quarter showing a total dollar amount of $5.56 billion. The total number of new mortgages was up slightly (1 percent), but the total dollar amount was down 46 percent from $10.40 billion in mortgages recorded July-September of 2004.

The decline in mortgage volume is related to the interest rate environment and the decrease in mortgage refinancings since the record years of 2003 and 2004. It is important to note that mortgage filings do not necessarily represent a change in overall indebtedness. Many mortgages refinance existing debt, or secure equity credit lines that may not be drawn in their entirety.

The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County. The Registry is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information. For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call 781-461-6116 or visit the Registry Web site, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Cohasset adult flu clinic slated for Nov. 12

An adult flu clinic, sponsored by the Cohasset Board of Health, will be held Saturday Nov. 12, from 10 a.m. to noon, at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, 41 Highland Ave.

This flu clinic is open to all citizens of Cohasset (adults only). Parents of young children should check with their pediatrician to see if the shot is available at their physician's office.

Please remember to wear a short sleeve shirt. Seniors should bring Medicare Part B and/or Senior Health Insurance cards. For more information, call Judy Fitzsimmons, RN, at 781-383-2210.

Annual used book drive at St. Stephen's under way

All proceeds go to the Scholarship Program of Bishop Barbara C. Harris Camp.

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., is currently accepting donations of slightly worn hardcover and paperback books, DVD's, CD's and videos for its annual book sale, part of the ecumenical Village Fair that will be held on Saturday, Dec. 3.

If your book shelves are spilling onto the floor, and DVD's, CD's and videos are bursting out of the entertainment center, St. Stephen's has the solution for you. Donations can be brought to the church in bags or boxes and placed inside the parish hall door marked "church offices." Use the "Reserved Parking" spot to unload your books during church office hours: Monday - Friday, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Alternatively, St., Stephen's would be happy to arrange pick up of your donations. For donation pick-up or more information, call Alix White at 781-383-1829. Books are sorted at St., Stephen's Church in Walton Rodgers Hall every Tuesday from 9 a.m. to noon. Donations will be accepted through Monday, Nov. 21. Old textbooks, romance novels, water damaged or moldy books, books with notes or highlighting, cannot be accepted.

The book sale is a mission program of St. Stephen's Church. All proceeds go to the Scholarship Program of Bishop Barbara C. Harris Camp. Through your donation of books, DVD's, CD's and videos that are being accepted now, you will help change lives and strengthen community.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Alphabet soup

Do you ever get the feeling that our language is devolving into acronyms so much so that soon we'll all be talking in letters rather than words and sentences?

It kind of takes you back to the time when you spelled words out when your kids were little so they couldn't understand what you were saying. Phrases like – "Honey, did you call the DOCTOR about the appointment for Billy's SHOT?"

Currently, there's no bigger challenge facing us as journalists and you as concerned citizens about how to wade through all the acronyms that are flying at us.

Some such as AFL-CIO, FBI, CIA, MSPCA, NASA, NATO and CD have become part of our lexicon and don't even have to be translated. Regionally MCAS is becoming more common and is much easier to remember than what it stands for. (Most of you probably don't know it stands for Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System).

With the town in the affordable housing arena – we're having to get used to LIP (Local Initiative Project) and DHCD (Department of Housing and Community Development). The town also has its own unique acronym SMROD (Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District).

According to www.acronymguide.com there are some of the most common everyday acronyms:

24/7 - 24 Hours a Day, 7 Days a Week
AA - Alcoholics Anonymous
ABC - Already Been Chewed
AC - Air Conditioning
AKA - Also Known As
AM - Ante Meridiem
ASAP - As Soon As Possible
ATM - Automated Teller Machine
B&B - Bed and Breakfast
BLT - Bacon, Lettuce, Tomato
BYOB - Bring Your Own Beer
EST - Eastern Standard Time
ET - Extra Terrestrial
FDR - Franklin Delano Roosevelt
FYI - For Your Information
GM - General Manager
ID - Identification
IQ - Intelligence Quotient
JFK - John Fitzgerald Kennedy
MC - Master of Ceremonies
MO - Modus Operandi
NIMBY - Not In My Backyard
PC - Politically Correct
PIN - Personal Identification Number
PM - Post Meridiem
PR - Public Relations
PS - Post Script
Q&A - Question and Answer
R&R - Rest and Relaxation

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Favors rental housing for seniors

TO THE EDITOR:

Margy Charles provided the Mariner with a copy of her letter to Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed.

I just want you to know that I think it is important to look into the future and understand why many seniors would like the town to foster rental housing.

Of course, many would prefer to stay in their own homes but age and cost often prohibit that choice. If rental housing were more available, they would be able to stay in town, live on their nest egg (from the sale of their home) which would allow them to meet the high costs of living today.. and maybe help their own children and grandchildren.

When Jim Lagrotteria was Chairman of the Sr. Housing Committee, we examined all the town parcels and that is why we zeroed in on the land behind the Stop and Shop and which is contiguous to the Cook property. We should retain access to this land through the Cook parcel. If we do not, I think it is negligent.

Can you do anything about that now? Are the Selectmen and the Water Department really worried about Peppermint Brook or is that a subterfuge to prevent its use? I believe there are as many people in favor of rental housings as there are who want "Open Space".

I like Open Space but we do have Whitney Woods, Wompatuck, Wheelwright, the Barnes property and the land the Community Preservation Committee gave the money for on King Street.

All the surrounding towns have done much more for seniors than we have. I include Hingham, Hanover, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Please do whatever you can to keep that parcel available.

Soccer boosters appreciate support

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Soccer Booster Club would like to thank those who contributed to this year's successful Pancake Breakfast. Proceeds from the breakfast are used to support the high school soccer programs by providing equipment to the teams and annual scholarships.

Raffle prizes were generously donated by Cohasset Hardware, Dependable Cleaners, Cohasset Consignment Shop, Cohasset Youth Soccer, the Coggins family, the Bolger family, the Castro family, Black Rock Country Club, Cohasset Village Greenery, and Buttonwood Books.

Many thanks to the players and parents for helping serve over 2,000 pancakes!

Letters About Literature — Letters About Literature is a writing contest for students in grades four to 12. To enter Letters About Literature, select a book that excited you, then write a personal letter to the author and explain why and how this book affected you. The contest has three competition levels: Level 1, grades 4-6; Level 2, grades 7-8; and Level 3, grades 9-12. Entry forms and guidelines are available in both the Children's Room and the Young Adults' Room and can be obtained on-line at www.massbook.org. This is a program of the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with primary sponsorship from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum and additional support from Houghton Mifflin Co. and the Massachusetts Library Association. Submission deadline is Dec. 1.

Dramatic club — On Monday, Nov.14, from 4:30-5:30 p.m., the Cohasset Dramatic Club will perform selections from, "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever," by Barbara Robinson. This is a great opportunity to see and hear our local talent perform. This program is free of charge, open to all ages and communities, and will be held in the Meeting Room. Light refreshments to follow the performance.

FOR ADULTS

Knitting group — Come join the new knitting group, Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 in the library's Historical Room. This is a fun group for all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring your knitting project and join like-minded friends at the library. For more information call Mary Coughlin at 781 383-1348.

Artist exhibit — The South Shore Art Center presents "Do You See What I See?" by Peggy Roth Major, Nov. 1 through Dec. 30 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Major, a fine art photographer, combines her imagery with insightful verse, taking viewers to a place many have been but few have really seen. "Do You See What I See?" is a perfect escape from the stress of our daily lives and a chance to catch that elusive breath of fresh air during the holidays. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Friday, Saturday 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. An opening reception will be on Sunday, Nov. 6, from 3-5 p.m.

Independent film series — The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will be showing the independent film, "Witnesses," Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m. Free admission and refreshments. The library is located at 35 Ripley Road. For more information call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Book group — Join the book group for coffee and discussion of Tracy Kidder's "Mountains Beyond Mountains," at 10 a.m., Thursday, Dec. 8, in the Meeting Room. All are welcome.

Rediscover Cohasset — Cohasset Historical Society will give a talk on its three historic buildings Tuesday, Nov. 15, at 10 a.m. in the Library Meeting Room.

Homebound delivery service — If you love to read but are unable to come to the library due to an illness or disability, the library offers a home delivery service. For those interested, a volunteer from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit you at your residence to discuss your reading preferences and take your requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to you and picked up and returned to the library on a regular schedule. If you, or anyone you know, might be interested in this program, call the library at 781-383-1348.

Teachers 'blindsided' by school surplus report

COMMENTARY

ED LEONARD

The teachers of Cohasset read with interest the article, "School Surplus under Scrutiny" (The Cohasset Mariner, 10/28/2005), in which members of the Advisory Board and the Selectmen expressed confusion about Superintendent Walsh's budgetary practices. Why, they asked, did she and the School Committee repeatedly tell the two boards of expected dire shortfalls of the '04 – '05 budget, when, in fact, they were able to locate over $300,000 in surplus funds at the end of the fiscal year?

We teachers are equally dismayed. Since November 2004, the Cohasset Teachers Association has been in negotiations with the School Committee to obtain a fair contract. In meeting after meeting, the School Committee and the Superintendent repeatedly told our bargaining team the same lamentable tale: these are tough times, and there is no money for teacher raises. As a result of this uncompromising position, teachers have been working without a contract since the start of this school year.

Imagine our surprise when we read the above-mentioned article. At the same time that the School Committee and the Superintendent were bemoaning the lack of sufficient funding to provide a fair cost of living increase for the teachers and the nurses, they found sufficient funds to return over $130,000 to the town reserve fund last summer. To add insult to injury, the article also pointed out that the Superintendent intended to use a surplus of $190,000 from last year's budget in order prepay bills in the current budget.

Not surprisingly, we feel blindsided by this information. Throughout the year-long negotiations, we have always bargained in good faith; it now appears that the School Committee and the Superintendent did not do likewise. Were we naïve? Were we misled? Were we lied to? What other conclusion matches the information revealed in the article?

In fact, there is money! If teachers were respected for the job they do for the children of Cohasset, at least some of that money could have gone to a fair cost of living increase.

Let's look at the consequences of the School Committee's decision to shortchange the teachers and students of Cohasset. Unfortunately, we live in a very competitive environment. Our students are competing against other schools on the MCAS and in the college admissions process. By her own words, Superintendent Walsh has compared Cohasset to other high-performing school systems like Lexington, Wellesley, and Weston, in which a teacher may earn thousands of dollars more a year than a teacher in Cohasset.

Throughout the year-long negotiations, we have always bargained in good faith; it now appears that the School Committee and the Superintendent did not do likewise.

In fact, this past summer, a staff member left Cohasset and took a position at Lexington High School; she reported a greatly reduced student load and an immediate increase of $5,000 in salary! Another teacher left Cohasset and went to Wayland, receiving an additional $9,000 annually.

When compared to schools in Duxbury, our teachers start their careers as the lowest paid, and end their careers as the lowest paid. Obviously, these inequities grossly impact a teacher's lifetime earnings.

In Cohasset, there are currently teachers who have already experienced a zero percent raise, imposed in the early 90s. The cumulative effect of that one year's loss has resulted in a loss of almost $15,000 in income for those veteran teachers, and that's before calculating the devastating affect this diminished income will have on the same teachers' retirement. One teacher shared the information that this amount is almost identical to what he currently owes in student loans for his daughter!

In addition to the question of fairness, there are pragmatic concerns raised by a contract based on inadequate compensation. As mentioned above, this is a competitive world. Cohasset is competing with Hingham, Duxbury, and Lexington for quality staff. In a world driven by economics, the town has to offer reasonable compensation in order to attract and retain quality teachers. Cohasset has a tradition of excellence, and the children of Cohasset have benefited from this tradition. The package proposed by the teachers is not intended to place Cohasset at the high end of the pay scale. In fact, it will merely keep the town in the middle of the pack; a zero percent increase assures Cohasset of a mediocre position near the bottom.

Educators often teach via an analogy. What if we were talking about a hospital? What if the nurses at this hospital were the lowest paid in the area? What if the administration of the hospital saw these nurses as merely employees who should be happy to work there rather than as professionals who represent the most important resource in the delivery of services to the public? What if there were an increasing level of disrespect towards these professionals? What would be the impact upon staff morale and performance? Would you feel comfortable bringing your child to this hospital, or would you seek out an institution with a mission that made excellence and fairness a priority?

How can Cohasset attract and retain quality teachers if this trend continues? The most important resource that the schools have in educating Cohasset's children is its teachers. The wrong decisions now will have long-range effects.

After a year of fruitless negotiations and as morale plummets, the teachers of Cohasset encourage parents and concerned townspeople to support our efforts to obtain a fair and equitable contract by communicating their concerns to the School Committee.

Let's settle this contract now.

No more bumps at grade crossings

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Much has happened since our last Greenbush update. As you have probably noticed, Beechwood Street is now open. The delays were primarily caused by a combination of weather and a strong desire to make the crossing safe for vehicular traffic. There were many discussions with concerned citizens as we tried to get the crossing opened earlier. But at the end of the day, the delays were for the right reasons. We hope those of you that have used this road have noticed that the actual rail crossing is much smoother that you may have remembered railroad crossings to be. This is due to the new materials and construction methods being deployed here on the Greenbush line. All other reconstructed crossings should be similar in their smoothness. No more bumb – bump - bump.

King Street closure — As we go to press this week, King Street is closed. A sign has been forewarning of this closure for the past several weeks. To date activity there has been primarily to relocate underground utilities and to set the foundations for signaling equipment. Up until now, most of the construction had been to the side of the right of way which allowed for the road to remain open (at least partially). Now the railroad crossing must be constructed. The project has been reluctant to give us an end date for the completion of this crossing. But based on our experience at Beechwood Street, you can plan on at least two months. Hopefully the preliminary work that has been going on shortens that interval. But we are now in the time period where weather can be the controlling factor, so we should be realistic on the length of time we expect this intersection to be closed.

Multiple activities at many locations – Work continues at Rocky Lane, Spring at Pond Street, Pleasant Street and the Station on 3A. At Rocky Lane, the concrete abutments for the bridge have been poured and deck work will commence shortly. If you look at the North Main Street abutment, you might think that the grade appears quite steep. Please keep in mind that the area between this wall and North Main Street still requires significant fill and grading. Once graded, approximately 6-8 feet of this structure will be buried and then the final grade will allow for a far more gentle slope creating the final roadway.

We have also asked the project not to have two roads closed at the same time. While they can not guarantee that this will not happen, they have committed to try and work their schedule to minimize this scenario.

At Spring and Pond, work continues in the right of way to construct retaining walls, replace the culvert we referred to earlier in our Sept. 30 article and removing ledge in preparation for the new road alignment. There is also going to be a water main constructed on Pond Street by the Water Department. We have asked both the Water Department and the MBTA to closely coordinate this work so that any inconvenience is kept to a minimum. At the Station, the building has been razed and clearing of this area continues so that the construction of the new Station building and platform can commence.

We have also asked the project not to have two roads closed at the same time. While they can not guarantee that this will not happen, they have committed to try and work their schedule to minimize this scenario. The project has also committed to never have adjacent road closures occurring at the same time. Now we all know to "never say never" and that there will be occasions where day to day work requires a short term road closure to move equipment back and forth through the right of way. But, we are working very closely with the CBB Outreach team to keep these situations to an absolute minimum.

Safety first – Lastly a safety message: The days are getting shorter and even though only a few roads have visible railroad activity, much construction activity is still going on all along the entire right of way. Please keep reminding your children of the inherent dangers associated with this activity and the associated construction equipment. These are hazardous areas with very large construction machines - not the former serene right of way we all may remember. We must be careful out here.

The best approach is to stay off the right of way altogether. We need to remember that the Right of Way is MBTA property- not the Town's. The Project staff has brought an interesting situation to our attention. Recently a citizen had run a hose over the right of way to pump water off of their property into adjoining wetlands. This should not be done for a lot of reasons, the least of which is that it is trespassing. The Greenbush Project is well within their rights to stop this activity and we all need to be aware of that.

HEALTH NOTES

Anchor chain corrosion and harbor health

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Today, we'll talk about a test being done to attempt understand the reported change in the rate of corrosion of anchor chains in Cohasset cove. Such an endeavor is clearly not within the area of responsibilities of the Board of Health, but it deals with the health of the coastal estuaries. It has come to the attention of the Health of the Harbor Committee (HHC) and if the Board can bring some necessary resources to the party without spending any money, why not?

After all Dr. Robin Lawrence, Board Member, offers free dental services at the Board's annual Health Fair, as well as being President of the Sandy Beach Association which receives the State mandated benefit of water sampling from the Board of Health. Peggy Chapman, Chairperson, provides the Board with much free advice about viruses, autism, and other esoteric knowledge from her experience as a trained and highly educated registered nurse. So we all help where we can.

Late in September, Health Notes described the activities of the HHC and its efforts to identify possible contributors affecting the health of the Harbor. There is anecdotal evidence that many changes are occurring in the harbor waters including reduction of populations of shellfish, fish of all kinds, plant life, and changes of habitat for numerous other types of wildlife around the harbor.

Some who work in the harbor say that there has been an acceleration in the degradation of zincs and the steel chain used in mooring boats in the harbor. Mooring chain degradation, a problem which is costing those who use the harbor thousands of dollars annually, may have to be left out of the final solution for the harbor. A brief survey of internet sources reveals little analytical data about the specific mechanism of metal loss in a boat mooring environment.

Some who work in the harbor say that there has been an acceleration in the degradation of zincs and the steel chain used in mooring boats in the harbor.

On the other hand, since the solution to many of the problems in the Harbor probably depend upon collection of data about its natural resources, and volunteers are now collecting water samples from many locations in the harbor, an appropriate method for collecting mud and sediment may enable future studies to identify long term changes in the harbor environment. An added advantage is that electrolysis of boat moorings could also be studied. Accordingly, a short experiment involving corrosion assessment has been proposed to shed some light on the tales being told about corrosion in the harbor.

On Oct. 24 a study was begun by volunteers to gather more information about the physical properties of Cohasset Cove in order to better understand the process of degradation of metallic objects within the harbor; specifically anchor chain. Samples of mud and water were taken from eight selected mooring sites in the harbor..

Analysis of electrolysis, a principal factor in metallic corrosion requires collection of somewhat different parameters than those for biological analysis, nevertheless, the procedures of collection and handling can be worked out to meet the demands of both sampling requirements.

From the water and mud samples taken, we can probably be able to infer that the dredged portion of the harbor had a fairly homogeneous bottom which appeared to be typical for estuaries of this area.

The question about chain corrosion needs to be asked of those in other harbors with a similar littoral: Green Harbor, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, perhaps others, and members of the HHC committee are contacting representatives of those harbors.

The question of the process of electrolytic corrosion of the anchor chain vs. zinc, etc. needs to be better defined for those being affected by it. Accordingly, the volunteers plan to continue the experiment they have begun and will continue to report periodically.

Alarm clock tops Ig Nobels

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I am thrilled to report that the spirit of invention is not dead in American youth, not while Gauri Nanda holds forth in the ivied halls of MIT, anyway.

Gauri, 25, won a prize the other day for her invention, a carpet-covered alarm clock that leaps off the night stand, rolls around the floor, and then runs away and hides.

This way, once you are awake, you can either get up and seek out the clock and turn it off or, more likely, you can still pull the blanket over your head and try to forget it.

How much is the tuition at MIT? $40 grand?

"Nothing would ever be considered a breakthrough unless it first seemed a little ridiculous."

The award that Gauri (that's a girl) won is the Ig Nobel Prize in Economics, given annually since 1991 by the humor magazine "Annals of Improbable Research" to "people whose research makes others think, then laugh."

"It's completely irrelevant whether something is valuable or worthless," editor Marc Abrahams told USA Today. "Nothing would ever be considered a breakthrough unless it first seemed a little ridiculous."

James Watson of Massey University in New Zealand won the Ig Nobel Agricultural History Prize for his study of "The Significance of Mr. Richard Buckley's Exploding Trousers."

His definitive work determined the social impact of sodium chlorate, a weed killer used in New Zealand 70 years ago which was blamed for a fire that broke out in the unfortunate Buckley's pants.

Gregg Miller of Oak Grove, Mo., captured the covered Ig Nobel Prize for Medicine for his invention of "neuticles," or artificial testicles for dogs when he saw his bloodhound Buck's embarrassment after being neutered.

Already he claims to have sold more than 100,000 to animal-lovers (if you'll pardon the expression) all over the world.

The Ig Nobel Prize seems to be something that we have been missing for too long.

Think of it. Martin Goetz would have been a sure winner when he was awarded Patent #560,351 for "A Device for Producing Dimples." His application stated:

"The apparatus consists principally of two revolving arms which are pivoted and hinged together after the manner of a pair of compasses, the upper part being connected to a brace.

"When it is desired to use the device for the production of dimples, the knob of the arms must be set on the selected spot on the body, the extension put in position, then while holding the knob with the hand, the brace must be made to revolve on its axis."

No animal was harmed during the making of this dimple. I'm not sure about Martin, though.

Perhaps another Ig Nobel could go to the London ad agency that put signs touting a bourbon, razor blades and tooth paste on cows grazing near the London-to-Brighton railroad line.

Or to Ursula Dietrich, a California dentist, who developed beef-flavored toothpaste for dogs; or physicists at the University of Maryland who pioneered a technique of opening oysters with a laser beam.

Or, my favorite, the Franksville Specialty Company of Conover, Wisc., which makes and markets brassieres for cows to keep them from tripping over their udders.

Speaker DiMasi critics come from both sides of the aisle

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Once again, the week was not what you'd bill as "Sal DiMasi: A Celebration." And once again, the prime focus was Melanie's Bill.

The governor took pains to set up a fight on the bill, one in which he was almost guaranteed the kind of political win Democrats were hoping to deny him. The victims he gathered around him made a striking visual, but the week's enduring image was undoubtedly Rep. Eugene O'Flaherty, D-Chelsea, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee, on the front page of the Boston Globe. In his sweatpants on a Wednesday. In Estoril, Portugal. While drunken driving victims joined the governor in pleading for action from the Legislature to reverse changes in Melanie's Bill.

O'Flaherty hastened back to the States after it became clear the House was nearing a nadir in public perception. He was in the House Chamber when the session began at 11 am. By the time it ended at 7 p.m., Romney's recommendations for amendments had largely been restored – in particular, a provision allowing certified court records to serve as evidence of past convictions, as opposed to the much more difficult live-witness standard of evidence.

The immediate, unstated target of Romney's ire and that of drunk-driving activists is O'Flaherty, but the person ultimately accountable for the House as a whole is DiMasi, and it's not going well. He's been taken to task from Pittsfield to Provincetown for the languid pace of action on major issues, even before the Melanie's Bill debacle. His latest prominent critic is Attorney General Thomas Reilly. Though the AG didn't mention the Speaker outright, Reilly made it plain he thinks the Legislature was wrong to weaken the bill, and Romney was right to seek restoration.

The AG's criticism, incidentally, is fraught with its own peril for Reilly: in Massachusetts, when you criticize the Legislature, you're criticizing the Democratic establishment, and Reilly needs that very establishment to do well in his gubernatorial bid. Past AG's have suffered significant damage to their ambitions by building a sense they enjoy attacking their would-be patrons and supporters. But the immediate point is how bad the public relations are going for the House of Representatives – so bad that DiMasi is starting to deliver tirades against the press, a classic symptom of the PR death spiral.

A lot of this comes down not just to organizational management – work schedules, vacation schedules and the House calendar – but to media relations. DiMasi's predecessors had a love-hate relationship with the media. So does he – only minus the "love" part. This dichotomy is absolutely true though, and works both ways. The reporters are paid to be tough and skeptical and their culture requires professions of scorn for their subjects from time to time, yet responsive, articulate politicians do get more of their message across more favorably, partly because the reporters appreciate quick thinking and the gift of gab. Most politicians thrive on the challenges of communication and relationship management, and therefore find the bizarre dynamics of working with reporters - "my adversary is essential to my success" – invigorating.

DiMasi is hard to characterize in this regard, because he's hard to find. He doesn't invite reporters in to discuss issues; he doesn't appear outside his doorway on the third floor as his predecessors did to give and take on important votes and developing controversies. He's hardly the first politician to lambaste the press, and it's a phenomenon most reporters have the integrity to forgive, knowing they are the windshield and politicians usually the fly, and the fly has a right to complain. But communication is part of the job, and the speaker hasn't been doing much of it. He took the time to complain on the floor that the media is not focusing on the benefits of Melanie's Bill, but not the time to call in the reporters and review those benefits. He may yet discover the advantages to his chamber's image of choosing the second course.

And it's not a black and white picture – DiMasi had policy quotes on more than one occasion in the Boston papers this week, saying the House will wrap up the year productively, and opining that the state should fund the gap between revenues from new "smart growth" housing and the cost of educating students who live in that housing.

Still, the problem is evident, if only in contrast with the Senate, where President Robert Travaglini, a politician cut from the same cloth as DiMasi, is continuing to garner universally high marks. Travaglini hardly gushes, but always does have time to talk, and the Senate produces a constant steady stream of legislation while its leader produces a reliable flow of commentary. Travaglini is making it look easy, and making people – especially senators – ask why it seems to be so hard for the House.

• Officials: state modifying its dam-maintenance practice — At a hearing of the Senate Post Audit and Oversight hearing, Conservation and Recreation Commissioner Stephen Burrington said the state is going to adopt a more flexible, privatized approach to dam upkeep and inspection, seeking to avert the long-neglect, sudden-crisis pattern that characterized the recent crisis in Taunton. Appearing with officials from that city, Environmental Secretary Stephen Pritchard said only "luck or great management" had kept the Whittendon Dam from giving way.

• Hearings harbinger of busy wrap-up stretch ahead — A sampling of hearings held last Thursday indicates how busy and interesting committee work has gotten as bills move toward the floor and possible action. In just a few hours Thursday, lawmakers heard testimony, often emotional, on bills for and against requiring schools to get parental permission before conducting any sex education; allowing adoptees access to birth records so they can contact their birth parents; and mandating that birth clinics and hospitals distribute information on Shaken Baby Syndrome to new parents.

• Romney's signature completes national compact on sex offenders — The mother of a young murder victim looked over Gov. Romney's shoulder and burst into tears as he signed legislation making Massachusetts the 50th state to join a compact for information sharing on the records and whereabouts of adult offenders on parole or probation.

• Nicole's law now on Romney's desk — The Senate gave final enactment to the statute requiring all new homes built in Massachusetts to include carbon monoxide detectors. The goal is to save lives by preventing the buildup of the odorless and deadly gas.

• Dupuis review complete, but no advancement forthcoming — Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey told members of the Governor's Council that the Judicial Nominating Commission review of controversial Juvenile Court nominee Renee Dupuis has been completed. "Right now we're trying to get into the governor's schedule and set a time for him to sit down and look at the documents," Healey told Councilor Carole Fiola, D-Fall River, who reminded Healey that a decision on whether the nomination would go forward was expected a month ago.

• Rubin resigns as first deputy treasurer — The appointment of political operative Doug Rubin had struck State House veterans as odd, and his position became far less tenable after stories surfaced of five-figure "non-disclosure", "non-disparagement" agreements were arranged with several employees as they departed the Treasury, some abruptly. Rubin will go back to political consulting; the press release announcing his departure said he planned to do so even before the brouhaha over the severance packages.

• Senior citizen tax relief gaining momentum — Legislation granting people over 65 state income tax credits if property taxes consume more than a given percentage of their income advanced out of the Revenue and Elder Affairs committee and over to the House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday. A number of prominent lawmakers said the legislation will be a top priority of lawmakers during end-of-session action.

• Big immigrant rally pushes in-state tuition change — Marie St. Fleur, D-Dorchester, vice chairwoman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told participants there's legislative support for giving new arrivals in-state tuition rates at state colleges and universities, but not the two-thirds majority needed to override an expected Romney veto. Another immigrant issue, a proposal to grant driver's licenses to illegal immigrants, was treated roughly by the chairmen of the Transportation Committee after the committee held a hearing on the bill. Senate Chairman Steven Baddour, D-Methuen, was blunt: "This is a license for terrorism," he said of the measure. And House Chairman Joseph Wagner, D-Chicopee, told reporters: "I'm with the Senate chair on this."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls and local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of October 24-28. Several of the roll call votes are on Gov. Romney's amendments to Melanie's Bill increasing some current penalties for drunken drivers and creating several new crimes involving drunken driving. The House and Senate adopted two of Romney's amendments, defeated a third and sent the measure back to the governor who signed it. The bill is named after thirteen-year-old Melanie Powell of Marshfield who was killed in 2003 by a repeat drunk driver.

REFUSAL TO TAKE BREATHALYZER TEST (H 4446)

House 92-48, approved a Democratic leadership-sponsored proposal suspending a person's driver's license for repeated refusal to take a Breathalyzer test only if he or she is also eventually convicted of drunken driving. The proposal replaced Gov. Mitt Romney's stricter amendment suspending the licenses of drivers who repeatedly refuse to take a Breathalyzer test even if they are not eventually convicted of drunken driving. Under House rules, approval of the substitute proposal precluded a vote on Romney's amendment. Supporters of Romney's amendment said that many "experienced" drunken drivers often refuse to take the Breathalyzer test because it increases the likelihood that they will be convicted of drunken driving. They argued that imposing a penalty solely for refusal to take the test would increase the number of drivers who take the test and consequently the number of drivers who are convicted. They noted that the Democratic leadership offered the weaker proposal to avoid a direct roll call vote on Romney's stronger amendment. Opponents of Romney's amendment said that it goes too far by punishing a person for refusing to take the test even if the person is eventually acquitted of drunken driving. They argued that the amendment is likely unconstitutional and takes away civil liberties by essentially forcing people to convict themselves. (A "Yes" vote is for the proposal that revokes the person's license only if he or she is convicted of drunken driving. A "No" vote is against the proposal and favors taking a vote on Romney's stricter amendment. Most legislators who favored taking a vote on Romney's amendment were also in favor of the amendment itself).

PROVING PRIOR DRUNKEN DRIVING CONVICTION (H4446)

House 138-2, approved Romney's amendment allowing certified court records to be used as proof that an offender was previously convicted of drunken driving. Current law requires proof to include live testimony of witnesses to the prior offenses. Supporters of Romney's amendment said that producing eyewitnesses to prior convictions means that a police officer must come to court to testify and noted that this is often impractical particularly when the conviction was in another state. They said that this misguided requirement often results in the prosecutor being unable to produce the witness to prove the prior conviction and consequently prohibits the defendant from receiving the harsher sentence that is imposed on repeat offenders. Opponents of Romney's amendment said that court records are sometimes inaccurate and could be the records of someone with the same name as the defendant rather than the defendant. They argued that defendants should have the right to face an eyewitness rather than a faceless court record. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's amendment allowing certified court records to prove prior drunken driving convictions. A "No" vote is against Romney's amendment).

INCREASE PRISON SENTENCE FOR MOTOR VEHICLE MANSLAUGHTER (H 4446)

House 138-2, approved Gov. Romney's amendment increasing from 2.5 to five years the mandatory minimum prison sentence for a driver found guilty of motor vehicle manslaughter. Supporters of Romney's amendment said that it is time to get tough with drunken drivers who kill people. They argued that a five-year sentence is reasonable when compared to the lifetime sentence suffered by the victims and their families. Opponents of Romney's amendment said that it goes too far and argued that the entire drunken driving legislation under consideration is flawed because it focuses entirely on punishment of offenders instead of dealing with prevention. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's amendment increasing from 2.5 to five years the mandatory minimum prison sentence for a driver found guilty of motor vehicle manslaughter. A "No" vote is against Romney's amendment).

REFUSAL TO TAKE BREATHALYZER TEST (H 4446)

Senate 7-32, defeated Gov. Mitt Romney's amendment to suspend the licenses of drivers who repeatedly refuse to take a Breathalyzer test even if they are not eventually convicted of drunken driving. The amendment would have replaced a proposal suspending a person's driver's license for repeated refusal to take a Breathalyzer test only if he or she is also eventually convicted of drunken driving. Supporters of Romney's amendment said that it is fair and reasonable to impose a penalty solely for refusal to take the test. They said that this would increase the number of drivers who take the test and result in more convictions of drunken drivers. They noted that many suspects refuse to take the test because it can be used as evidence to convict them. Opponents of Romney's amendment said that it goes too far by punishing people who are eventually acquitted of drunken driving. They argued that the amendment is undemocratic and likely unconstitutional. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's amendment suspending the licenses of drivers who repeatedly refuse to take a Breathalyzer test even if they are not eventually convicted of drunken driving. A "No" vote is against Romney's amendment).

PROVING CONVICTIONS AND MOTOR VEHICLE MANSLAUGHTER (H 4446)

Senate 38-0, approved Gov. Romney's amendments including allowing certified court records to prove a guilty defendant's prior drunken driving convictions and increasing from 2.5 to five years the mandatory minimum prison sentence for a driver found guilty of motor vehicle manslaughter. The two amendments are the same as the ones approved by the House but the Senate combined them and approved them on one roll call vote. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's two amendments).

CIVIC EDUCATION (S 340)

Senate 38-0, approved and sent to the House a bill creating a 23-member special commission to study the status of civic education in schools and general civic involvement in Massachusetts. Supporters said that citizen involvement in and knowledge of the democratic process are declining across the nation. They argued that it is time for the state to find ways to encourage both children and adults to be more informed about the principles of a representative democracy and become more active in the democratic process. (A "Yes" vote is for creating the special commission).

DEATH BENEFITS FOR VOLUNTEER PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS (H 4369)

Senate 39-0, agreed to the House version of a bill requiring all cities and towns to provide death benefits to the families of volunteer firefighters, police officers and emergency medical technicians (EMTs) who are killed in the line of duty. The Senate a few weeks ago had tacked on an amendment allowing a vote of a local city council or town meeting to opt out of the requirement. The amendment had been added to the bill in response to charges that the requirement violates Proposition 2 1/2 by imposing an unfunded state mandate on struggling cities and towns. This roll call removed that option and adopted the House version. The bill also provides a retroactive $23,000 per year pension to the family of Lancaster volunteer firefighter Martin McNamara who was killed in a 2003 house fire. Supporters said that local communities should provide this benefit to the families of these heroes who give their lives to keep people safe. They noted that giving communities an option to opt out of the requirement is unfair and would result in communities finding it difficult to attract these public safety officers. (A "Yes" vote is for adopting the House version that requires communities to offer the benefits and does not allow them to opt out of the requirement).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

CIGARETTE FIRES (H 1914)- The Committee on Public Safety and Homeland Security approved a bill requiring that cigarettes sold in Massachusetts be designed to self-extinguish if left unattended. Supporters say that smoking materials are the leading cause of fatal fires in the nation. They noted that thousands of people are killed or critically injured as a result of cigarette-induced fires.

MONITOR CRIMINALS (H 4192)- Gov. Mitt Romney signed a bill making Massachusetts the last state to join a compact that manages and monitors the movement across state lines of more than 250,000 criminals currently on parole or probation. The compact is designed to track and keep tabs on offenders who relocate to a state other than the one in which they were convicted.

DRIVER'S LICENSES FOR ILLEGAL IMMIGANTS (H 2129)- The Transportation Committee held a hearing on legislation allowing illegal immigrants without social security numbers to obtain driver's licenses. No one testified in favor of the bill but supporters say that it would help the state keep track of these immigrants. They note that these immigrants are currently driving without proper training and say that the proposal would ensure that they learn the state's driving rules. Opponents testified that it is outrageous to grant licenses to lawbreakers who are here illegally. They noted that the increased threat of terrorism requires that the state continue to deny licenses to illegal immigrants.

SEAT BELTS (H 229)- The Public Safety and Homeland Security Committee approved a measure providing for primary enforcement of the seat belt law by allowing police officers to issue tickets to drivers solely for not wearing seat belts. Current law permits only secondary enforcement and prohibits the $25 fine from being imposed unless the driver is stopped for another motor vehicle violation or some other offense.

DISCOUNT ON PROPERTY TAX BILLS (S 1693)- The Revenue Committee held a hearing on legislation allowing cities and towns to offer discounts to homeowners who pay their quarterly property tax bills early.

DRIVER'S LICENSES FOR SENIORS OVER 85- A bill filed last week would require seniors over 85 to pass a vision and road safety test every five years in order to renew their driver's licenses. Current law requires a vision test every ten years for all drivers and requires a road safety test only when a person first applies for his or her license. The bill is sponsored by Sen. Brian Joyce (D-Milton) who has not yet been able to find another senator to co-sponsor the legislation. Joyce in a written statement said that while he recognizes the sensitive nature of the bill and realizes that no senior wants to lose the right to drive, he is hopeful that "we can begin an honest civil discourse on how to best protect the safety of all our citizens, including our elderly drivers."

SEX EDUCATION (H 1055)- The Education Committee heard testimony on legislation requiring that schools receive written permission from a parent prior to teaching a child about sex education. Current law handles the matter in the opposite manner by allowing a parent to exempt his or her child from the sex education class by signing a written exemption request.

Cohasset's Katie James (left), shown here in action against Carver earlier this season, played well in her final high school field hockey game against Case on Wednesday.

A whirlwind end for field hockey

By Mark Goodman and Evan Deutsch

In a way, it's almost unfair.

The Cohasset field hockey team began last weekend needing five points out of four games to complete their second half revival and qualify for the state tournament.

Well, they did just that. Two days later, however, the season was over.

The Skippers traveled to Swansea on Wednesday afternoon to take on Case, and despite playing a good game, came out on the short end of a 2-0 score.

Head coach Deb Bostwick said afterward her defense "played phenomenal," as evidenced by the 0-0 score at halftime. Senior Aaron Bigley made five big saves on corners in the half, including one lunging save on a weak-side shot that Bostwick said made her goalie "look like Superman."

Senior Ellen Tarpey and sophomore Sally Meehan shut down Case's leading scorer, who came into the game with a remarkable 19 goals. Seniors Katherine Whoriskey and Remy Lee also played well in defense.

Whereas the Skippers had their share of chances in the first half, including four corners and a few shots from point-blank range, most of the second half was spent in Cohasset's third of the field. The team continued its strong defense, but five minutes into the half let up a goal when a Case player snuck behind the defense from the weak side and poked the ball into the net.

With 6:45 remaining in the game, the same player scored again, and Cohasset's season had come to an end. Bigley made 17 saves in net to keep his team in it throughout.

Bostwick said her seniors played great in their final high school game, including captains Lee, Whoriskey, Katie James and Mia Lieb-Lappen, as well as Bigley, Erin Liddell and Brooke Allen.

"I'm proud of my team today," said the coach. "Coming from 2-5-1 halfway through the year to ending up 8-7-1 and making the tournament, I'm very proud of them."

Three clutch wins to make tournament

Cohasset field hockey team players will quickly admit last year's record disappointed them in a very big way. The start of the 2005 felt like 2004 all over again, with three losses in their first four games.

Their early season performances made their chances to qualify for the MIAA state tournament appear about as likely as an October snowstorm.

You know the rest of the story. It snowed in October. And, yes, Cohasset qualified for the state tournament.

Of course, this honor did not come overnight. They slogged through many rain-soaked games. They had every right to feel happier than clams at a Sandy Beach high tide.

The season turning point came on Oct. 27. The Skippers ignited a spark that would carry them all the way into the playoffs. And what a nail-biter that game was against the Rams of Marshfield.

As the first half dragged on, the Rams sought vengeance against an unwary Skipper squad. In an earlier season matchup the Skippers had stung the Rams in Marshfield.

Scituate's last second goal knocks Lady Skippers out of state tournament

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Ten seconds.

That is all that stood between the Cohasset girls soccer team and a win that would send it to the state tournament.

And it was with 10 seconds left that Scituate's Kelsey Detwiler dashed those dreams, breaking in all alone and tying the game at 2-2, leaving the girls in white one point shy of the postseason.

Seconds after the final whistle blew, the look on the faces of the players, their coach and fans said it all: shock, sadness, and any correlating emotion you can think of.

After a postgame ceremony honoring the team's five senior players - Melissa Crowley-Buck, Emilie Shea, Molly Trahon, Katie Bolger and Jen Dinger - Skippers head coach Deb Beal still wore a tinge of those emotions in her expressions.

Beal certainly wasn't disappointed, however, nor was there any reason to be. Cohasset played perhaps its best game of the year when it needed it most.

"We gave every last bit of juice we had in ourselves, and we left it on the field," Beal said. "I can't be anything but proud of them."

Especially considering the fact that Cohasset lost to Scituate 6-1 on Sept. 8.

"We were 11 bodies doing 11 different things," Beal said of that encounter. "Tonight, we were 11 bodies doing one thing. We were on a mission."

Junior Kara Wilcox scored 15 minutes in off a corner from freshman Torey Hart, and Cohasset played textbook soccer for most of the game after that: defending well, running solid counter-attacks when the opportunity presented itself, and beating their opponents to 50-50 balls to keep up the pressure.

Boys prepare for tourney

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The CHS boys soccer team went 8-6-3 last year and lost in the second round of the state tournament to Div. 3 South top-seed Chatham.

This season, the Skippers finished 12-5-1, and they hope their tournament performance will follow the same trend of improvement.

For postseason purposes, the Skippers' record is 11-4-1. Their two games with Div. 1 Bridgewater-Raynham - one a season-opening 4-2 win and the other a 1-0 loss last Friday - do not count toward their tourney record.

The team can, however, look to those games as a gauge for the upcoming postseason. B-R won the Old Colony League championship this season - a league that includes a very good Marshfield squad - and is about as good a team as Cohasset can expect to play in their sectional.

Skippers head coach Rob Leary gave some extra minutes to his reserves last Friday to rest some of his regulars. The coach said he believes had he used his regular rotation, the team would have come out with at least a tie.

That should bode well for Cohasset, who enter the tournament on the heels of a 4-2 win over Scituate on Wednesday. Sophomore Mike Grimm got the Skippers on the board first about 25 minutes in, with a goal assisted by senior Aidan Buick.

The visiting Sailors equalized just a couple minutes later, however, and it was 1-1 going into the half. Buick gave his team a 2-1 lead early in the second half with a nice free kick from 25 yards out. Shortly thereafter, Sam MacDonald scored what Leary described as "the goal of the year."

Cohasset-Abington clash likely to decide league title

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For the last four years, the winner of the Cohasset-Abington football game has gone on to win the South Shore League title and play in the Div. 3 playoffs.

This season appears as though it will be no different.

Both teams come into tonight's game at Alumni Field undefeated in the league: Cohasset is 2-0 with Abington at 3-0. There are still league games left after this one, as the Skippers will have Norwell and Hull left to deal with, while the Green Wave will have a Mashpee team that has given the standard league powers fits already this season.

Cohasset-Abington, however, is a big one.

"I think whoever wins [tonight] is in pretty good shape," said Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe.

Rolfe and his staff are looking forward to the fact that they will have their full roster available for the first time all year. Key returnees this week from illness and injury are senior defensive end Scott Wakefield and junior linebacker Colin Conway.

Both will help a Cohasset defense that faces a challenge against the Abington offense tonight.

"Abington has good, athletic skill kids," Rolfe said. "The Wells kid is someone we have to keep an eye on."

Cohasset's veteran coach is referring to junior Tim Wells, who has the arm to play quarterback and the athleticism to play wide receiver. He did both against Norwell last Friday, and his play at receiver in the second half spurred a 15-14 comeback win over the Clippers. Wells made three big catches, including a key two-point conversion and the go-ahead touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Abington also boasts a couple talented running backs in Joe Gabriele and Steve Golbranson.

The Skippfers are coming off a bye week, but Rolfe says he isn't too concerned about that affecting his team's rhythm.

"Sometimes after a week off you come out a little bit rusty," he said. "But I really don't think that will be a problem for us. After a series or two, we'll be fine."

The Green Wave have a stingy defense that shut out Norwell in the second half last week and recently held Rockland to six points. But the Skippers have a talented offense, led by junior quarterback Anthony DiPaolo, senior running back Shane Dorian and senior receiver Nick Zappalo, who has emerged as

A different kind of pitch for Arroyo

Bronson Arroyo said he never imagined his love of music would land him on stage in front of thousands of people, but that's exactly where he'll be next weekend when he performs with his band at Memorial Hall.

Stage is set for Sox hurler to perform at Memorial Hall

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In the liner notes to his debut CD, "Covering the Bases," Boston Red Sox pitcher Bronson Arroyo thanks his sister for not getting him into 80s music and "ruining" his musical taste.

Fans of Arroyo's album — released July 12 and selling close to 20,000 copies in its first month on the shelves — can thank her, too.

Arroyo and his all-star band will be in Plymouth on Saturday to perform at Memorial Hall (7:30 p.m. start). And instead of being subjected to covers of Motley Crue and A Flock of Seagulls, the 1,200 listeners expected to be in attendance will get Arroyo's take on the likes of Pearl Jam, The Foo Fighters, Stone Temple Pilots and Toad the Wet Sprocket.

Those bands and others caught the ears of Arroyo during his teenage years, with the grunge movement of the time essentially serving as the 28-year-old's introduction to the world of music.

"I really started listening to music when I was 15," Arroyo said in a recent telephone interview. "I didn't like anything in the 80s. The only time I had ever really listened to music was with my father in the gym, listening to oldies."

Pitching for Pittsburgh Pirates AA affiliate Altoona Curve in 1999, Arroyo's interest in music intensified, as he picked up a guitar for the first time.

"The assistant GM [for Altoona] saw me pick up a guitar, and he said he had an old Yamaha lying around," said Arroyo of the instrument he still has and holds on the cover of his CD. "He gave it to me, and I just started playing it."

And playing, and playing, and playing. Post-game jam sessions are now a regular occurrence for the Red Sox, with Arroyo leading the way.

The Brooksville, Fla. native (Arroyo's southern twang becomes far more noticeable on the phone than what comes across on television) first made a name for himself on the Boston rock scene at last year's "Hot Stove, Cool Music" concert to raise money for The Jimmy Fund. His version of Pearl Jam's "Black," his favorite song, earned himself

Of course, this honor did not come overnight. They slogged through many rain-soaked games. They had every right to feel happier than clams at a Sandy Beach high tide.

The season turning point came on Oct. 27. The Skippers ignited a spark that would carry them all the way into the playoffs. And what a nail-biter that game was against the Rams of Marshfield.

As the first half dragged on, the Rams sought vengeance against an unwary Skipper squad. In an earlier season matchup the Skippers had stung the Rams in Marshfield.

Scituate's last second goal knocks Lady Skippers out of state tournament

By Mark Goodman

Ten seconds.

That is all that stood between the Cohasset girls soccer team and a win that would send it to the state tournament.

And it was with 10 seconds left that Scituate's Kelsey Detwiler dashed those dreams, breaking in all alone and tying the game at 2-2, leaving the girls in white one point shy of the postseason.

Seconds after the final whistle blew, the look on the faces of the players, their coach and fans said it all: shock, sadness, and any correlating emotion you can think of.

After a postgame ceremony honoring the team's five senior players - Melissa Crowley-Buck, Emilie Shea, Molly Trahon, Katie Bolger and Jen Dinger - Skippers head coach Deb Beal still wore a tinge of those emotions in her expressions.

Beal certainly wasn't disappointed, however, nor was there any reason to be. Cohasset played perhaps its best game of the year when it needed it most.

"We gave every last bit of juice we had in ourselves, and we left it on the field," Beal said. "I can't be anything but proud of them."

Especially considering the fact that Cohasset lost to Scituate 6-1 on Sept. 8.

"We were 11 bodies doing 11 different things," Beal said of that encounter. "Tonight, we were 11 bodies doing one thing. We were on a mission."

Junior Kara Wilcox scored 15 minutes in off a corner from freshman Torey Hart, and Cohasset played textbook soccer for most of the game after that: defending well, running solid counter-attacks when the opportunity presented itself, and beating their opponents to 50-50 balls to keep up the pressure.

Boys prepare for tourney

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The CHS boys soccer team went 8-6-3 last year and lost in the second round of the state tournament to Div. 3 South top-seed Chatham.

This season, the Skippers finished 12-5-1, and they hope their tournament performance will follow the same trend of improvement.

For postseason purposes, the Skippers' record is 11-4-1. Their two games with Div. 1 Bridgewater-Raynham - one a season-opening 4-2 win and the other a 1-0 loss last Friday - do not count toward their tourney record.

The team can, however, look to those games as a gauge for the upcoming postseason. B-R won the Old Colony League championship this season - a league that includes a very good Marshfield squad - and is about as good a team as Cohasset can expect to play in their sectional.

Skippers head coach Rob Leary gave some extra minutes to his reserves last Friday to rest some of his regulars. The coach said he believes had he used his regular rotation, the team would have come out with at least a tie.

That should bode well for Cohasset, who enter the tournament on the heels of a 4-2 win over Scituate on Wednesday. Sophomore Mike Grimm got the Skippers on the board first about 25 minutes in, with a goal assisted by senior Aidan Buick.

The visiting Sailors equalized just a couple minutes later, however, and it was 1-1 going into the half. Buick gave his team a 2-1 lead early in the second half with a nice free kick from 25 yards out. Shortly thereafter, Sam MacDonald scored what Leary described as "the goal of the year."

Cohasset-Abington clash likely to decide league title

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For the last four years, the winner of the Cohasset-Abington football game has gone on to win the South Shore League title and play in the Div. 3 playoffs.

This season appears as though it will be no different.

Both teams come into tonight's game at Alumni Field undefeated in the league: Cohasset is 2-0 with Abington at 3-0. There are still league games left after this one, as the Skippers will have Norwell and Hull left to deal with, while the Green Wave will have a Mashpee team that has given the standard league powers fits already this season.

Cohasset-Abington, however, is a big one.

"I think whoever wins [tonight] is in pretty good shape," said Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe.

Rolfe and his staff are looking forward to the fact that they will have their full roster available for the first time all year. Key returnees this week from illness and injury are senior defensive end Scott Wakefield and junior linebacker Colin Conway.

Both will help a Cohasset defense that faces a challenge against the Abington offense tonight.

"Abington has good, athletic skill kids," Rolfe said. "The Wells kid is someone we have to keep an eye on."

Cohasset's veteran coach is referring to junior Tim Wells, who has the arm to play quarterback and the athleticism to play wide receiver. He did both against Norwell last Friday, and his play at receiver in the second half spurred a 15-14 comeback win over the Clippers. Wells made three big catches, including a key two-point conversion and the go-ahead touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Abington also boasts a couple talented running backs in Joe Gabriele and Steve Golbranson.

The Skippfers are coming off a bye week, but Rolfe says he isn't too concerned about that affecting his team's rhythm.

"Sometimes after a week off you come out a little bit rusty," he said. "But I really don't think that will be a problem for us. After a series or two, we'll be fine."

The Green Wave have a stingy defense that shut out Norwell in the second half last week and recently held Rockland to six points. But the Skippers have a talented offense, led by junior quarterback Anthony DiPaolo, senior running back Shane Dorian and senior receiver Nick Zappalo, who has emerged as

A different kind of pitch for Arroyo

Bronson Arroyo said he never imagined his love of music would land him on stage in front of thousands of people, but that's exactly where he'll be next weekend when he performs with his band at Memorial Hall.

Stage is set for Sox hurler to perform at Memorial Hall

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In the liner notes to his debut CD, "Covering the Bases," Boston Red Sox pitcher Bronson Arroyo thanks his sister for not getting him into 80s music and "ruining" his musical taste.

Fans of Arroyo's album — released July 12 and selling close to 20,000 copies in its first month on the shelves — can thank her, too.

Arroyo and his all-star band will be in Plymouth on Saturday to perform at Memorial Hall (7:30 p.m. start). And instead of being subjected to covers of Motley Crue and A Flock of Seagulls, the 1,200 listeners expected to be in attendance will get Arroyo's take on the likes of Pearl Jam, The Foo Fighters, Stone Temple Pilots and Toad the Wet Sprocket.

Those bands and others caught the ears of Arroyo during his teenage years, with the grunge movement of the time essentially serving as the 28-year-old's introduction to the world of music.

"I really started listening to music when I was 15," Arroyo said in a recent telephone interview. "I didn't like anything in the 80s. The only time I had ever really listened to music was with my father in the gym, listening to oldies."

Pitching for Pittsburgh Pirates AA affiliate Altoona Curve in 1999, Arroyo's interest in music intensified, as he picked up a guitar for the first time.

"The assistant GM [for Altoona] saw me pick up a guitar, and he said he had an old Yamaha lying around," said Arroyo of the instrument he still has and holds on the cover of his CD. "He gave it to me, and I just started playing it."

And playing, and playing, and playing. Post-game jam sessions are now a regular occurrence for the Red Sox, with Arroyo leading the way.

The Brooksville, Fla. native (Arroyo's southern twang becomes far more noticeable on the phone than what comes across on television) first made a name for himself on the Boston rock scene at last year's "Hot Stove, Cool Music" concert to raise money for The Jimmy Fund. His version of Pearl Jam's "Black," his favorite song, earned himself

Richardson and Haley Haracz all made big plays when called upon. Midfielders Maggie McGoldrick and Johanna Brophy won just about every 50-50 in the middle of the pitch, and forwards Hart, Wilcox and Christina Pinkus kept the pressure on the Scituate defense.

Down 1-0 going into the second half, Scituate starting moving more bodies forward, including talented sophomore Jackie Jones. The Cohasset defense held its ground, including keeper Crowley-Buck, made a few big saves to maintain the lead.

The Skippers appeared to ice the game with 14:20 left, when Hart collected a pass in the area from fellow freshman Kristin Monaco and buried a great shot in the top corner over the outstretched arms of Scituate keeper Lindsay Horne.

Scituate went into all-out attack mode after that, and Cohasset continued its solid defense. In the 71st minute, Richardson did well to catch up to Jones on a run toward goal and force a corner kick. Two minutes later, Crowley-Buck came off her line perfectly to collect a Jones free kick.

Jones put the Sailors on the board in the 74th minute, and Beal called timeout to settle her team. They came out on the attack and looking to put it away, with Horne at one point having to make a huge save on a great volley from McGoldrick.

After Haracz fended off a run from Scituate's Kathleen Garland to force a Sailors throw-in, Scituate called timeout. Most, if not all of the Cohasset players thought it was the final whistle, as the bench ran out onto the pitch to join their already celebrating teammates. "Game over, Cohasset wins 2-1" was even heard over the PA.

The game, however, was not over, as 1:07 was left on the clock. Following that was seemingly the longest 67 seconds one could possibly experience, culminating in Detwiler's heartbreaking equalizer.

With this season over, Beal was already looking forward to next year, when she will have 18 underclassmen who saw significant varsity time returning.

"If how we played on the field tonight is my future, then I don't have anything to worry about," Beal said.

Boys prepare for tourney

FROM BOYS SOCCER, PAGE 17

The senior stopper back won a 50-50 ball in Cohasset's half of the field, played it ahead for Buick, and then kept running. Buick made a couple nice moves to get himself into the penalty area and got off a shot. That shot was deflected right to the charging MacDonald who, still in full stride, one-touched with the side of his foot into the back of the net.

The Sailors made it 3-2 with 16 minutes left in the match, and would have tied it up had it not been for a couple great saves from Cohasset senior keeper Prescott Busk. One of those saves came on a great shot that seemed destined for the upper right corner of the net, until Busk came out of nowhere to punch it away.

Busk has been good in net all year for Cohasset. He was not one of two keepers named to the South Shore League All-Star team this week, something that does not sit well with Leary.

The pairings were announced yesterday and are available on the MIAA state tournament web site, www.massachusetts.ihigh.com.

"I think that was a misfortune; he deserved it," said the coach. "Prescott has kept us in a lot of games this year. His play has helped our defenders out a lot. They can be more aggressive, knowing that if they make a mistake, Prescott is there to back them up."

Those who did make the All-Star team from Cohasset were Buick, MacDonald, senior defender Trevor Brady and sophomore midfielder Sam Roth. Buick was also voted by SSL coaches as the league's top player, and will play in the Eastern Mass All-Star game for the second straight season.

What is foremost on everyone's minds today, however, is the state tournament. The pairings were announced yesterday and are available on the MIAA state tournament web site, www.massachusetts.ihigh.com.

The team's 11-4-1 virtually guarantees them of at least one home game, and Leary believes his team is poised for a deep postseason run.

"We're been playing very well for the last month or so," Leary said. "We're 6-1-1 since the [Oct. 14] loss to Harwich, and even in that game I felt we outplayed them. We have a lot of kids playing well right now."

One of those players is junior center-mid Chris Donze. Filling in for injured senior Brandon Smith, Donze has stepped up into a defensive midfield role and, in the words of Leary, "has done everything we can possibly ask him to."

After missing over three weeks with an ankle injury, Smith returned to action Wednesday against Scituate. His return for the postseason figures to bolster an already strong central midfield that featured, among others, Donze and senior Chris Ofsthun.

A whirlwind end for field hockey

FROM HOCKEY, PAGE 17

So the Rams literally had a score to settle. At halftime, Marshfield led 2-0.

When the whistle blew for the start of the second half, Cohasset just clicked. The floodgates opened as the Skippers fired off shot after shot. At the 14:58 mark, junior Caitlin Hurley set up senior Brooke Allen for a nice score into the back of the Marshfield net.

With 7:03 left in the game, senior co-captain Katie James passed to junior Sheelah Scott, who promptly tied the game at two apiece. The big hit came with only 3:25 left on the clock with an unassisted game-winning shot by James herself.

"We really wanted this win," recalled senior co-captain Remy Lee. "Our perseverance earned us this victory. It boosted our confidence as we headed into our most important games of the season."

Head coach Deb Bostwick also noted senior Erin Liddell for her solid offensive work. Mia Lieb-Lappen, Christie and Carrie Muir, Laura Campedelli, and Corinna Durham held the field together at midfield positions. Defensively, co-captains Lee and Katherine Whoriskey, along with Ellen Tarpey and Sally Meehan, kept the Rams from posing any threat.

With less than 24 hours' rest, the Skippers played host again. This time against a very difficult Norwell squad. To make matters worse, the cold and the wind made the match-up a bone-chilling event. Even the motivating music coming over the loud speaker system could not offset the playing conditions.

The Skippers displayed confidence from the starting whistle. A look at the stat book would reveal Skipper domination over the Clippers. Yet the reality surfaced beyond the numbers. The Skippers racked up 17 offensive corners and an equal number of shots on Norwell goalie Katie O'Hara, who turned away each shot in a stunning show of defense.

As the Cohasset fans emptied the stands they shook their heads in disbelief. One parent described the game as a "beehive of Cohasset blue" down at the Norwell end as the Skippers struggled unsuccessfully.

It all boiled down to a momentary let-down by Cohasset giving the Clippers the one goal they needed. Despite the 1-0 final score, Bostwick pointed to many players who gave it their all: Lieb-Lappen, Condon, Scott, Hurley, Molly Gallagher, Meehan, and Durham.

"This was a real heartbreaker," said Condon. "We let up once and Norwell took advantage."

For the third game in as many days, the Skippers hosted yet another game. This time, neighboring Scituate traveled to the Deer Hill School for a game filled with intensity and, believe it or not, snow. Lieb-Lappen broke open the scoring with a goal at the 14:03 mark of the second half. Bostwick called Lieb-Lappen's game "her best performance of the year."

With 3:48 left in the game, Meehan assisted Durham, who scored on an offensive corner to take the wind out of the Sailors game. The game ended with a Cohasset shutout of 2-0.

Officials postponed Sunday's scheduled showdown with Westwood. Skipper fans began to wonder if time remained to clinch a much-wanted tourney invitation. At 7-7-1 Cohasset needed only one more point to qualify for the postseason activity.

Then came a very Happy Halloween. The Skippers spooked Westwood by shutting them out in a tight 1-0 victory. Junior Virginia Spofford fed senior Jessica Wheelwright a pass to put the game away early in the first half.

This event sealed the playoff deal and loaded up the Skipper confidence meter. James, Condon, Allen, Devin Smith, Vanessa Plante, Carrie and Christie Muir, Aaron Bigley, Wheelwright, Michelle Madge, Campedelli, and Alida Tangherlini all stepped it up to pull out a Skipper "W".

This game also marked Bostwick's 100th win in her 17 years as a Cohasset field hockey coach.

"These players are very special to me. I'm so happy they were the team to get this honor for me!" exclaimed Bostwick.

A different kind of pitch for Arroyo

quite a bit of attention.

Things snowballed from there, and during last autumn's World Series run, record executives asked Arroyo for a list of songs he'd like to cover for an album. Among the 12 tunes that wound up on the aptly named CD are "Black," Alice in Chains' "Down in the Hole," Stone Temple Pilots' "Plush," and "Hunger Strike" from Temple of the Dogs.

"I just envisioned myself sitting on a stool in a bar somewhere, just playing in front of 100 people or something like that."

— Red Sox pitcher Bronson Arroyo

And, of course, there is "Dirty Water," which has received consistent air play on WBCN and other area rock radio stations. At Arroyo's record release party on July 13 at the Avalon, Dick Dodd — lead singer of The Standells, the band that originally sang the tune in 1966 — joined Arroyo on stage to perform the song, which appropriately served as the show's finale.

Teammates Johnny Damon, Kevin Youkilis and Lenny DiNardo also appeared on stage, as they did for the album version of the song. Yankees center fielder Bernie Williams, himself an avid musician who has also released his own CD, was also on hand to take in the performance. Among those backing up Arroyo at the show, as they did on the CD, were former Alice in Chains bassist Mike Inez and drummer Kenny Aronoff (Bob Seger, John Mellencamp).

Close to 2,000 people attended that show, in which Arroyo stuck to vocals (as he does on the CD). Arroyo admits he gets more nervous for his gigs than he does for pitching in front of 50,000 people, and that the attention his performances have received have been a bit overwhelming.

That really is not a surprise considering that, before last year, he had never dreamed of making a CD or singing in front of a big crowd.

"It never really crossed my mind," Arroyo said. "I'm still not even close to a good guitarist. I'm just a guy who sits there and strums away. I thought that, vocally, I could probably make an album. But I never really aspired to do that.

"I just envisioned myself sitting on a stool in a bar somewhere, just playing in front of 100 people or something like that."

That show put Arroyo under some fire after a so-so start the following evening against the Yankees, where he left with a 5-4 lead despite giving up 10 hits in 5 2/3 innings (the Sox went on to lose, 8-6). Arroyo admits that, while the Avalon show itself did not affect his start, the three days of preparation leading up to it did.

Arroyo said that was the only start in which his music did have an effect.

Fans may still wonder where his priorities lie, but make no mistake about it: baseball remains Arroyo's true love. He is still a pitcher first; one that just happens to rock on the side.

"Without question, baseball is number one," he said. "I've been playing ball since I was 6; music has definitely been just a hobby. I'll take a few more world championships over a platinum record, any day."

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Recreation activities

Learn to ski program - Ragged Mountains

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with Buckles and boards Ski Shop of Marshfield announces registrations for a learn to ski/snowboard program, to be held, Tuesday, Nov. 8, from 3 to 6 p.m., at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 41 Highland Ave., Town Hall, Cohasset. Trips this year include Ragged Mountain, Mount Sunapee, and Bretton Woods.

The program will be open to all ages but children must be able to participate on their own. There will be an adult chaperone to assist; however, children must be able to function with minimal assistance ie: ages 7 and over.

The fee for this program is $269.99 per student, and rental information will be available at registration.

This year will be 5 Saturday trips starting in December through March 4, 2006. There will be four 1 1/2 hour lessons and 5 full day ski lift tickets included in the $269.99 package.

Cohasset Recreation/Boosters Basketball Registration 2005-2006

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's Basketball registrations will be held for boys and girls in grades 1 through 8, at the Town Hall, on Saturday, Nov. 5, from 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for the program is $75. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club (CBBC), shirt charge is included in the fee. Details on the Basketball Program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid any conflicts. The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Booster Club and the Recreation Department, providing youngsters with a teaching and recreational opportunity. Coaches and Sponsors are needed. You may sign-up at registration.

During this registration there will be registrations for Spring Lacrosse for grades 3-8.

Youth lacrosse registration begins Nov. 5

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the 2006 spring season on Saturday, Nov. 5 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the auditorium at Town Hall.

The early registration day – held simultaneously with Recreation basketball sign-ups – gives families the opportunity to save some money.

Registrants on Nov. 5 will get the 2005 spring season price of $140 for one player and $260 for two. Registrants after November 5 – and sign-ups will remain open through a second in-person sign-up day in January – will pay the 2006 price of $150 for one player and $275 for two.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). The 2006 season will mark the first time Cohasset has fielded a full-time team in the youngest age bracket for girls.

The program is hopeful of attending a jamboree near the end of its season, and is working to develop a special Memorial Day weekend program with teams visiting from out of state. The season ends with Cohasset's annual Family Day in June.

The youth program is likely to field 12 or more teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of that growth, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away.

"We will have this initial sign-up in November, then allow people to mail in registration forms up until our final sign-up at the high school in early January," says Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "At that point, we're likely to be at our ideal roster sizes, meaning there may be no late registration whatsoever."

Parents who can not attend the Nov. 5 registration can wait until Jan. 7 to do it in person at the second sign-up day or can contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. The season concludes in mid-June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Nov. 5 sign-up. If you need more information, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Children in need of special education

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age three through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 16-21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Linda Gill, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

Project Safeguard starts school year

Respect, responsibility for oneself is programming focus

Adolescence is a very difficult time for many young people. Conversely, one of the greatest challenges parents face is maintaining positive and supportive relationships with their adolescent children. To help with these issues, Project announces its 2005-2006 programming called "Respect and Responsibility for Oneself."

"We are very excited about the programming for the coming school year," said Beth Sternala, assistant principal for Cohasset Middle School. "For parents of pre-teens and teens, these years can be very difficult. You want to make sure that your children are making the right choices that are healthy and are based on self-respect. I think Project Safeguard's 'Respect and Responsibility for Oneself' initiative is a good tool for both parents and students alike to help them understand each others' perspective and pressures."

Kicking off this year's program is a multimedia presentation and parents workshop that focuses on adolescent independence and the importance of making good choices. The film, called "It's My Life" will be shown for students and parents Wednesday, Nov. 9, at 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. in the Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium. The film is free of charge and parents are encouraged to attend either showing.

"It's My Life" is a high-energy, three-screen, multi-media adventure designed to challenge students to consider the responsibility and consequences of their choices and how those choices affect others. The film will motivate students to make positive choices for themselves while demonstrating respect for those around them.

The students will have guided discussion following the film that will address issues such as what it means to be responsible, what happens when you break the trust that others have in you, how can you start today to become a more responsible individual and what do you admire about people who acted responsibly in the past.

Parents will have discussion groups facilitated by professional clergy and counselors to address what parents can do to facilitate responsibility, how to share what household expectations parents have for their kids, how can parents communicate their expectations for household responsibilities and what parental issues/concerns do parents have that might direct future parent/student programming by Project Safeguard.

The second presentation is a parent workshop called "It's My Life: A Parent's View." The workshop will be led by Jan Tedeschi, Tuesday, Nov. 15 and 29, from 7-9 p.m. in the CMHS Library.

Tedeschi is a certified parent and teen trainer and certified school adjustment counselor who has a master's in marriage and family therapy and is also trained in chemical dependency and anger management. Her experience as a mother of four teens greatly enriches her professional knowledge. The two evening sessions will tie in with the film addressing current issues and will provide hands-on techniques for maintaining effective communication, eliminating power struggles and utilizing discipline skills to promote healthy choices. The fee for these workshops is $20. Seating is limited, register at toomey6@comcast.net, payment will be collected on the 15th.

The Project Safeguard Committee, comprised of parents, community leaders and faculty, facilitates programming to support families and enhance community atmosphere. For more information contact Beth Sternala, Middle School office; Nancy Oddleifson, fiveodds@aol.com or Sheila Toomey, toomey6@comcast.net.

Former inmate talks to students

Students in Mr. Newkirk's Current Domestic Issues class participated in the Project Youth Program. On Nov. 3, as part of the program, the high school hosted a guest speaker, and former inmate, to address students in the Current Domestic Issues class. Students will also visit the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Norfolk on Nov. 10.

The PYP began with the commutation of prisoner Hank Arsenault who was sentenced to die in the electric chair in 1955. Arsenault made a pact, that if he were spared execution; he would initiate a program to educate students about the devastating consequences of criminal behavior and the realities of prison life.

The mission of the PYP is to help prevent senseless acts of violence in and around schools and in the community. Through the inmate's personal experiences and insights, the PYP provides an opportunity for students to observe, listen and question "primary sources" on crime and punishment.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Deer Hill students Sara Campedelli, Danny Tangherlini, and Charlie Blackington count boxtops as part of the Boxtops for Education Program.

Boxtops can really make a difference

Actually, Boxtops make dollars — lots of them. That's because General Mills pays 10 cents for every Boxtop collected by students across the nation. Boxtops are small coupons found on the boxes and bags of all General Mills items including Progresso soup, Old El Paso Mexican food, frozen vegetables and many cereals. Participating items are clearly marked.

Students at the Deer Hill School redeem these coupons for cash. So far this year, Deer Hill students, with the generous help of workers at the Cohasset Recycling Center, have collected more than $400 worth of Boxtops. Funds generated by this recycling program are used to purchase library materials and other items that are not funded through the yearly budget. Deer Hill students encourage all community members to take an extra moment to clip those Boxtops and send them to the school. Those small Boxtops make a big difference to Cohasset students.

Deer Hill fund-raiser

The fifth graders at the Deer Hill School are planning a fund-raiser to help defray the cost of next fall's annual trip to Camp Bournedale.

The week-long pilgrimage to Cape Cod is a favorite among sixth-graders and includes a wide array of science and exploration activities, from nature studies to rocketry. Through Nov. 14, the students will be selling Kinnealey Meats, courtesy of Joe and Andrea Kinnealey of Cohasset, to help cover student costs for the trip. For more information call Bridget O'Brien at 781-383-9397.

Calendar raffle

The sixth annual Cohasset High School varsity hockey team holiday calendar raffle begins Sunday, Nov. 6, when the varsity hockey players will be selling raffle tickets to friends, neighbors and families for $5 each. All monies raised are used to purchase team equipment, continue team development and fund the Coach Dennis Walsh Hockey Scholarship sponsored by the Hockey Boosters.

Every single day during the month of December, as well as New Year's Day 2006, a ticket will be pulled from the raffle pool, and a variety of prizes donated by local merchants will be delivered to a lucky winner. With a total of 32 drawings, each ticket has 32 chances to win.

This year's prizes are valued at over $3,000 including a pair of $250 Maui Jim sunglasses, and a $175 automobile detailing at Cohasset Collision. In addition, there will be a special New Year's Day bonus drawing for a cash prize of $150.

Players, parents and Hockey Boosters have expressed their sincere appreciation of the continuing support of area businesses who so generously support Cohasset youth.

Pile of book bags grows daily

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Senior Azalea Bemis, searches for her bag under the mountain that has accumulated in the entranceway at CHS.

Last week was the first five consecutive days that we've been in school in a while and everything went smoothly. Week 10 began with a spooky Monday that was atypical of a normal Hallows Eve. The temperature skyrocketed into the mid-70s after a stormy and cold weekend, and you know what they say about New England weather, if you don't like it, wait five minutes and it will change.

But in all seriousness, the search of students as they enter the Middle High School continues, the mountain of book and athletic bags grows bigger with every passing day. Other than the morning searches, the High School has remained undaunted by these threats and has been proceeding with school as usual.

The month of November brought with it some change in the morning announcements for the Middle School and a copious amount of news for me to relay to you.

• The Guidance Counselors visited every classroom during first period on Monday to talk to the students about stress and how to deal with it in light of the recent threats.

• Mr. Buckley's Law Class went on a field trip to the Hingham District Court on Monday to learn about the judiciary system.

• The Math Club will have had its first competition on Thursday, Nov. 3rd at Whitman-Hanson. Good luck mathletes; add like you've never added before.

• The National Honor Society has begun tutoring students in the Middle School, but is still looking for a community service project. Again, contact Kelsey Bell, NHS President, with any recommendations for these kids.

• The Social Awareness Organization will have met on Wednesday, Nov. 2nd, to discuss its upcoming trip to Father Bill's homeless shelter. Contact Mr. Scott Newkirk if you are interested in participating in this important project.

• Attention all seniors: your senior write-up, portrait, and baby pictures were due on Tuesday, Nov. 1st. If you still have not turned those in and wish to, please contact Yearbook advisor, Derry Schwantner.

• The Middle School administration has decided to lead the students in the Pledge of Allegiance only once in a five-day period after their morning announcements, beginning this week. In addition, the Middle School has also decided to separate its morning announcements from the High School's, and each day will have a different highlight regarding the broadcast. For instance, Monday's will give the "word of the week" over the loud-speaker, and Tuesday's will consist of the "daily trivia question." This should add a little spice to the usually bleak morning ritual.

The month of October is done, and as November has begun, so has this bizarre, yet beautiful, weather pattern. That's all of the news for this week, hope you had a Happy Halloween. Hopefully this beautiful weather will continue and it will bring with it more exciting news for me to report.

Novel approach to dealing with childhood obesity

Book offers kids hope and help achieving healthy lifestyle

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMORE@CNC.COM

Sometimes all it takes is words to change a life.

That's what Lorenzo White hopes to accomplish with his first book, "The Magic of Max: The Story of Tommy Rome," spoken through the eyes and words of an 11-year-old boy, living an unsatisfying life of childhood obesity.

In the book, White tells of the trials and tribulations of Tommy who is ridiculed because of his weight and unable to take part in school sports. But when all seems lost, Tommy is befriended by Max, a boy who moves in across the street and sees him for who he really is and gives him the confidence to make positive changes.

White, a 55-year-old Hingham resident who has spent his career both in the modeling business and as a personal trainer for Hollywood celebrities like Aerosmith band members and Farrah Fawcett, now offers private training at Bay State Athletic Club on the Driftway in Scituate and always reminds himself the importance of maintaining a healthy and organic lifestyle.

"I learned at a very young age to take care of myself," he said about emerging from a "rough childhood" into one of success and self-satisfaction. "Food is about fuel, not entertainment."

And that's the journey that the book's protagonist Tommy takes as he battles the childhood trauma of being made fun of because of his weight along with the challenge of playing sports. Of course this is until he meets Max, someone from a fit family who is able to accept Tommy for who he is, and makes "magic" happen.

"This is a really upbeat story for kids," said White about the relatable tale. "It gives the kids the words they need."

"This is a really upbeat story for kids. It gives the kids the words they need."

—Lorenzo White, author and fitness guru

As soon as White came across the idea for his book, his writing "took off" as he used his own youthful attitude to depict the life of a struggling overweight boy.

And that boy's story can connect with many family situations in existence today, he said.

Shopping at the Hingham Fruit Center two Christmases ago, White said he found the source of his story down an aisle of the store: a young 9-year-old boy weighing over 200 lbs. carrying box of ice cream treats while his mother led with a carriage full of junk food.

"It's got to be so traumatic," he said about the boy who he watched beg and plead for the ice cream. "I thought to myself, I needed to address this."

During his daily 9-mile walks around town, White began to put his ideas together and struggled through five drafts of his story until he got it right. He worked at his typewriter for 5-hour days for the next 5-1/2 months, until his book was ready for an editor's eye.

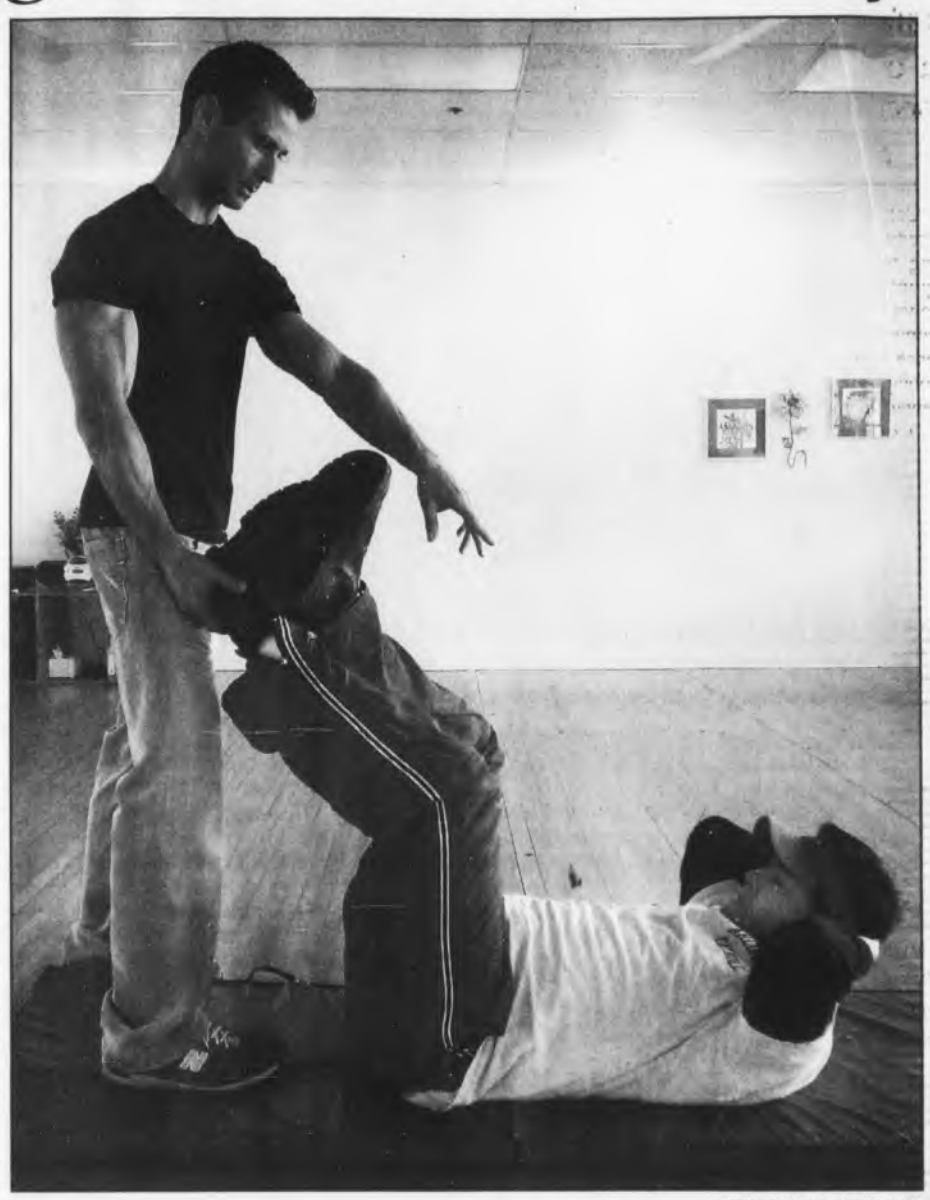
The finished piece now is something to reach out to anyone with hope for a healthy future and the fulfillment of children's lives growing up, he said.

"People are so caught up in themselves, in their lives, that they forget about the obligation of these kids," he said. "Someone has to break the chain. I am hoping this book has something to wake people up. Something has to be done today and not tomorrow."

Originally from Brookline — where he lived for 7 years — White used his fervor for physical fitness and nutrition to his advantage, moving out west to Colorado and spending time in California to train members of Aerosmith for the past 11 years.

White also continues to maintain a career in commercial modeling, a large portion of his life that has left a mark in places like New York City and Europe through appearances in magazines such as GQ, Esquire and Vogue.

With his new book just recently released, White said it will hit a nerve with people willing to make a change in their lives and their families.



"I'm not trying to change the world," he said. "Just one unit at a time."

White is now working on another book titled "Mercy's Edge," and a follow-up to "The Magic of Max" with a book about exercise and 12 easy meals for kids to cook at home.

A reception for White's book "The Magic of Max: The Story of Tommy Rome," is being held Thursday, Nov. 10 at 5 p.m. at Buttonwood Books & Toys on Rte 3A in Cohasset. Refreshments will be provided by Riva Restaurant owner Jimmy Burke from Scituate.

A reception for personal trainer Lorenzo White, who has penned "The Magic of Max: The Story of Tommy Rome," is Thursday, Nov. 10 at 5 p.m. at Buttonwood Books & Toys at Shaw's Plaza.

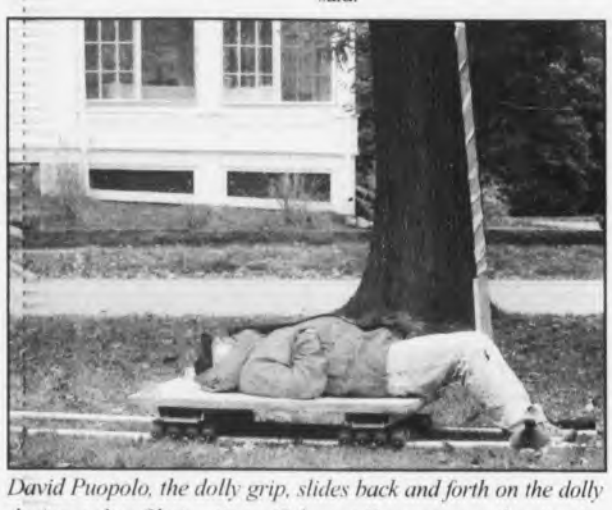
Cohasset lands Space Camp movie



Films becoming a 'common' occurrence

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset's beauty often draws production crews to town, looking for that perfect shot of the quintessential New England town. Saturday, Oct. 22 the common was abuzz with activity once more, as a film crew shot footage for a short fiction film tentatively titled "Space Camp."

"Cohasset was the most beautiful of all the towns we looked at," said Jason Carter, a Brockton resident and film production instructor at Emerson College, who is co-directing the film with Paul Ceriello of Brooklyn , NY. While the two had narrowed down their search to the towns of Carlisle and Norwood, a last-minute trip to Cohasset sealed the movie's fate.

In addition, Carter said Cohasset was by far the easiest town to work with in terms of getting permission to film. "That certainly had a lot to do with William Griffin's being very willing to work with me," he said.

David Puopolo, the dolly grip, slides back and forth on the dolly during a slow filming time. Cohasset Common was the site of much activity Saturday, Oct. 22 as production of the short independent film "Space Camp" was underway.

Production designer Tara Robinson applies makeup to Sara Carter, 11, of Brockton on Cohasset Common during filming of "Space Camp," Saturday, Oct. 22. Sara's father Jason is co-director of the independent film, which will be submitted to area film festivals once post-production is complete.

Carter said Cohasset's gorgeous location fit perfectly with the theme for the movie. The film is about a 12-year-old boy and girl who are competing to win a town-sponsored trip to NASA's space camp. The student who raises the most money at the town's fall fair wins. Carter said he knew he wanted the fair scenes to be shot on a town common, preferably with a gazebo, but when he saw Cohasset's common, he was willing to work without one. "It's a gorgeous location," he said.

Prior to shooting, Carter said he made some contacts at the Farmer's Market while scoping out the scene. He said many of the people he met donated their time and merchandise to come set up as extras in the fair scene. Some familiar Cohasset faces to be seen in the film include Antonio J. Roy of Cohasset Wood Arts, Cheryl Mechan of Pony-Go-Round pony rides, Cohasset Village Greenery employees, members of the First Parish Church, and Gracie Thompson, also known as "Green Thumb Gracie" for the flowers she sells at the Farmer's Market. Thompson's grandchildren, along with some other Cohasset children, came by and helped out as extras in the movie as well.

As filming began, even more extras began to surface as Carter said some children who were walking by became interested in the film, and Carter invited them to stay and be in it. Also included in the roster of extras are Carter's three children, Sara, 11, Madeline, 8, and Isabelle, 3.

Peter Marsh of Dennisport holds the boom mic while Breigh McClelland, 10, left, of North Weymouth, Daniellle Frederick, 11, of Cohasset, Moira Donohue, 12, of Cohasset and Alison Whelan, 11, of Cohasset compete in a sac race during filming of the short fictional film "Space Camp" on Cohasset Common Saturday, Oct. 22.

Because the film is a low-budget 13-minute film, Carter said everyone — both cast and crew — worked for free and he was very happy to have the extra volunteers.

"We brought food and had balloons to keep it exciting and we had fair games," said Carter, to help keep those extras who weren't working occupied while other filming was taking place. He said they tried very much to have a real fair atmosphere going on even while the cameras were not rolling.

Carter said when the movie is complete — which will take months of post-production work — he will have a special pre-screening for everyone who helped out. After that, he will begin submitting "Space Camp" to various film festivals and hope it gets accepted. If his prior achievements are any indication, this film should have no problem gaining notoriety. Some of Carter's past projects include a 10 minute film called "Dysfunctional Norm," which was shown at the Woods Hole Film Festival, and "Unstrung" for which he won best cinematographer at the 48 hour film festival national competition.

Gracie Thompson, second from right, of Cohasset, chats with Adrian Dunne, 11, also of Cohasset, while her granddaughter Breigh McClelland, 10, of North Weymouth takes a break from the grueling life of acting. All had gathered on Cohasset Common Saturday, Oct. 22 to serve as extras in the short independent film "Space Camp," co-directed by Brockton resident Jason Carter and Brooklyn, NY resident Paul Ceriello.

OBITUARIES

Patricia L. Gallagher

1964 CHS graduate

Patricia L. Gallagher

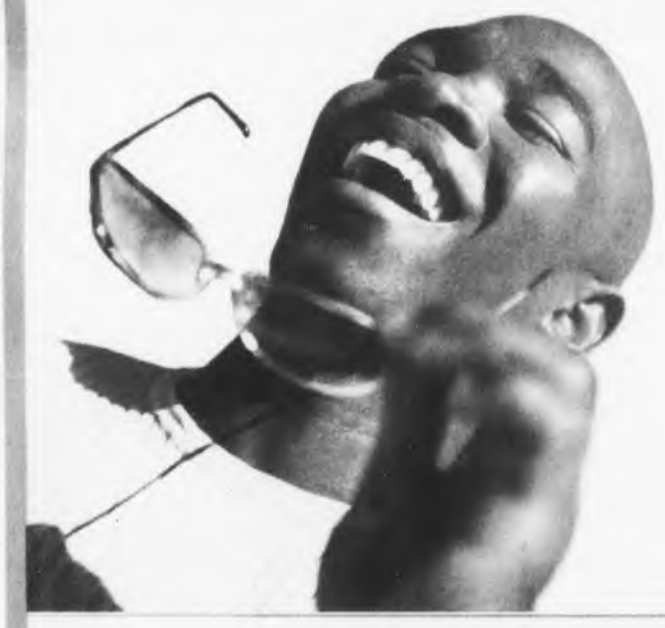
Patricia L. (Anderson) Gallagher, 59, of Scituate, died Oct. 28 at Blue Hills Alzheimer's Care Center in Stoughton, after a five year battle with Alzheimer's disease.

The daughter of the late Francis X. Anderson and the late Virginia M. (Farrow) Anderson, she was born in Quincy, raised in Cohasset, and was a 1964 graduate of Cohasset High School.

Mrs. Gallagher worked as a sales representative for Talbots in Hingham for 27 years, retiring in 2001, due to her illness.

A lover of the outdoors and active in sports, Mrs. Gallagher enjoyed hiking, was a member of the Appalachian Mountain Club, and climbed Mt. Washington several times. She was an avid walker, walking a minimum of two miles a day, rain or shine. She also swam two miles a day during the summer from Sandy Beach in Cohasset. Mrs. Gallagher spent 15 years as a volunteer for the Cohasset Recreation Dept. working with beginner skiers and hosting many ski trips to New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine.

Married for 40 years, she leaves her husband, James L. Gallagher Jr. of Scituate; a son, James L. Gallagher III, and his wife Kimberly of Kingston; a daughter, Sara B. Sestito, and her husband William of Cohasset; four grandchildren, Heather Sestito, and Stephanie Sestito, both of Cohasset, and James L. Gallagher IV, and Stephen Gallagher, both of Kingston; five sisters, Marie Peterson of Maine, Barbara Welch of New Hampshire, Dorothy Woodruff of Maine, Kathleen Hicks of Florida, and Karen O'Brien of Carver; and two brothers, Michael Anderson of Norwell, and Steven Anderson of Carver. She was the sister of the late Christine Anderson of Hull.



A Nov. 1 funeral Mass was conducted by the Rev. John Mulverhill at Saint Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment is in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations in her memory may be sent to The Alzheimer's Association, 1 Kendall Square, Cambridge, MA 02139.

Citizens for Life to host workshop Nov. 12

Massachusetts Citizens for Life will host a comprehensive workshop, "The Vocation of Love," on Saturday, Nov. 12, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Monsignor Hackett Parish Center at Immaculate Conception Church, 1199 Commercial St., Weymouth. Presented by noted educator Linda Thayer, the program is designed to introduce students and parents to the Christian view of human sexuality. Admission is free. Drinks and snacks will be available. Attendees should bring a bag lunch. For more information call Linda Thayer, 781-834-9855 or MCFL South Shore Chapter, 781-925-5866.

Fourteen car crashes in September

September was a quiet month for the Cohasset Police Department; there were four arrests; one for operating under the influence of liquor; one for violation of a restraining order; one for minor in possession of alcohol, and one for protective custody, Police Chief James Hussey said.

During the month of September the police department investigated 14 motor vehicle accidents, five of which resulted in personal injury. There were also 119 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $2000 in fines. Additionally, there were 16 parking tickets issued totaling $375 in fines.

Also in the month of September the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 969 calls for police services of those 136 were Emergency 9-1-1 calls, Hussey said.

In the month of September there were five reports of breaking and entering; two involved a private residence, one involved a town building, one involved a motor vehicle, and finally one involved a private business. Also in the month of September there were eight criminal complaints issued, Hussy said.

NOVEMBER 3-11 2005

Cassidy makes 'Joseph' role a family affair

When Patrick Cassidy was approached about headlining the current national tour of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," now at Boston's Colonial Theatre, the 43-year-old wasn't sure he wanted to spend more than a year away from home. Cassidy signed on to play the title role in the Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice musical, however, when he realized his wife, Melissa Hurley, and two sons, Cole, 10, and 7-year-old Jack, could go on the road, too. Hurley even joins her husband on-stage in a cameo as Joseph's seductress and also in the show's ensemble.

"My wife and I decided to do this so that our sons could learn about the U.S. first-hand by visiting the whole country. We found a fantastic tutor who is also a great nanny so that the whole thing is working just beautifully. This is a wonderful experience for us," Cassidy explained last week by telephone from Kalamazoo. "Not too many families has get the chance to live a domestic life while on the road with a show."

As the son of Academy Award-winner Shirley Jones and the late Broadway theater legend Jack Cassidy, and younger brother of former teen idols David and Shaun Cassidy, Patrick Cassidy knows a thing or two about life in a show business family. Even with his own impressive slate of stage, film and television credits —including a 2004 Broadway run in "42nd Street" in which he co-starred for a time with his mother — Cassidy knows that show business is not always the most dependable way to make a living.

"My family matters much more to me than my career in show business. My mother taught me a long time ago that the family should always come first. She's had a long, very successful career, but her first priority has always been her children and the man in her life. I feel the same way. My career is just my job, not my life. If my sons ever decide to go into this business, they will be advised to have something to fall back on which is the advice my parents always gave me and my brothers."

These days, Cassidy has the best of both worlds as he returns to the show that uses a pop, rock and country score to tell the biblical tale of Jacob's son, Joseph, his 11 brothers and the multicolor coat that goes missing. Cassidy first took the show out on national tour six years ago.

"'Joseph' works because it has a wonderful, memorable score ("Any Dream Will Do," "One More Angel In Heaven," and "Close Every Door") that you can hum. It also has a great story of brothers, sons, unity and the togetherness of family."

An ensemble of 20 twenty children, ages 9-13, from the Franklin School for the Performing Arts — including Audrey Kivlehan of Foxboro — will appear in the Boston run of "Joseph."

Patrick Cassidy stars in "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," featuring "American Idol" runner-up Amy Adams as the Narrator, at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Nov. 13. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

A NERVOUS CONDITION

Four out of five individuals with hearing loss can be treated neither medically nor surgically due to the fact that the damage to their ears is sensorineural. They have an age-related condition known as presbycusis. That means that some of the 30,000 to 50,000 hair cells in the inner ear, which are responsible for transmitting sound information to the auditory nerve, have been injured or destroyed. The hair cells that respond to higher pitches are the most vulnerable, rendering understanding of women's and children's voices more difficult. Another early sign is poor discrimination of consonants, which, in both male and female speech, tend to be higher in pitch than vowels. Fortunately, a hearing instrument can help.

The human ear is an amazing instrument. When its parts break down or fail to function properly, however, today's remarkable technology is doing its best to keep pace to help the hearing impaired once again hear the sounds of life. If you have concerns about your hearing, or a parent or other family member's hearing abilities, we hope you'll feel comfortable discussing today's options for better hearing with a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. Our facilities are full-service at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and we welcome you to stop by or call us at 781-337-1144.

P.S. The other major form of hearing loss is "conductive" hearing loss, which is usually treatable through surgery or medicine.

'Lost' in Hawaii

Find some TV stars while lounging in style at Turtle Bay

By LISA MATTE
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

OAHU, Hawaii -- Someone get the crash survivors of "Lost" a compass. They are so not lost! The cast of the hit ABC television series, now in its second season, is enjoying the good life on the North Shore of Oahu while their alter egos -- Jack (Matthew Fox), Hurley (Jorge Garcia), Savid (Naveen Andrews), Kate (Evangeline Lilly), Locke (Terry O'Quinn) and the rest -- struggle for survival on a mysterious tropical isle.

The multistory, 375-room Turtle Bay Resort on the North Shore of Oahu doubles as a location for the show, which is filmed entirely in Hawaii, the resort's expansive and mostly pristine waterfront landscape the perfect stand-in for a deserted island.

Because filming is all out in the open, guests at the property might catch a glimpse, especially if they do the 20-minute walk from the hotel to the property's giant banyan tree, the largest such tree in the state and a prime location on the show. The actors and crew usually start work at 6 a.m. and finish at sunset and it's not uncommon to spy cast members as you traverse the property's hiking and biking trails or make your way to the beach (pity for me when I visited in September they were in L.A. picking up the show's Emmy for Best Drama Series).

In this tight-knit community just 45 minutes from the traffic jams and hustle and bustle of Honolulu, "star-spotting" has become a hobby of sorts. Another good place to check out is Haleiwa Joe's, a favorite harborfront eatery. It's one of actor O'Quinn's regular off-camera hang-outs. According to Haleiwa Joe's general manager Chris Pirrone, members of the "Lost" cast routinely mix and mingle with locals at the friendly bar where "hero worship" is typically more focused on the North Shore's championship surfers than on television celebrities.

It's no coincidence that one of the world's best surfing schools has several locations on Oahu, including one at Turtle Bay. Beginners and advanced surfers alike will benefit from lessons by instructors at the Hans Hedemann Surf School Hawaii (www.hhsurf.com). The school boasts a team of lifeguard- and CPR-trained teachers who guarantee even the newest surfer will be up and riding by the end of a two-hour lesson.

Those more at home on the links than in the surf can get "lost" at Turtle Bay on two golf courses, nestled among acres of ironwood trees and unspoiled wetlands. The resort's Palmer Course hosts the annual PGA Champions Tour's Turtle Bay Championship and the LPGA SBS Open while the Fazio Course (designed by George Fazio) also serves up a memorable golf experience. Check out the resort's Golf Academy for individual instruction, a golf school and its junior golf program for students ages 4 to 17.

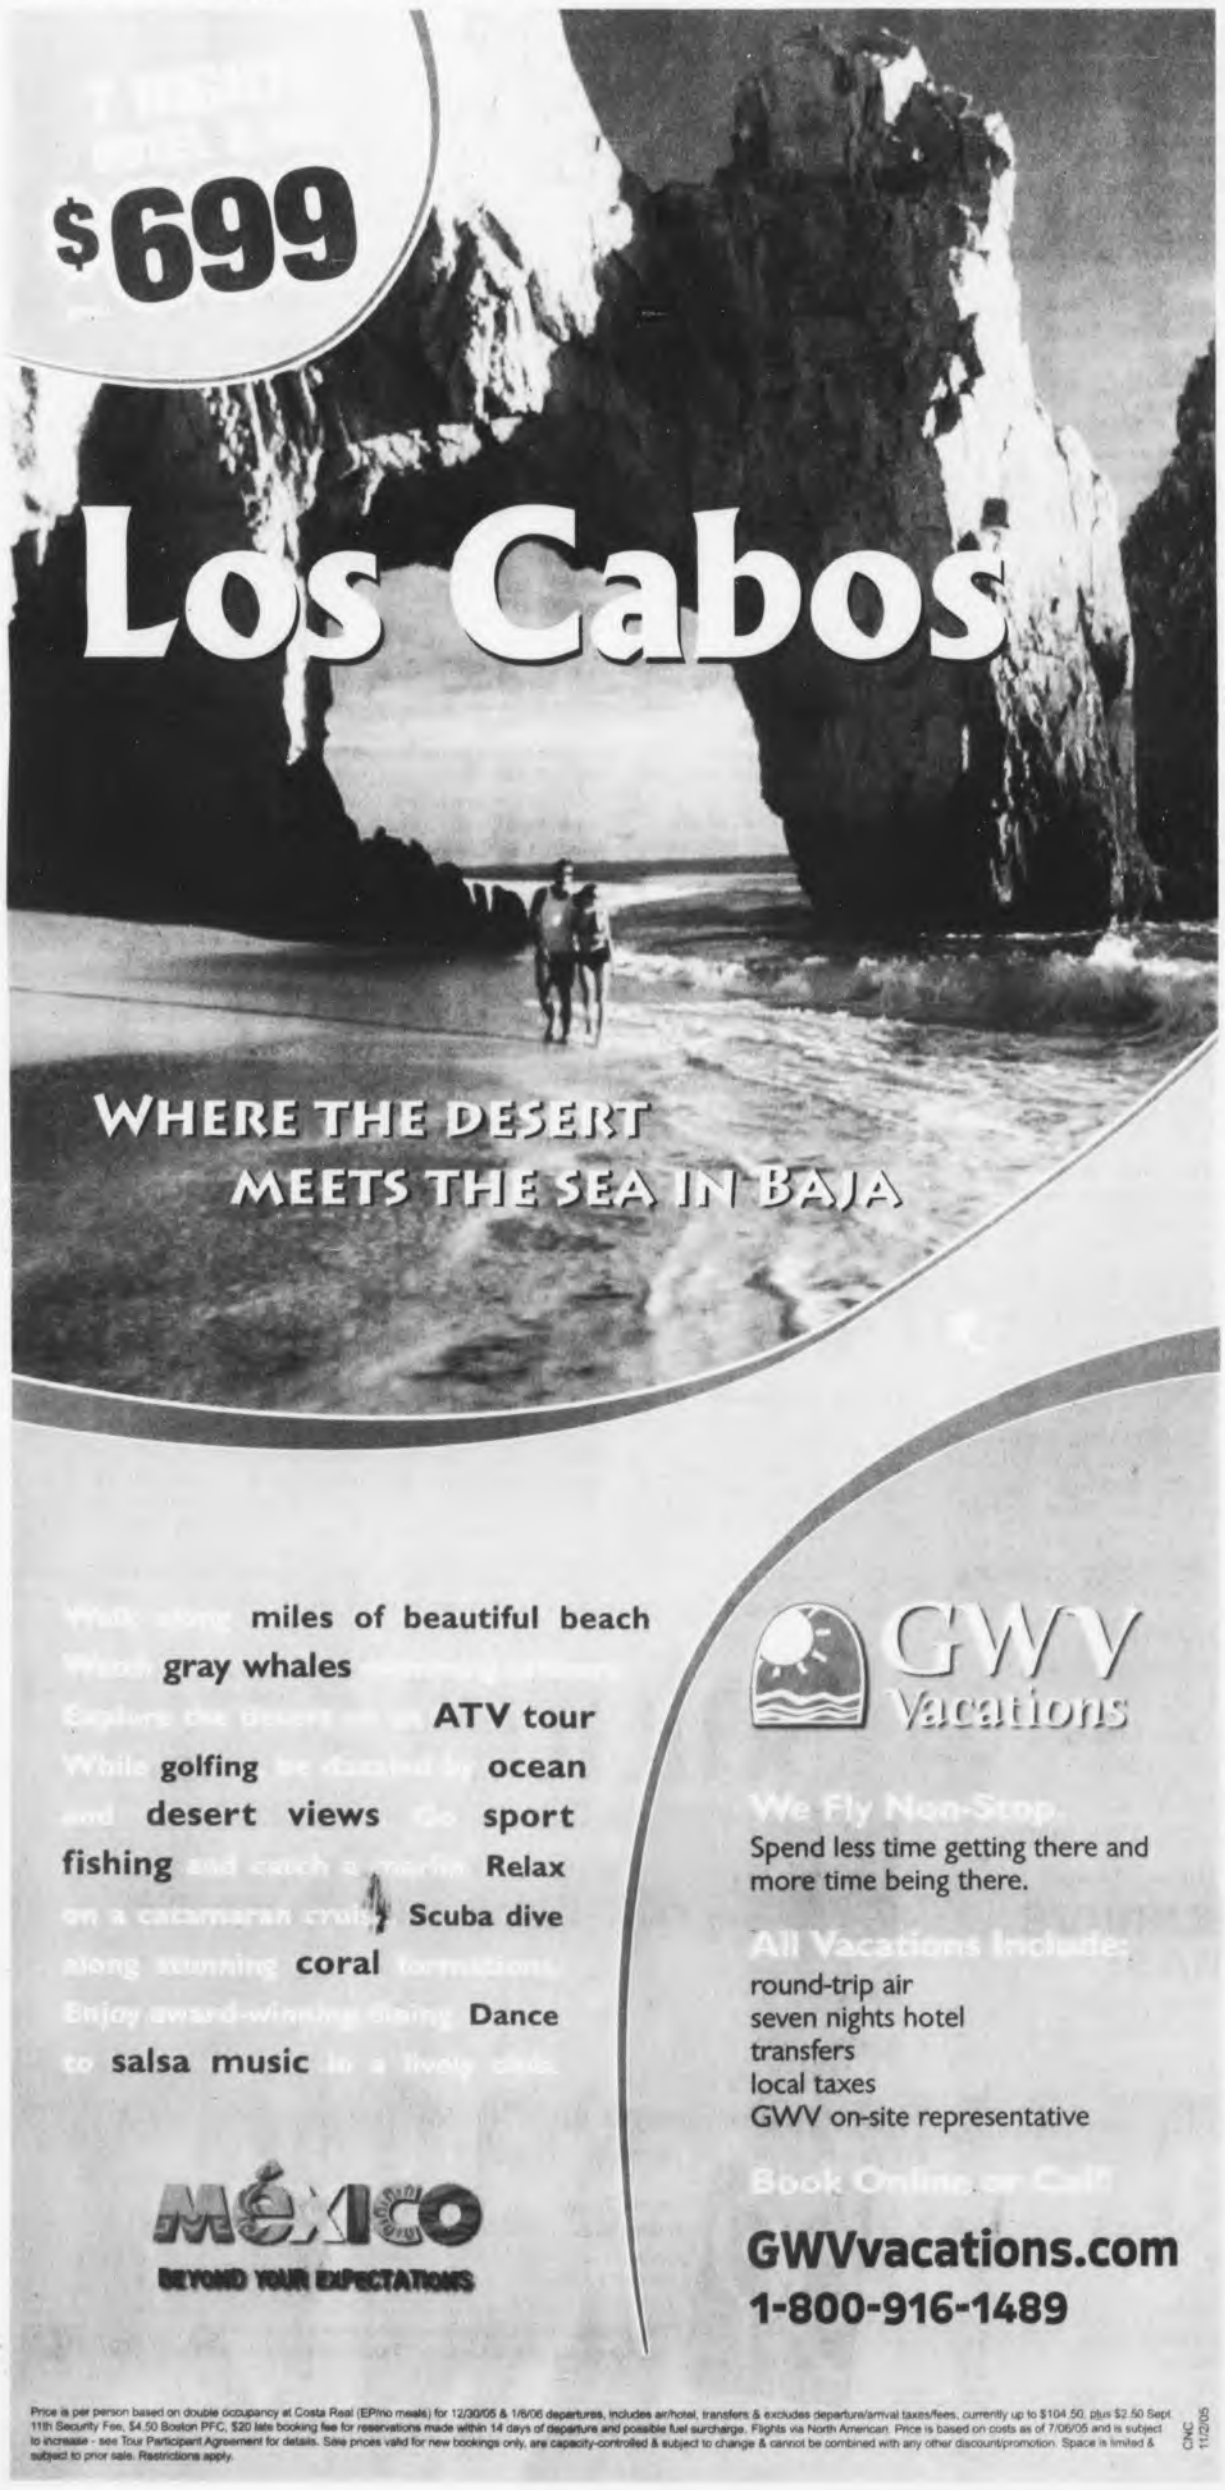
Stars of the hit TV series "Lost" aren't really lost at all, filming their scenes on the North Shore beaches of Oahu.

It's easy to convince yourself to spend all your time exploring Turtle Bay's beaches, swimming pool, restaurants, golf courses, spa facilities, walking trails, horseback riding trails and more, but the surrounding landscape is so beautiful with its lush valley gulches, fields of pineapple, coffee groves, expansive beaches and fortress-like Waianae mountain range it would be a shame to miss it all.

The North Shore's "biggest little town," Haleiwa, was first established by Protestant missionaries, Reverend John Emerson and wife Ursula Sophia, at Waialua Bay in 1832. The Emerson's Queen Liliuokalani Church still stands, as does the structure of their original adobe home, located across from Matsumoto's Shave Ice. While not exactly a "Lost" storyline, Queen Liliuokalani, who had her choice of locations on Oahu, chose Haleiwa as her special place for bathing and retreats from the Royal Palace. In 1984, Haleiwa was designated a state historic, cultural and scenic district. The town beckons travelers not only with history but also unique shops, white sand beaches, surf, ocean sports and a variety of eateries.

Waimea Bay Beach Park, an idyllic bay beach, heralds the start of the most famous stretch of the North Shore, extending to the peninsula at Turtle Bay Resort. This is one of the finest stretches of white sand beach: Sunset Beach, Banzai Pipeline, Ehukai and Three Tables are just a few of the legendary spots. In the winter, waves of 30 feet or more break offshore. And from December to April, humpback whales can be spotted from each Turtle Bay Resort guestroom lanai as they make their annual migration from the north.

Minutes away from the Turtle Bay Resort is the historic sugar plantation town of Kahuku. For eight decades, sugar was the livelihood for the Portuguese, Japanese and Filipino immigrants who came to Oahu to work the plantation. Kahuku is also home to the 42-acre Polynesian Cultural Center (www.polynesia.com), which has an IMAX theater and three restaurants as well as recreations of village life.



Nearby, the Kualoa Ranch (www.kualoa.com) is a 4,000-acre working ranch offering a variety of outdoor activities including horseback riding, hiking, mountain biking and trolley rides. In what sounds like a "Lost" plot, this was once considered one of the most sacred places on Oahu. A boat also takes visitors from here across an 800-year-old ancient Hawaiian fish pond to Secret Island, where they enjoy snorkeling or windsurfing.

The Waimea Valley Audubon Center (www.audubon.org) is another popular destination for North Shore visitors and locals alike. Strolling the 1,800-acre historic nature park surrounded by rare and endangered Hawaiian flora and fauna is a tranquil experience.

It's a great place to get lost.

For reservations at Turtle Bay, go to www.turtlebayresort.com, or call 808-293-6000. A current On a Whim special offers ocean-view rooms starting at $199 per night with a free upgrade, if available.

Senior centers bracing for the boom

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

South Shore senior centers may find themselves bursting at the seams in the not too distant future.

As community focal points for many older citizens, local senior centers are preparing for an anticipated surge of baby boomers reaching their "golden years."

"Baby boomer seniors will be highly educated and more demanding. They won't want to be put on a waiting list or be delayed. They will want services provided then and there."

— Kathy Bryanton, Cohasset's director of elder affairs

That poses challenges beyond the sheer logistics of providing enough physical space.

"Baby boomer seniors will be highly educated and more demanding," said Kathy Bryanton, Cohasset's director of elder affairs. "They won't want to be put on a waiting list or be delayed. They will want services provided then and there."

These seniors will also be more mobile, able to travel more, and may have two houses – one in the north and another in the south, she predicts.

Currently, 25 percent of Cohasset's 7,300 residents are over age 60. By comparison, 20 percent of Hingham's 20,000 residents are 60-plus. One third of the Cohasset elders are over age 75.

There's no place like home for seniors

Council on Elder Affairs helps make it possible

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A good deal of focus has recently been put on building senior housing communities on the South Shore. While there seems to be a shift away from seniors staying in the family home during their "golden years," many still opt to stay where they are, and local elder affairs offices are helping make it possible.

In Cohasset, Director of the Council on Elder Affairs Kathy Bryanton said there are many programs in place to ensure seniors are able to comfortably stay in their family homes, even as they reach an age where some assistance becomes necessary. Through the help of outreach coordinator Carol Barrett, the CEA addresses all levels of need, from those seniors who are still able to drive, to those who either cannot drive or prefer not to, to those who are not able to leave the house.

"We want people to be safe and cared for in their homes," said Barrett.

Barrett said she is constantly being asked for support from seniors who wish to stay in their own homes, but cannot do it alone. Often, people have lost a loved one and now live in the family home by themselves, and sometimes family members live at a distance. In other cases, there is no immediate family left.

Although there is always the option to hire outside help, Barrett said in Cohasset, many seniors are "house rich and cash poor," which means they do not have adequate income to pay for help, and the price tag on their family home precludes them from being able to receive assistance.

"Many seniors don't qualify for state home care, but they're very frail," she said, and require aide. The CEA strives to provide as many services as they can for seniors, and many are offered at no charge.

For every day the CEA is open, either Barrett or a volunteer will make a check-in call to seniors on the telephone reassurance list. Those who participate can look forward to hearing a friendly voice on the other line each day, making sure they have everything they need.

Although there is always the option to hire outside help, Barrett said in Cohasset, many seniors are "house rich and cash poor," which means they do not have adequate income to pay for help.

In addition, the CEA also participates in a program called "Are you OK?" which is affiliated with the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department. From 6 a.m. to noon, 365 days a year, an automated calling service will ring the homes of those who participate. If there is no answer the first time, the computer will notify the person on duty, and that person will make a call to the home. If there is still no answer, the emergency contact for the elderly person will be called, and if they cannot be reached, a call will be made to the Cohasset police who will make a "friendly visit" to the home to check on the elderly person.

A golden quilt

Tapestry chronicles 50 years of marriage

By Cathy Conley
CCONLEY@CNC.COM

In the dawn's early light, at the end of the long corridor that leads from the backdoor of the Quincy YMCA to the reception desk is a spot of sunshine.

Ellie and Bill Donovan.

They man the control desk in the early morning hours. Ellie's been a fixture for 25 years. Bill has been a volunteer by her side for the past 11.

Ellie and Bill get up at 2 a.m. at their home in Houghes Neck, Quincy.

They are at the Y at 4.

They immediately start on their rounds, snapping on the lights , turning on the steam in the sauna, putting down the treadmills and checking the heat.

As soon as they begin their routine, "the early morning crowd," as Ellie calls them, some of whom have been sitting in their cars, start to trickle in to the large foyer inside the front door.

By 5 a.m. as many as 25 people have arrived, doctors, lawyers, nurses, teachers, people of every profession and age.

They spend the first hour of their morning "solving the world's problems," as Bill says, while the couple readies the huge building for the hundreds of members who will pass through the turnstile that day.

"They have such a friendship together. One man in the early morning crowd said to me, 'we enjoy each other. You could never leave the Y unhappy with this bunch,'" Ellie said.

At 5 a.m. exactly, Bill booms down the hall "Ladies, first!" And the early morning crowd files through the turnstile, Y card in hand, and disappear through the building, most to stretch their muscles in the steel jungle of machines in the Nautilus room.

By 5:30, the swimmers arrive, anxious to queue up in front of the door that leads to the two Olympic-sized pools.

Bill and Ellie welcome each person by name as they pass through the turnstile, Ellie with a warm greeting, Bill with a quip.

One morning a few weeks ago, members were greeted with a Rockwellian scene.

In front of Bill and Ellie, a beautiful quilt was spread neatly out on the counter.

On it was a tapestry of Bill and Ellie's 50 years together, five photos dating back to their wedding a half century ago and a poem about their life together, each meticulously bordered in white rickrack and displayed on golden fabric.

Their daughter Tracy had made the quilt in honor of her parents' 50th anniversary.

A surprise party was planned in Palm Springs, California where Bill and Ellie's son Tommy lives.

Every family member was there, their three children Michael, Tommy and Tracy, and their mates, their seven grandchildren and their two great grandchildren.

"The family got there a few days before the party. We kept showing up at places where they were, first at breakfast and later at a flea market. They had to sneak out so we wouldn't see them," Ellie said.

Thinking they were just going out to supper, Bill and Ellie were flabbergasted when a door in the restaurant was opened to a private room and their family squealed with delight.

No presents were allowed, just two gifts, a montage of their life together and the golden quilt.

"I was amazed," said Ellie.

"I thought it was a shower curtain," Bill said.

Making the quilt was quite an undertaking.

"I had to sneak out the pictures from the house without Mom and Dad seeing me and then after I put them on the computer, then I had to put the pictures back exactly where they were so they wouldn't suspect anything," Tracy said.

"I put the photos on the computer, printed them and transferred them onto the fabric.

"I found the perfect gold fabric with gold leaves for the quilt," she said.

'I was really excited. I knew they would love it," she said.

Bill and Ellie met at Louie's, a bar in Quincy where teenagers in the area hung out and danced to the music of a three-piece band named Joe Glory. "They let us in because they knew we weren't going to drink," Ellie said.

"Everybody knew everybody," Ellie said.

Ellie lived in Houghes Neck. Bill was in the Navy during the Korean War. When he was on leave, he would sometimes stay in a room at the old Y in Quincy Center. Servicemen could get a room for 50 cents a night.

Bill and Ellie eventually started dating. They were going to get married at Our Lady of Good Council Church, which was Ellie's parish, but the church was damaged by fire.

"Holy smoke," Bill said.

On Sept. 24, 1955, they were married at Blessed Sacrament Church. A reception followed at the Fox and Hounds. "It's still around. My friend gave us a certificate to the Fox and Hounds as a 50th wedding present," Ellie said.

Twenty five years ago, a friend asked Ellie to substitute for her at the control desk at the Y. She has been there ever since.

Bill was uneasy that she was alone in the building in the early morning hours. Retired from his job as an electrician, 11 years ago, he began accompanying Ellie as a volunteer.

Bill is a favorite of the children who pass his post as they arrive at the day care center behind the reception desk.

"Hi guy. Give me a high five," he says to them all.

'They call him the high five man," Ellie said.

Bill asks if he can go out to play with them as they file out to the playground.

"No. Maybe tomorrow," is their answer, Ellie said.

Ellie works out on the Nautilus machines.

But Bill doesn't put much faith in exercise.

"I don't like that healthy stuff. It will kill you," he quipped.

"I'm going to work as long as I can. I really enjoy it. I love meeting the people and talking to them," Ellie said.

But what about those cold winter mornings. Does Ellie have an automatic starter to warm up the car?

"Sure. It's Bill!" she said.

Lonely seniors have a friend in Marshfield

Volunteers pay regular visits as part of Marshfield COA program

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

Elders can depend on their friends in Marshfield to help brighten up their days.

What can seem like long and lonely hours at home can be turned around with some good company or a chat on the telephone with the town's "Friendly Visitor" program sponsored by the Marshfield Council on Aging.

Weekly visits from volunteers in town have made all the difference in some seniors' lives as they look forward to sharing time together with a compatible individual.

"There's a need for elders who are alone," said Shirley Jacobs, a Marshfield Senior Center volunteer who has been running the program for five years now. "This shows them that someone cares, that someone thinks of them."

But what can range from playing a game of cards to taking a scenic drive around town, all seems to have the same effect of happiness to those involved.

"We do many things together," said 75-year-old Evalynn Napolitan about dining at local restaurants and going to doctor's appointments with her friendly volunteer, Lisa Feinberg.

Napolitan, who lives at home with her cat Muffin, said she has become good friends with Feinberg during the time they have spent together since January.

"Personally I feel very comfortable with her," she said. "If I needed to confide in someone, I confide in Lisa."

And the same goes for those who commit one hour each week to take part in the program.

Maryellen Lindberg, a Marsh-field resident who has been a friendly visitor for many years now, said volunteering her time to the program was an easy decision for her.

"I found time on my hands," she said. "And this got me thinking that this is a volunteer experience that I haven't gotten in to personally."

Now Lindberg's time is spent with Rosalyn Novinsky, 63, a disabled elder living on her own, but has plenty of energy to share.

For Novinsky, Mondays are a time to enjoy the simple things like watching movies, engaging in a good conversation and learning to paint with Lindberg.

Although Novinsky has her own personal care assistants to help with her everyday medical needs, she knows her friendly visitor will be there to lend a hand in other ways.

"There isn't much family left," she said about her living situation in town.

But with the Friendly Visitor program, Jacobs said the volunteers fill that void.

"We are very fortunate to have volunteers in the community that are caring and giving people," she said about the 60 volunteers who currently spend their time with the program and have put in more than 5,000 hours. "We like to make (the senior's) days a little more pleasant."

Lorraine Quinn, whose 91-year-old father Joseph is a recipient of a visitor, agrees and is appreciative of the support from the town's COA.

"For someone concerned or worried, they put you right at ease," she said.

But there is always a desire for more help and a continuing outreach for seniors living alone, according to Jacobs and COA President Carol Hamilton.

For more information or to sign up for the "Friendly Visitor" program, contact Shirley Jacobs at the Marshfield Council on Aging at 230 Webster St. at (781) 834-5581.

Working pays off for seniors

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

Taxes are always going up, and they often seem to be on a steady incline.

Social Security checks and payments from pensions, on the other hand, not so much.

Many residents who live on the South Shore, and who are retired, are facing a difficult dilemma: although the property value of their homes is going up almost as the months go by, so too are their municipal tax bills.

In an attempt to lessen some of the burden seniors are facing in towns such as Norwell, Marshfield, Weymouth and Hanover, municipalities including these towns have instituted senior work programs, where seniors can earn a discount of up to $750 off their annual property tax bill, by completing work for the town.

"It's a good program," said Rosemary O'Connor, the Director of the Council on Aging in Norwell. "We're in our sixth year for it and it still works."

Since 2001, more than 100 Norwell residents over the age of 60, have volunteered their services to complete work projects for the town, while simultaneously earning a substantial deduction on their property tax bills.

Based on minimum wage, seniors can volunteer for up to 110 hours, at $6.75 per hour, for the $750 discount.

In Fiscal Year '06, O'Connor said 38 Norwell seniors took part in the program, working for town departments such as water, building and accounting, as well as the Norwell Public Schools, the library and the conservation commission.

The tasks the seniors complete can be very different, O'Connor added, and can range from office work at town hall which may including filing or paper shredding, to more lively efforts such as examining maps for the water department or calling out BINGO squares during the COA's game night.

In Norwell, those eligible to participate in the program must be at least 60 years of age as of July 1, and a homeowner of record in the town for at least five years.

Other requirements dictate that only one participant per household can take part in the program in a given year, and the tasks completed by volunteers can not duplicate or replace any work being done by existing Norwell employees or volunteers.

As far as the seniors, and the town employees are concerned, O'Connor said feedback about the program has been excellent.

In fact, the only problem O'Connor said the only problem she's come across relating to the program is finding enough work for all the seniors who want to take part, to do.

More than 50 seniors expressed interest in the program this year, O'Connor said, but there were only 38 positions for them to work.

Stroll the mall for Meals on Wheels

Join more than 300 walkers of all ages and raise money for South Shore Elder Services' Meals on Wheels program at the "Stroll the Mall for Meals on Wheels" event at the South Shore Plaza on Sunday, Nov. 6. The Braintree-based South Shore Elder Services is a private, non-profit agency that provides seniors and caregivers in the South Shore area with valuable resources and services.

Bring your friends, family and neighbors to walk at this fun event for kids and adults while raising money for a good cause. All pledge money raised supports South Shore Elder Services' Meals on Wheels program, which provides hot noontime meals to more than 1,300 homebound elders every day across the South Shore.

"Stroll the Mall for Meals on Wheels" is a 5K walk-a-thon that will be held at the South Shore Plaza, located at 250 Granite St. in Braintree on Nov. 6. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m., and folks will stroll from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

This event is sponsored by South Shore Plaza, Quirk Auto Dealers, Randolph Savings Bank, The Patriot Ledger, Eastern Benefits Group, Bateman, South Shore Savings Bank, Sir Speedy and Senior Resource Center.

Since 1977, South Shore Elder Services, Inc. has been providing South Shore seniors and caregivers with the resources and services that promote and maintain optimal levels of elder independence.

As one of 27 Aging Services Access Points in Massachusetts, South Shore Elder Services coordinates and provide a wide range of services to elders and caregivers throughout Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth. The agency's mission is to promote and maintain an optimal level of elder independence through the coordination of resources, advocacy and caregiver support.

Seniors find different ways to stay active

By Max Bowen
MBOWEN@CNC.COM

If you ask a person what they consider senior activities to be, they'll likely suggest bingo, quilting, maybe a cribbage tournament.

Guess again.

In Plymouth, the senior citizens line dance the morning away with Howard Sherman, who at 90 years, still has all the right moves. For the last 16 years, he has been showing the elderly of America's Hometown how to waltz, tango and rumba with the best of them.

"The rhythm is what we want," said Sherman, who worked as a square dance caller for 14 years. "If I find a rhythm I like we'll dance to it."

There are around 30 dancers, although each class usually sees between 12 and 14 members. None are younger than 80, and all have a surprising spring in their step.

"I'm supposed to be here for the exercise. But I'm really here for the sociability."
Dorothy Lynch of Norwell

"It's a great feeling when you come here and see your friends," said Hazel Rigby of Plymouth. "We couldn't do it if Howard wasn't here."

Ironically, Sherman came to the town's senior center merely looking for a place where he and his wife could practice their waltzes for their 50th wedding anniversary. After seeing them in action, Sherman was asked to stay and teach the senior's how to strut their stuff. He also teaches line dancing in Middleboro.

"The whole purpose is to get them up and moving, and not to lose ground," said Sherman.

Line dancing is a solo art, and covers a wide range of ballroom steps. Before the dancing begins, the class spends a few minutes stretching and running in place to warm themselves up. Sherman sets the pace for the rest of the class, who follow him with incredible ease. He goes over each step once or twice, and uses hand and vocal signals to cue them. "Ruby, Ruby," "That's the Way We Want It" and "Mambo #5" play over the speaker.

"It's a nice group," said Mildred Dear, who has been coming to the class for 10 years. "We enjoy supporting our director."

In Norwell, the exercise class for seniors doubles as a social circle, where the elders discuss the best places to shop, where they took their vacations, and their plans for the weekend. Chris Kazlovsky, the director of the class, said most of the 12-15 participants have been in the class for the last 10 years. The exercises concentrate on mobility and flexibility.

"It's basically a social hour," said Kazlovsky. "They get to chit-chat and have a lot of fun."

The class begins with a short walk around the room, then moves on to a series of stretching exercises for the arms and neck. Kazlovsky also incorporates aerobic and weight training into the class, although she designs it with the physical limitations of the seniors in mind.

"I'm supposed to be here for the exercise," said Dorothy Lynch of Norwell. "But I'm really here for the sociability."

While they exercise, the class discusses the deals in the Trader Joe's flyers, a cruise one of the seniors is going on with her family, and the status of Kazlovsky's pet pig. The jokes never stop, and it is hard not to feel relaxed by the atmosphere in the room.

"I come here for the sociability, the health, the fun of the whole thing," said Jean Merrifield, a five-year veteran of the class. "We have a great time."

Social senior activities can be found in Scituate as well, where the Garden Club talks animatedly about the best clothing deals in town while they make floral arrangements of mums and anemones in Jack-o-Lantern tins. According to Anne Ryan, who runs the class with Carol MacNiell, Scituate's Garden Club has been around for 50 years, and meets four times a year; in October, December, Valentine's Day and April. Each time the garden club members, which usually number 16, make a floral arrangement using seasonal tins purchased at the Christmas Tree Shop.

"We don't really know what we'll do until the time comes and we put our heads together," said Ryan.

Those who wish to come to the quarterly meetings need to sign up ahead of time, and must contribute to the community by volunteering with the schools or senior center, for example. The club owns and maintains a wildflower garden on Greenfield Land and holds a wildflower sale on the first Saturday in June.

"I'm not really gifted artistically," said Estelle Adler, who has been coming to the club's meetings for 10 years. "Coming here helps me to learn to do things with my hands."

Seniors differ about quality of old, new movies

By Robert Aicardi
BAICARDI@CNC.COM

Barbara Dowd of Weymouth and Shaffie Douglas of Braintree are seniors who share a love of movies, but they disagree about the quality of what Hollywood has to offer today as opposed to the past.

Dowd is not among those who believe that the old movies were better.

"With the exception of Alfred Hitchcock thrillers, I think that most of the old movies were pretty run of the mill," she said. "I think that the new movies have improved enormously."

To Dowd, "Fried Green Tomatoes," starring Academy Award winners Kathy Bates and Jessica Tandy, was an example of an "exceptionally good" film.

"When it was over, the audience applauded," she said.

More recently, the Japanese version of "Shall We Dance?," which went on to inspire an Americanized version with Richard Gere and Susan Sarandon, was "extraordinarily good," according to Dowd.

Dowd has passed on her love of films to her eight grandchildren.

"They also love going to the movies," she said.

Douglas has a different perspective than Dowd.

"They don't make them like they used to," said Douglas, who tries to see at least one film a week. "I like movies where I come out feeling good about everything."

Although she liked "Star Wars" and "Fever Pitch," Douglas feels that "the movies today are made more for young people."

Douglas was disappointed in "Meet the Fockers," one of the biggest hits of last year.

"I was surprised that Dustin Hoffman and Barbra Streisand agreed to be in it," she said. "As for Robert DeNiro, I think that he lowered himself with that movie."

On the other hand, Douglas raved about "The Thing About My Folks," written by and starring Paul Reiser and featuring Peter Falk.

"That's one of the funniest movies I've ever seen," said Douglas, who thought that it was even better than "My Big Fat Greek Wedding."

Through the Braintree Council on Aging, Douglas got a ticket to see "The Thing About My Folks" at the Randolph Cinemas.

"I'd go see it again," she said. "It's for all ages. It's hysterical."

* * * *

Here is a list of 10 memorable senior film characters, in no particular order:

Katharine Hepburn in "On Golden Pond' (1981)—Hepburn won her record fourth Best Actress Oscar (beating out the likes of Meryl Streep and Diane Keaton) for her performance as Henry Fonda's devoted wife ("You're my knight in shining armor, and don't you forget it") in Ernest Thompson's adaptation of his play. (Interestingly, not only had Hepburn never worked with Fonda before director Mark Rydell brought them together, they had never even met before.)

Henry Fonda in "On Golden Pond" (1981)— Fonda finally won a Best Actor Oscar for his feisty portrayal of a cranky retired professor who reconciles with his daughter (played, inevitably, by Jane Fonda) during a sentimental summer in Maine. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences inexplicably overlooked Fonda for much better and more complex work in classics like "The Grapes of Wrath" and "12 Angry Men," but clearly set out to make amends by saluting Fonda in what turned out to be his final film.

STAFF PHOTOS/TOM GORMAN

Movie buff Shaffie Douglas puts a video in the VCR.

Burt Lancaster in "Atlantic City" (1981)—Were it not for "the Fonda factor," Lancaster almost certainly would have won his second Best Actor Oscar (the first was for "Elmer Gantry") for perhaps the finest and subtlest performance of his career. As an aging, two-bit gangster under Louis Malle's superb direction, Lancaster inspired the acerbic critic Pauline Kael to write, "If this were a stage performance, Lancaster would get a standing ovation. I don't see how he could be any better."

Burt Lancaster in "Local Hero" (1983)—Director Bill Forsyth said that he had Lancaster in mind when he wrote the script of this delightfully quirky comedy about an eccentric Texas oil tycoon with a passion for astronomy who sends one of his employees (Peter Riegert) to acquire a Scottish village needed for a refinery site. The wonderful twist in what sounds like a formula premise that the villagers are more than happy to sell their land for the right price, and the story ends on a memorably bittersweet note.

Art Carney in "Harry and Tonto" (1974)—"Ed Norton Beats Michael Corleone" was the newspaper headline when Jackie Gleason's beloved co-star won the Best Actor Oscar over the favored Al Pacino in "The Godfather Part II," not to mention Jack Nicholson in "Chinatown." If you haven't seen one of director Paul Mazursky's best films, you may not know that Tonto is the name of a cat who accompanies Harry (Carney) on a cross country trip which includes a visit to his son, played by a post-"I Dream of Jeannie" and pre-"Dallas" Larry Hagman.

Art Carney in 'The Late Show" (1977)—Three years later, oddly enough, Carney was ignored at Oscar time for arguably an even better performance as a retired private eye who reluctantly teams up with a free spirit (Lily Tomlin at her best) to solve an incredibly complicated mystery with echoes of Raymond Chandler. Robert Altman produced this gem, written and directed by Robert Benton (whose next film was "Kramer vs. Kramer"). It's a shame that a rumored sequel to be called (of course) "The Late, Late Show," never materialized.

Burgess Meredith in "Rocky" (1976)—With a resume ranging from performing Shakespeare with Orson Welles to perhaps the most famous and heartbreaking "Twilight Zone" episode of them all to his recurring role as The Penguin on "Batman," Meredith introduced himself to a new generation as Sylvester Stallone's manager in this Oscar-winning story of a club fighter who somehow manages to go the distance with the heavyweight champ. Meredith was so good here that Stallone couldn't resist bringing him back for a cameo in "Rocky V" even though his character had been killed off two sequels earlier.

George Burns in 'The Sunshine Boys' (1975)—Making his first film appearance since 1939, Burns won the Best Supporting Actor Oscar as the more sensible half of a legendary vaudeville comedy team asked to reunite for a TV special. The squabbling between Burns and his irascible partner (Walter Matthau), as written by Neil Simon and directed by Herbert Ross, is not quite as funny or poignant as you would expect, but Burns shows his virtuoso timing in a role he inherited following the death of his best friend, Jack Benny.

John Gielgud in "Arthur" (1981)—To some, he will always be remembered as the definitive Hamlet of the century, but let's face it. To many more, Sir John is best known for his hilarious appearance as Dudley Moore's acid tongued butler, described at one point by Liza Minnelli's character as "the British Tonto." It's impossible not to be moved when Hobson (Gielgud) reveals his affection for his employer on his deathbed by saying, "Arthur, you're a good son."

Jack Nicholson in "About Schmidt" (2003)—His trademark may be his "killer smile," but Nicholson plays against type magnificently in this painfully funny story of a just retired man whose wife dies and who decides to visit his daughter and talk her out of getting married. As Warren Schmidt, who has difficulty expressing his emotions, Nicholson earned yet another Academy Award nomination by proving that he can mesmerize an audience without using his legendary eyebrows, not even when he shares a hot tub with scene-stealing Kathy Bates, another Oscar nominee.

New bill would ease seniors' tax burden

By Helen Woodman
STATE HOUSE NEWS SERVICE

With senior citizens increasingly leaving their homes because they can't afford to pay their property taxes, legislators moved a package of relief proposals out of one committee and into another last Tuesday (Oct. 25).

Lawmakers expressed hope that they can make the issue a priority in coming weeks.

Similar legislation cleared both branches last year but was vetoed by Gov. Mitt Romney after lawmakers added a provision that exempted seniors from the effects of Proposition 21/2 overrides. Protectors of that 1980 voter initiative that limits local property tax increases charged that the addition was aimed at keeping older people away from the polls when override votes were scheduled.

"The 2 1/2 issue last year was a deal breaker," said Sen. Michael Knapik, R-Westfield. "I hope this will stay a clean bill. There are a lot of other ways to deal with Prop. 2 1/2."

The bill would allow homeowners and renters over age 65 to apply for a refundable credit against their personal income tax if 8 percent, rather than the current 10 percent, of their income is consumed by real estate taxes or rent coupled with water and sewer bills.

The bill would also increase from $400,000 to $750,000 the maximum home value at which an older homeowner can apply for a so-called "circuit breaker" income tax credit. That threshold would be adjusted in the future based on the Price of Housing Index rather than the Consumer Price Index and the circuit breaker itself would be renamed the "Senior Property Tax Relief Program."

The legislation also gives cities and towns the option of granting residents over age 70 a property tax exemption equal to 10 percent of their homes' assessed valuation. Other provisions increase from $750 to $1,000 the amount of minimum wage work a senior can perform for their town in order to lower their tax bill, reform the property tax deferral program, expand the exemption for elderly blind persons, and provide greater flexibility for paying delinquent taxes.

The omnibus bill was released last Tuesday by the committees on Revenue and Elder Affairs sitting jointly. Revenue Committee co-chairs Sen. Cynthia Creem, D-Newton, and Rep. John Binienda, D-Worcester, were joined at the session by Elder Affairs Committee chairwoman Sen. Susan Tucker, D-Andover.

"Senior on fixed incomes are struggling with property tax increases," said Tucker, and the legislation "make huge sense." Tucker said she was especially pleased at the move to create an awareness program to inform older residents of the changes. "So many seniors don't know about the circuit breaker and that they're eligible for it."

"Keep the heat on," Creem advised grateful senior advocates intent on spurning action. The bill goes first to the House Ways and Means Committee, she explained, and then to the House floor for debate. The need for the legislation was evident before the executive session when the Revenue Committee took testimony on a variety of bills containing other suggestions for easing the tax burden on seniors.

Braintree Selectman Darrin McAuliffe, for instance, suggested that those over age 65 should get a discount on their tax bill if they pay it early.

Most bills have a Feb. 1 due date, McAuliffe told the committee. "My parents leave for Florida just before Christmas every year," he said. "Some people want to pay early but there's no incentive to pay early."

And Rep. Matthew Patrick, D-Falmouth, who said retirees make up 30 percent of his district, filed a bill that would freeze the assessed value of a home when person turns 65.

Senior Lifestyle

Senior centers bracing for the boom

"Our current seniors are not demanding. They are givers," noted Bryanton. "We have many senior volunteers who are willing to give to the community. Many grew up in this town and appreciate the life here. They are proud of their senior centers, because they are home-like."

Senior centers offer a variety of services, from information sharing, outreach, and transportation to meals, education, and trips. Often, information is also provided to children of older adults about what to expect as their parents age and the challenges families might face.

"They will be sandwiched between taking care of their own children and grandchildren and providing care for their parents," said Bryanton.

Not only will senior centers be affected as baby boomers move into their senior years; there will also be impacts on their communities.

"We're already talking about shortages in the work force in general," said Hingham Director of Elder Services Barbara Farnsworth. "Ways need to be found to train people who are ready to retire but who want to stay in the work force longer and perhaps make a career change."

For the less affluent baby boomers, this may not be voluntary. "Some people may need to stay in the workforce longer [after their official retirement] in order to pay their bills," Farnsworth said. "Considering longer life expectancies, the question will be, 'Have I/we saved enough?'"

Transportation and housing needs also must be addressed. "The more 55-plus communities that are built the better off we'll be," Bryanton said. "The impact on town services is low, and many living in condos travel, so there's less demand on water, electricity, and sewer systems. These communities also offer a safe and secure environment."

She continued, "We need to get back to the basics and take a look at the whole issue in terms of meeting the needs of the number of people who will be coming to our senior centers," Bryanton said. "We need more federal and state funding for services and transportation, and the government needs to be more astute" in light of the growing number of seniors statewide, she said. "Some older citizens are moving back from the Cape and other places to the Boston area to be closer to their families and medical centers. The population is aging and a vast number of older citizens will be coming our way."

"This generation will be much different from past generations. They will ask more questions and won't accept everything carte blanche. They will be better informed and may have higher expectations."
Hingham Director of Elder Services Barbara Farnsworth

Farnsworth doesn't claim to have all the answers as to how to accommodate and best serve baby boomer seniors, but she and others affiliated with Hingham's senior center are working on it.

"We're grappling with that now," she said. "This generation will be much different from past generations. They will ask more questions and won't accept everything carte blanche. They will be better informed and may have higher expectations."

Senior centers aren't the only ones adjusting to the influx of baby boomers. The legal field is changing along with the aging population as well, as evidenced by the growing number of elder law attorneys.

"Elder law is a holistic approach to the law," explained Hingham attorney Leanna Hamill. "It goes beyond estate planning with wills and trusts. It often involves facing an illness or planning for the possibility of needing assisted living or nursing home care and all the emotional issues that go along with those changes."

Elder law attorneys work with a network of professionals – financial planners, geriatric care managers, and assisted living or retirement communities – to make sure their clients' needs will be met as their lives continue to change.

The Braintree-based South Shore Elder Services, Inc., (SSES) provides services to older citizens and their caregivers in Braintree, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth. Its mission is to promote and maintain an optimal level of elder independence through the coordination of resources, advocacy, and caregiver support.

SSES provides information to senior citizens as well as the baby boomer generation, in part through conferences and focus groups held locally. A recent one, entitled "Aging is Everyone's Future," offered workshops about social security, asset preservation, and caring for aging parents.

"There is a huge influx coming up in the senior-age group," said SSES Director of Corporate Relations Diane Sargent. "We need to determine what their needs will be and how to meet them."

Providing information is key. "It's important to look into issues such as investing, financial planning, and long-term care insurance before seniors find themselves in a crisis situation," she said.

There's no place like home for seniors

The CEA also works closely with the fire and police departments through a program called "File for Life." Through the "File for Life" program, Barrett compiles a folder containing personal records of the senior. Their name, emergency contact, list of medications and healthcare proxy are just some of the important pieces of information contained. The file is stuck to the front of the refrigerator in a magnetic folder, where those responding to an emergency know to look for it.

Because of the file, "If there's a 911 call, everything goes," said Barrett.

Another important facet of the Cohasset CEA is its escort shopping service, which enables seniors to make trips to the grocery store. A certified van driver, who has been trained in all areas of van safety including how to help seniors to their seats and ensure they are safely buckled, picks up seniors at their home. Another escort, which is often Barrett, will also come along to help seniors during the trip. Everyone is driven home when the shopping is done.

Often the van drivers and/or the escort will help carry in the groceries, as some of the items, particularly gallons of milk or orange juice, or even jugs of laundry detergent, can be heavy and awkward to carry. Barrett said seniors often must purchase supplies for the entire week, as there may not be another opportunity to get out to the store. Escorts will also help seniors put away their groceries, and will often open jars that are hard to open — a difficult task for those who have arthritis.

But for those seniors who are no longer able to leave the house, the escort shopping program will go the extra mile to ensure their needs are met as well. The CEA will drive by the home of the senior and pick up a grocery list and a check, and will purchase the items for the senior and deliver them back home again.

Volunteers — especially van drivers — are the life-blood of many local elder affair offices. Bryanton said van drivers allow seniors to not only get to the grocery store, they provide a means of getting to doctor appointments, both in and around town. Cohasset is fortunate to have a strong elder affairs office in the neighboring town of Hingham, and the two share a van.
